Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Last week, my wife and I drove over to Grand Forks, the first time in over two months. We were surprised to see the price of gasoline when we got there. On the way home we stopped at a gas station in East Grand Forks, which also has the same brand station in Thief River Falls, and bought regular gas for $1.16.9 per gallon or 18 cents less per gallon than the $1.34.9 charged here. There was one station in Grand Forks where the price was $1.15.9 per gallon.

Surely the freight rate is not 18 cents per gallon between Grand Forks and Thief River Falls. I understand gas is also cheaper in Red Lake Falls but have not stopped to verify this. We keep reading about the oil glut on the market and that the price of gas should be coming down. I wonder why it doesn't in Thief River?

If tourism and Canadian traffic is down in Thief River (and I don't know if it is or not), could this be a part of the reason?

Sincerely,
Charles Josephson

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Peres

Q. Pastor Don, why should I go to church, or become a Christian; some of the worst hypocrites are in the church.

A. One major excuse that people use in their refusal to embrace Christianity concerns hypocrites in the church, both past and present. People like to point to past misdeeds done in the name of Christ.

Then, there are the present day examples of preachers, deacons, or church leaders who have been caught in alcoholism, adulterous relationships or some other inconsistency with what they say they believe. This type of behavior has led many to say, "If that's what Christianity is all about, then I don't want any part of it."

It must be admitted that there has been hypocrisy in the church, and today we are not exempt from people who are hypocritical. A hypocrite is an actor, one who puts on a false face. He says one things but does another.

However, just because the church contains hypocrites does not mean that all Christians are hypocrites. All believers, including the clergy, are fallible human beings who are prone to all types of sin. Just because a person is not perfect does not mean that he is a phony.

Jesus Christ had very harsh words for people who were committing the sin of hypocrisy, especially the religious leaders of his day. He denounced them in no uncertain terms.

In Matthew 23:13-33 Jesus describes the different kinds of hypocrites and what their end results will be if they don't repent and change their lifestyle to fit what they say they believe about Christ.

People can and do enter the ministry for the wrong reasons, or they can compromise the convictions of the faith. When people do this they are wrong, and the Bible denounces this clearly.

The non-believer cannot be excused from believing just because it is possible to point to those who simply pretend to be what they are not. Hypocritical Christians cannot be excused on the basis of not being perfect because of the terrible effects hypocrisy has.

Christianity stands or falls on the person of Jesus Christ, and Jesus was not a hypocrite. He lived consistantly with what He taught, and no one could point out any hypocrisy in Him.

People may claim Christianity is true, yet have lives inconsistent with their claim, but this does not necessarily mean Christianity is not true.

If you have any questions you would like to have answered from the Bible, please write Pastor Don Peres, Box 129, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

viewpoint on the negotiations. He said the board's offer made that evening had provided for an increase of $48,439 or 11.1 per cent for the first year of the two-year contract and an increase of $455,430 or 10.1 per cent for the second year.

The board indicated, Supt. Block wrote, that this increase would reduce the $929,766 fund balance to $550,983 by June 30, 1982, and to $172,200 by June 30, 1983. The new money received for K-12 operation in 1982-83 would be about $403,880. Thus, the remaining balance for 1982-83 would be $225,399.

"This would be all that's available to cover increased costs in utilities, supplies, non-certified salary increases, administrative salary increases and any other contingencies that come up," Supt. Block stated. "It would zero out the operating budget balance.

"This still would not include accounting for the drop in foundation aid, a projected $50,000 to $75,000 since the district has experienced a loss in total student units. It does not consider the loss of interest income which amounted to $160,000 this past year from the unappropriated balance. Undoubtedly, it would leave the board with a negative fund balance by the end of 1983."

The board's proposal for 1981-82 shows $4,212,425 for contract, extra curricular, summer school and lane change; $194,851 for benefits; and $66,915 for other including homebound, assistant principal, adult education, driver education, driver education supervisor, department head, summer school principal, curriculum development, title director, continuing education and mileage.

The 1982-83 proposal included $4,654,865 for contract, extra curricular, summer school and lane change; $204,351 for benefits, including health, life and disability insurance; and $70,405 for other expense.

Current contract is $3,796,825 for contract, extra curricular, summer school and lane change; $169,236 for benefits; and $59,691 for other expense.

The negotiating session began at 7 p.m. with several langauge items of the contract discussed. The board proposed payment of an assistant to the principal at the rate of $3,200 in 1981-82 and $3,500 for 1982-83 for administrative responsibilities; that the Title I director continue at the present salary of $3,505 in both years; and that the summer school principal received a flat fee of $3,500 for each of the next two years. The TRFEA believes pay should be on percentage of salary.

The board also proposed adding the school psychologist to the contract, giving an increase in the amount of hours for AVTI department heads of 50 hours in 1981-82 and 60 hours in 1982-83.

The board also requested putting into the salary schedule its language on a grievance procedure, language on placement on the salary schedule, and language concerning the working schedule.

Next negotiating session has been scheduled for September 21 at 7 p.m. in the school library — four days before the strike notice becomes effective.

Emergency Plan Will Be Tested In Mn. Schools

The Division of Emergency Services (DES) of the Minnesota Department of Public Safety (DPS) is participating in a pilot program which involves new planning for safety of school children in emergency situations.

DES was awarded a one year $72,000 grant from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to allow teachers to test federal emergency management instruction materials in classrooms. It will be administered by DES in close coordination with the Department of Education.

The basic goal of the program, is to teach children the hazards of disasters, specifically the type which occur in the midwest. Children would be taught protective measures increasing their chances of survival. Children will take materials received into their homes, increasing exposure to parents.

After initial testing of materials in classrooms, teachers will have an opportunity for further evaluation and possible changes in materials before a decision for wider distribution is made by FEMA. The 41 participating teachers will have follow-up meetings in January and May, 1982, to discuss experiences and feelings on the program and prospects for incorporating materials into school district emergency preparedness programs. A final report will be prepared by June 30, 1982.

Hockey Tournament Format

Format for the 1982 Section 8 high school hockey tournament was altered slightly Wednesday at a combined Region 8A-Region 8AA committee meeting held in Detroit Lakes.

Thief River Falls remains the site for the actual Section 8 tournament, with the doubleheader quarterfinal games being played in the sports arena Friday, February 26, and Saturday, February 27, followed by single semifinal games Monday, March 1, and Tuesday, March 2. The 1982 Section 8 tournament championship game will be played here Friday, March 5.

Once again the top four regular season finishers in the Section 8 standings based upon a points won-lost winning percentage, will be seeded directly into the Section 8 quarterfinals. Teams not seeded into the Secition 8 tournament will be split into two sub sections based on geographic locations.

All teams south of a line from Moorhead to Bemidji will be in the Black Sub Section 8 hockey tournament, including Moorhead, Detroit Lakes, Fergus Falls, Alexandria, Bemidji, Brainerd, Crosby-Ironton and Little Falls.

All teams north of that line will be in the Blue Sub Section 8 tournament, including East Grand Forks, Crookston, Red Lake Falls, Thief River Falls, Hallock, Roseau, Warroad, Indus and Lake of the Woods.

Sub section pairings will match the highest seed (higher regular season finisher in Section 8 play) vs. the lowest seed, etc. If there is an uneven number of teams in the sub section tournament, one or two schools could receive a first-round bye. Games will be played at the site of the higher seeded team if good ice is available. If ice is not available, the game will go to the opposing team's rink.

Top two teams in the Black and Blue Sub Section 8 tournaments will advance to the Section 8 quarterfinals, with the highest ranking qualifier becoming the tournament's No. 5 seeded team, etc.

Also approved Wednesday at the Region 8AA committee meeting was the proposed plan reported earlier that will find the North Half Region 8AA boys and girls basketball tournaments switching from a single-site location to playing at the site of the higher-seeded team. Based upon a coaches' seeding meeting, the No. 8 team will be at the No. 1 team, etc.

South Half Region 8AA boys' basketball tournament will retain its one-site format, with the South Half Region 8AA girls playing first round tournament games at the site of higher-seeded teams, but then playing semifinals and finals at one site.

Youth Hockey Coaches Meet

Persons who might have an interest in serving as a coach in the Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA) program this winter are encouraged to attend a special coaches meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Franklin middle school cafeteria.

The meeting will be conducted by Lincoln high school head hockey coach Wendell Grand and Northland community college hockey coach Tom Goddard, who are working through the TRFAHA this year with the idea of providing guidance and continuity in the coaching being offered to participants in the Thief River Falls youth hockey program.

It should be pointed out that persons attending the meeting will not be committed to TRFAHA coaching assignments. It's simply an opportunity for interested persons to receive information concerning what the TRFAHA would like its coaches to instruct the skaters at each age level and how it should be presented.

The meeting is designed for coaches at all TRFAHA levels — Tiny Mites, Squirts, Pee-Wees and Bantams.

HOCKEY MEETING
For Anyone Interested In Coaching . . .
YOUTH HOCKEY
In Thief River Falls
Wednesday, Sept. 16, 7 P.M.
Franklin School Cafeteria
Sponsored by Thief River Falls Amateur Hockey Association (TRFAHA)

A HARD PASS rush by Golden Valley Lutheran forced Northland community college quarterback Scott Wiebolt out of the pocket in the fourth quarter of Saturday's football game played in Thief River Falls. The Royals' Guy Bloomquist (88) and Ed Togel (58) chased Wiebolt, with Ken Demarais (63) of the Northmen trying to help out with a block. Northland battled heavily favored Golden Valley Lutheran on near-even terms for a full 60 minutes before losing the MJCAA Northern Division game 19-7.

Lakers Defeat Prowlers 13-8 With Strong Passing Attack

Forewarned, Thief River Falls nevertheless still fell victim to the pass Friday as the Detroit Lakes aerial combination of Dan Douglas and Todd Jorgensson burned the Prowlers in the Lakers' 13-8 high school football victory.

"We expect them to throw the ball a lot," warned Thief River Falls coach John Schmitz before the game, and he knew, too, that Douglas, a 160-pound senior quarterback with a soft passing touch, would be trying to go to Jorgenson, a tall, 171-pound senior split end who was a member of the 1981 Class AA Minnessta state track coaches association all-state track and field team for his 6-7 high hump effort, a height surpassed by just five other individuals in Minnesota last spring.

For the second straight week Thief River Falls' hard-hitting 4-4 defense held the opposition under 100 years rushing, but Detroit Lakes, 78 yards on the ground was compensated by a 182-yard passing performance by Douglas, who was 12-for-23, including one interception. And Jorgenson was his main target, catching six passes for 138 yards and one touchdown.

The figures didn't surprise Detroit Lakes head coach Dick Riedberger. "We haven't been able to run the ball as well as we would like to, so we work hard on our passing game in practice," he explained. "We have confidence in our passing attack. This is Dan's second year back there, and Todd caught 41 passes for us last year. We'll throw the ball 50 per cent of the time."

It was a near-carbon copy performance of a year ago for both Douglas and Jorgenson against the Prowlers. Douglas was 14-for-26 for 167 yards vs. Thief River Falls in their 1980 meeting, with Jorgenson catching eight passes for 109 yards. However, Thief River Falls won that one 32-21. This time it was the Lakers winning their third straight game on Thief River Falls soil, spoiling the Prowlers' 1981 home opener.

"They threw the ball well," acknowledged Schmitz. "The passing game hurt us both ways," he added, noting the Prowlers' 3-for-15 passing performance for 55 yards and two interceptions. And over half of those passing yards came on a 31-yard halfback option pass by Jeff Imgrund.

It was another frustrating night offensively for the Prowlers, who were shut out 29-0 by Grand Forks Red River in their opener when they netted just 41 total offensive yards. They got that figure up to 176 yards against the Lakers, but that's still not a good total for a high school football team.

"Breakdowns," said Schmitz when questioned about the continued offensive problems that stretched the Prowlers' scoreless string to seven quarters before they got on the board in the fourth quarter Friday. "We just can't keep it going."

Only scoring in the first half came late in the second quarter when Douglas hit Jorgenson on a crossing pattern at the Thief River Falls 10-yard line. The receiver juggled the ball momentarily, but held on then stepped into the end zone untouched to complete a 23-yard touchdown play with just 1:24 remaining. The extra point snap went through the hands of holder Jim Piche's hands, leaving the Lakers with a 6-0 lead. Before scoring, Jorgensson had caught a perfectly-thrown 35-yard pass from Douglas down the right sidelines to get the six-play, 84-yard scoring drive started at the Thief River Falls 41. Douglas also hit fullback Bruce Lansem with a nine-yard screen pass in the drive that did include the Lakers' longest runs of the game — an eight-yard burst around the right side by Piche and a seven-yard charge off left tackle by Landsem.

After waiting until late in the first half to score their first touchdown, the Lakers waited until the final play of the third quarter to up their margin to 13-0.

Thief River Falls was in trouble almost right from the very start of the second half as the Prowlers lost 15 yards on a holding penalty, lost 17 more when quarterback Brent Schmitz was sacked and then got off just a 14-yard punt to near mid-field. They never really recovered those yards. They did hold Detroit Lakes on downs, but Jorgenson then pinned the Prowlers back on their four-yard line with a punt.

Thief River Falls got a temporary relief when Imgrund's third down quick kick put the ball back out to the 36, but Detroit Lakes scored in nine plays. Douglas got the touchdown on a simple one-yard, straight-ahead quarterback sneak, but his passing set it up.

Twice Douglas converted fourth-and-eight situations into first downs on the winning touchdown drive, hitting Landsem with a screen pass that netted 17 yards to the 17-yard line and then throwing to another runningback — Ken Steinmetz — for a 14-yard gain to the one-yard line. He scored on the next play and Dennis Priem kicked the extra point.

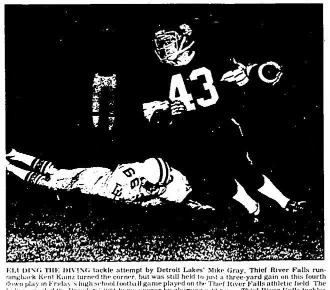
The next possession finally produced Thief River Falls' first points of the 1981 season, but it required a little trickery. Facing a fourth-and-eight themselves at their own 26, the Prowlers went with the fake punt and Imgrund dashed 22 yards down the right side for a first down at the Detroit Lakes 42. Two plays later Imgrund's halfback option pass went long downfield and was pulled in by wide receiver Ken Bakke at the Detroit Lakes four-yard line.

On fourth-and-goal from the one, Imgrund took Schmitz' quick pitch and sprinted around the right side for the touchdown. The same play worked for the two-point conversion and the Prowlers suddenly found themselves back in the ball game at 13-8 with 8:01 still to play.

And an interception of a Douglas pass by Keith Grochow gave the Prowlers added enthusiasm just moments later. However, that enthusiasm was stiffled when Jorgenson picked off another Imgrund pass with 3:59 on the clock.

Thanks to an unorthodox third down pass reception by Priem who trapped a deflected pass between his legs for the reception, Detroit Lakes picked up a key first down with 1:59 left and didn't give up the football until Jorgenson punted to the Thief River Falls 15 with only 1:10 to go.

Jorgenson, held to two pass receptions after intermission, matched that with his second interception of the half when he picked off Schmitz' desperation long pass on the final final play of the game.



ELUDING THE DIVING tackle attempt by Detroit Lakes' Mike Gray, Thief River Falls runningback Kent Kainz turned the corner, but was still held to just a three-yard gain on this fourth down play in Friday's high school football game played on the Thief River Falls athletic field. The Lakers spoiled the Prowlers' 1981 home opener by claiming a 13-8 win. Thief River Falls tackles Grand Rapids Friday.

Royals Get By Northmen 19-7

If there ever was a "moral victory," Northland community college got one Saturday when the underdog Northmen battled perennial power Golden Valley Lutheran on even term for a full 60 minutes before surrendering a 19-7 decision in season-opening Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) football on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

The outcome extended the defending Northern Division champion Royals' MJCAA regular season winning streak to 20 straight games and continued their six-year domination of the Northmen. However, this one wasn't at all like those earlier routs that included such scores as 62-0, 47-0 and 43-0 a year ago. This one was anybody's ball game almost to the very end.

"I'm very satisfied," smiled Northland head coach John Helley. "One break either way in the fourth quarter was going to decide the game; they got the break we needed."

The "break" was a 35-yard pass interception return to the Northland one-yard line by Golden Valley Lutheran linebacker David Aswegan early in the final period.

Northland, after falling behind 13-0 at the start, had narrowed the gap at 13-7 and definitely had the momentum when the Northmen took over possession after a Golden Valley Lutheran punt to the Northland 32 with 11:20 remaining.

Freshman quarterback Scott Wiebolt, whose scrambling and passing had sparked the Northmen, threw an incomplete pass on first down, then threw into the left flat on second down. That's where Aswegan stepped in front of the would-be receiver and went down the sidelines before being pushed out at the one. Two quarterback sneaks by Matt Wente notched the touchdown and iced the win with 10:16 to go.

Northland had three more possessions, but sandwiched a fumble and a pass interception around a punt over the final 8:56.

"A couple of bad breaks on pass patterns in the fourth quarter, otherwise we're right in the ball game," noted Helley.

Northland's strength was its aggressive defense, which limited Golden Valley Lutheran to a mere 78 yards on the ground. Only two Royals managed to gain more yards than they lost, with 225-pound sophomore fullback Tony Shanley bulling his way for 72 yards.

"We don't run the ball very well," admitted Golden Valley Lutheran coach Dave Skrien. "They (Northland) did a good job on defense; they definitely gave us problems, and we just didn't block. Our only good offensive lineman (Richard Linderholm) broke his leg in practice this week."

Northland out-gained Golden Valley Lutheran on the ground, netting 99 yards, and came close to matching the Royals in total offensive yards — 215 to 210.

A series of mistakes kept both teams on edge at the start, with Northland's Marty Semanko recovering a Golden Valley Lutheran fumble at the Northland 13; the Royals' Steve Page falling on a Northland fumble at the 11; and Thaddous Forman of the Northmen coming up with a fumble recovery at the one. Although finally able to hold onto the ball, the Northmen were forced to punt from out of their own end zone, with Dean Dokkin getting off a 27-yarder into a strong wind. Coupled with a 17-yard return by Wade Wilhite the Northmen got just 10 yards on the deal.

The Royals scored on a first down Wente roll-out pass to wide receiver Ken McCullum. A poor snap on the conversion kick left it 6-0 with 6:15 remaining in the first quarter.

Forcing another punt into the wind, Golden Valley Lutheran was immediately in Northland territory on its next possession, and scored in four plays. Wente passed 22 yards over the middle to McCullum for a first down at the 11, and Shanley barged his way through the middle for a first down at the one. Shanley went in standing up and Brad Draves added the conversion with a 13-0 game with 2:42 left.

"We gave them at short pass," admitted Helley about Northland's loose pass coverage. "We've got to work on our linebackers dropping back."

But that was the last the Golden Valley Lutheran of-

Sno-Ball Golf Tournament Is Won By Carlson

Marv Carlson edged Jay Moum with a birdie on the first extra playoff hole Sunday to win the annual Sno-Ball shortstop golf tournament at the Thief River Country Club.

Carlson and Moum finished deadlock at 105 over the regulation 27 holes, necessitating the playoff. Carlson just missed an Eagle, then dropped a two-foot putt for the victory. Moum parred the hole.

Mark Geatz finished third in the championship flight, followed by Jim Strandemo, Mahnomen; Dave Geatz, Thief River Falls; and Joe Bouvette, Grand Forks.

Names of the flight winners were not made available.

TRFAHA Registration, Skate Exchange Scheduled Thursday

Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TR-(FAHA) will hold its 1981-82 registration Thursday from 4 to 9 p.m. in the city auditorium. The registration will be held in conjunction with the annual skate exchange.

Age groups for the TRFAHA program this winter will include Tiny Mites — all 5-6-7-8-year-olds; Squirts — all those born during the year of 1971 or thereafter; Pee-Wees — all those born during the year of 1969 or thereafter; and Bantams — all those born during the year 1967 or thereafter.

Registration forms must be turned in Thursday so plans for the upcoming season can be made, pointed out Ron Novak, director of the Thief River Falls yough hockey program.

Persons with used skates and other hockey equipment that they no longer need or have out-grown are invited to take past in the skate exchange that will be held at the same time as the TRFAHA registration. Persons with skates or equipment will be asked to price their own goods, then return later that evening to pick up either their money or un-sold equipment.

Skippers Rout Hornets; Tackle Bulldogs Friday

In preseason talk, Middle River, Oklee, Clearbrook and Gonvick-Trail were all mentioned in one breath as favorites in North Tri County Conference nine-man high school football this fall. And with a season-opening schedule that pitted them against Oklee, Clearbrook and Gonvick-Trail on successive Fridays Middle River fans were going to find out in a hurry where the Skippers stood in that group.

Right now the Skippers are standing pretty tall. They followed up a 36-6 season-opening win at Oklee with a 48-14 rout of Clearbrook Friday afternoon in their 1981 home opener.

Gonvick-Trail is next, with the Skippers and Bulldogs squaring off Friday at 4 p.m. at Gonvick.

Middle River's muscle was too much for Clearbrook, said Skippers coach Eldon Sparby. "Our linemen really did the job. Our line handled their line; we really out-hit them," he said.

The Skippers' seven touchdowns against the Horents included a pair of scores by Steve Bengtson, who reached the end zone from the two and seven-yard lines; a nine-yard run by Doug Kilen; a 44-yard spring by Mike Peterson; and eight-yard run by Jeff Cwikla; a 51-yard Peterson-to-Brent Walton touchdown pass; and a 72-yard kickoff return for a touchdown by reserve runningbak Nathan Bukowski.

Bust most of Sparby's post-game praise went to his offensive line; right tackle Ryan Johnson, "Our leader in the line," says Sparby; center Harlen Olson, a 5-9, 200-pounder, who "really moves those linebackers around;" left tackle Dan Durda, a first-year member of the offensive line who is "learning the game and getting better all the time;" and end Jon Neumann, who missed the 1980 football season because of an injury. "Jon has really made a big difference in our gunning game this season," pointed out Sparby.

Middle River led it 14-0 at the end of the first quarter and owned a 26-0 lead before giving up a first half Clearbrook touchdown. It was 40-6 at the end of the third quarter.

Gonvick-Trail, warned Sparby, will be the Skippers' toughest test yet. He is hoping his linemen can continue to dominate the play like they've done the past two weeks.

Cross Country Chili Feed, Fun Run Planned

A chili feed, sponsored by the Lincoln high school cross country team in an effort to raise funds to pay for awards and meet costs for Thursday's scheduled elementary school fun run, will be held tonight (Monday) from 5 to 7:30 p.m. at the American Legion club.

Chili and crackers, a hot dog and beverage will be served for $2. The event is open to the public. Parents of students planning to participate in the fun run are urged to help support the meet by taking in the chili feed.

Sophomores Lose Opener At Red River

A 13-0 first quarter lead disappeared Thursday and the Lincoln high school sophomore football team lost a 24-19 season-opening game at Grand Forks Red River.

Thief River Falls carried a 19-8 lead into halftime, with Scott Jorstad scoring on a five-yard plunge and Doug Odegaard going outside for a 20-yard touchdown run in the first quarter, and linebacker Steve Wiskow retruning a pass interception 15 yards for a second quarter score. Gary Cornell added the place kick after the first touchdown.

But Red River out-scored the visitors 16-0 in the second half to win the game, erasing a 19-14 deficit in the fourth quarter.

Lincoln junior varsity will kick off its 1981 season today (Monday) with a 5 p.m. game at Moorhead. Lincoln sophomores will be at East Grand Forks Monday, September 21, at 4 p.m.

Nordics Beat Rabbits 39-12 . . .

Kragness-Dahl Passing Combination Lifts MCC

Marshall County Central spotted Tri-County a 12-0 start Friday before rattling off 39 straight points for a 39-12 Top of the State Conference high school football victory at Newfolden.

The outcome set up a Saturday night Top of the State showdown between Argyle and Marshall County Central, two teams who shared the conference title a year ago. The game will be played at Newfolden. Argyle handled Hallock 39-6 Friday.

Tri-County, winless a year ago, took Marshall County Central by surprise. The Rabbits scored on their first possession when Kevin Larson ripped off a 60-yard touchdown run. The Rabbits then recovered a Marshall County Central fumble at the Nordics' 30-yard line to set up a 27-yard Larson to Dane Nordine touchdown pass.

"They caught us flat," admitted Marshall County Central coach Sam Gebhart. "It was poor defense on our part. But you can't take anything away from them; they played well."

Marshall County Central come-back was sparked by quarterback Dave Kragness, who hit 13 of 18 passes for 157 yards and three touchdowns. "He played real well," said Gebhart of Kragness. Gebhart also praised the play of receiver Jeff Dahl, who caught eight passes for 108 yards and three touchdowns.

The Nordics tied it 12-12 at halftime as Kragness hit Dahl from three yards out in the first quarter and from the eight in the second quarter.

Bill Johnson scored the go-ahead touchdown on a four-yard third quarter run, with Dahl pulling in a 23-yard scoring strike from Kragness to make it 25-0 at the end of the third quarter.

Allen Lindemoen scored on a pair of fourth quarter touchdown runs to ice it.

The Nordics finished with 272 yards total offense, getting 115 on the ground where Johnson carried 20 times for 88 yards. Tri-County gained 158 yards — 131 of them on the ground.

In addition to his receiving, Dahl also excelled as a defensive end, coming up with 12 tackles, two quarterback sacks and a fumble recovery. Lindemoen was credited with ten tackles, Grant Nelson eight and Paul Yutrzenka seven, including a quarterback sack.

AN EIGHT-YARD gain by Detroit Lakes runningback Jim Piche started the Lakers' first touchdown drive in Friday's 13-8 high school football win over Thief River Falls. Linebacker Jim Hallamek of the Prowlers came up to make the stop on the play, but not until Piche got his eight yards to start a six-play 84-yard touchdown march by the Lakers that broke open a scoreless game late in the first half. Detroit Lakes won the game 13-8.

Lincoln Volleyball Team Tips Warren 19-17, 18-14

It went into the books as a two-game Thief River Falls sweep over Warren, but it was a match-up of two very even volleyball teams Thursday as the Prowlers edged the Ponies 19-17, 18-14 in an hour-long struggle in a warm Lincoln high school gym.

Thief River Falls started with a 10-3 first game lead, but a four-point Warren rally narrowed the gap to 10-7 and it was tight the rest of the way, with neither team able to run a string of points to take control.

"If you have two teams that are well-balanced like that, it will go back and forth playing for points," explained Thief River Falls coach Sharon Stauss. "That's good volleyball."

Warren crept within one point of victory when junior Brenda Potucek came up with a spike to make it 16-15 and followed up with a block at the net to put the Ponies ahead 17-15.

But Thief River Falls' Wendy Erickson broke service with a spike, then served to 17-17 when a Lynette Huot block at the net put the Prowlers ahead 18-17 and forced a Warren time-out. Play resumed and after a lengthy rally, Huot tapped the winner over the net.

Fast start belonged to Warren in the second game, with the Ponies going up 5-0 and 8-1 before the Prowlers caught them at 8-8 on back-to-back placements by co-captain Karmon Espe.

It was 14-12 Warren before junior Pam Finney served six straight game-ending points for the Prowlers. Erickson sparked the rally with a spike that glanced off the net and a soft tap that tied it 14-14, then sending a shot deep into the Warren court to make it 16-14.

Last two Warren shots went into the net.

"The kids had a lapse," said Stauss about the shaky second game start. "That's the kind of thing we have to worry

USING HER height as the advantage, Thief River Falls' Wendy Erickson reached above the net and blocked a shot by Warren's Brenda Potucek during Thursday's volleyball match in the Lincoln high school gym. The Prowlers' Denise Opdahl was there to help out, but Erickson made the play in the first game of Thief River Falls' 19-17, 18-14 victory.

LHS Disappointed With Cross Country Showing

A big gap separated the best from the rest Thursday and as a result Thief River Falls fared poorer than expected in the Grand Forks Central high school invistational cross country meet.

Moorhead was a double winner in the varsity races, taking both the boys and girls team titles.

The Spuds won the boys race with 64 points, followed by Grand Forks Red River 71, Thief River Falls 73, Grand Forks Central 82, Fargo South 83, East Grand Forks 119 and Wahpeton 219, with Devils Lake and Roseau fielding incomplete teams.

In the girls' race, Moorhead was an easy winner with 49 points, followed by Thief River Falls 71, Devils Lake 79 and Fort Totten 167, with Roseau, Fargo South and East Grand Forks all fielding incomplete teams.

It was a frustrating day for the Prowlers who placed three runners among the top nine finishers in the boys' race, but then didn't have anyone cross the finish line until the 25th spot. It was the same for the girls who had three in the top 16, but also had a big gap between their third and fourth runners.

"Our top three boys and girls just ran fantastic, but we can't win without the rest," said Thief River Falls coach Lynn Dyer. "I was really disappointed with the boys' results. We don't have any excuses; we can beat Moorhead and we should have. Many of the kids still have some mental problems when running against big schools. Until we overcome those fears, we won't be giving our best showing."

Moorhead could have been expected to win the girls' race, admitted Dyer, but he was still disappointed in the gap between the first place Spuds and the second place Prowlers.

The Prowlers' top three boys included Lon Aune, fourth with a 17:33 over the three-mile course; Steve Kruta, eighth, 17:45; and Bruce Johnson, ninth, 17:47. John Krieg of Fargo South was the winner in 16:48.

For the Thief River Falls girls, Sue Hanna was fourth with a 13:08 over two miles; Kristy Forsberg, sixth, 13:33; and Julie Finstad, 16th, 14:33.

Moorhead also won the junior varsity race with 53 points, followed by West Fargo 66, Thief River Falls 105, Fort Totten 106, Grand Forks Red River 115, Roseau 183, Fargo South 219, Devils Lake 268, Mayville-Portland 306 and East Grand Forks 308. Terry Iceman of Fort Totten won the three-mile race in 18:29.

Grafton won the freshman race with 30 points, followed by Fort Totten 90, Grand Forks Schroeder 93, Grand Forks Valley 132, and Devils Lake 149. Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks, Roseau and Moorhead ran with incomplete teams. Brad Robb of Roseau won the race in 11:41.

In the seventh and eighth grade portion of the meet, Fort Totten finished with 51 points, Grafton 79, Thief River Falls 107, Grand Forks Schroeder 109, Devils Lake 156 and Roseau 251, with East Grand Forks, Moorhead, Grand Forks Valley and Fargo South having incimplete teams. Jerry Ackerson Valley junior high won the race in 10:56.

Thief River Falls runners will be at the Crookston invitational Tuesday.

Huskies Stop Mentor 20-14

Disappointed in his team's defensive play in the first half, Goodridge coach Rick Nelson was quick to praise the Huskies' defense in the second half Friday following a 20-14 North Tri County Conference high school football win at Mentor.

"In the first half I was disappointed with our defense," noted Nelson, "but in the second half our defense held us in the game." Defensive end Darrell Wiskow and defensive back Darrin Easthouse were both cited for their play that helped the Huskies hold Mentor scoreless in the second half.

It was a 6-6 stand-off after one quarter. John Cullen scored on a 15-yard run for Goodridge, but Gary Kolb went in from two yards out for Mentor.

Both teams scored again in the second quarter as Mike Drangstveit reached the end zone from the one-yard line for the Huskies and Kolb scored from the three for the Trojans, but Komb also added the two point conversion to give the hosts a 14-12 halftime edge.

Cullen, the Huskies' top offensive play with 79 yards on 23 carries, scored the winning touchdown from the two-yard line in the third quarter, with Wiskow capping the Huskies' second half defensive performance by tackling the Mentor punter in the end zone for a fourth quarter safety.

"Wiskow played a heck of a game in the second half," said Nelson, who also praised the work of Cullen at middle linebacker, a position he inherited following the loss of Jerry Tharaldson, a 6-1, 190-pounder, to a knee injury.

Goodridge, 1-1, will host McIntosh-Winger Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Notice of Public Hearing

Pursuant to the provisions of Title 23 United States Code, Section 128, notice is hereby given that the Minnesota Department of Transportation, Operations Division, is affording a public hearing to discuss the location and design features concerning improvements to T.H. 59 between First St. and C.S.A.H. 62 in Thief River Falls.

The public hearing will be held at the Thief River Falls City Hall on October 20 at 7:00 p.m. and is sponsored by the City of Thief River Falls.

Royals Defeat Northmen 19-7

fense saw of the end zone until they were rescued by their defense on the fourth quarter.

Northland, meanwhile went 69 yards in eight plays to score their first touchdown ever against Golden Valley Lutheran. A pair of scrambles out of the pocket by Wiebolt were the key plays in the drive that started with a 19-yard toss down the middle to tight end Dave Gorski to the midfield stripe. Then on third-and-six, Wiebolt somehow wiggled away from an apparent sack, started upfield, suddenly pulled up and tossed a 33-yard strike to fullback John Dillon, who had slipped behind the Royals' secondary at the 13. A Wiebolt pass over the middle to tight end Nate Kiel gave the Northmen a first down inside the one, with Mike Busse scoring on a straight-ahead dive play. Don Hudec's kick cut it to 13-7 with 2:41 remaining in the first quarter.

Before the game Helley, in his second year as Northland's head coach, said this year's club was a much better team than his 1-7-1 squad of a year ago. After the game Skrien agreed, saying it was "definitely" the best Northland team he's seen.

Cardinals Lose At Homecoming

Plummer fumbled six times and failed to get off two punts Friday as the mistake-prone Cardinals lost a 42-8 homecoming football game to Erskine.

"We beat ourselves;" confirmed Plummer coach Gary Brantl. "Erskine is a good team, and against a good team you can't make mistakes like that and expect to win."

The North Tri County Conference nine-man game was deadlocked at 8-8 as the first quarter ended. Darryn Hanson scored from four yards out for Erskine and Dean Sletten went in from the one-yard line for the Cardinals, and both teams added two-point conversions.

"We played good ball for the first quarter," noted Brantl, "then everything that you could imagine going wrong did."

It was 22-8 by halftime as Hanson scored on a seven-yard run and Paul Kaster scored on a four-yard pass from Scott Willoughby after a Plummer fumble.

Erskine added three second half touchdowns — two on passes from Willoughby — to win going away.

"We just made too many mistakes," repeated Brantl.

Oklee 28-6 Winner Over Eagles Friday

Oklee struggled through its own first half penalties that held them to a 6-0 lead over Grygla-Gatzke before pulling away in the third quarter en route to a 28-6 North Tri County Conference nine-man high school football win Friday.

Only scoring in the first half was an eight-yard John Cyr to Matt Radniecki pass play midway through the second quarter.

But the host Bobcats broke loose for three third quarter touchdowns — two by Jon Lindquist, who scored on runs of 13 and eight yards. Cyr added a nine-yard touchdown strike to Leif Fore.

Grygla-Gatzke averted a shutout with a 27-yard fourth quarter touchdown run by Doug Schultz.

Lindquist carried 12 times for 88 yards for the Bobcats, with Cyr 7-for-18 for 61 yards in the air.

Defensively Oklee coach Dale Svaren singled out lineman Mike Vettleson, with Rick Dulka and Fore also playing well on defense, he said.

Oklee, 1-1, will visit Clearbrook Friday. Grygla-Gatzke hosts Erskine at 3 that afternoon.

Food Stamp Rules Change October 1

New rules changing the way food stamp eligibility is determined and how benefits are calculated, become effective October 1, and are aimed at saving $1.3 billion in federal costs in fiscal year 1982.

The regulations set a gross monthly income eligibility limit for all food stamp households except those with elderly or disabled members. Eligibility is determined on the basis of a household's net monthly income, derived by subtracting the $85 food stamp "standard deduction" and any other allowable child care, excess shelter, earned income, or medical deductions from the household's gross monthly income.

Starting October 1, eligibility will be calculated using a household's gross monthly income, before deductions. Under new rules, households whose gross incomes exceed 130 per cent of the official poverty line will be declared ineligible. This change is expected to save $244 million and will affect approximately four per cent of the food stamp caseload, or 875,000 people. The new gross monthly income limit for a family of four is $916, or around $11,000 annually.

Other changes in food stamp eligibility requirements alter the definition of a "household," and ban benefits to boarders and strikers. Current program rules enable a household that meets the income and assets limits to get food stamps, even if low income is the result of a family member on strike. Now, striker households that apply for stamps will be denied benefits unless they were eligible before the strike began. These eligible households, however, will not be entitled to increased benefits, under the new rules. All told, changes in eligibility rules are expected to save $355 million next year.

Savings are also expected through a new rule to pro-rate first month benefits. Existing rules permit a household joining the food stamp program to get a full month's allotment, regardless of day of the month applied. Beginning October 1, a household will receive benefits from the day it applies instead of for the whole month. This change is expected to save $411 million next year.

Another change will index the standard and child care-excess shelter deductions less frequently. Presently, the food stamp program grants all households a standard deduction of $85 and permits households with child care and-or unusually high shelter costs a combined deduction of up to $115. Existing rules provide for an annual update of both deductions each January.

New regulations will freeze the standard and child care-excess shelter deductions at $85 and $115 until July 1983, and base the July increase on consumer price index data for the 15 months ending March 31, 1983. Savings resulting from this change in 1982 are expected to be $128 million.

Additional savings of $385 million are planned when new regulations delay cost-of-living update of the thrifty food plan, (normally adjusted annually in January) until April 1982, July 1983, October 1984 and every October after that. The thrifty food plan is used to calculate how many food stamps a household may receive. The monthly benefit is determined by subtracting 30 per cent of the household's net income from the amount of money it would cost to feed a household its size according to the thrifty food plan. A family of four with no income now gets $233.

Households having earned income will be permitted to deduct 18 per cent of gross earnings, rather than the curent 20 per cent, to offset work-related expenses under new rules. This decrease in amount a household with earnings can deduct for work expenses is expected to save $49 million in fiscal year 1982, and will reduce benefits by at least six dollars to nearly forty per cent of working households that receive food stamps. Approximately twenty per cent of the food stamp program's eight million households have earned income.

These and other regulatory changes are published in the September 4 Federal Register. Comments on the new rules will be accepted through January 4, 1982, and should be sent to: Alberta Frost, Deputy Administrator for Family Nutrition Programs, Food and Nutrition Service, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Financial Aid Is Available At Northland

Students who plan to attend Northland Community College, Thief River Falls, for the 1981-82 school year still have time to complete application and receive financial aid, according to Ken Wiebolt, dean of students.

Part-time students, older than the traditional college age, are encouraged to apply. Last year's aid to non-traditional students totalled more than $5,100.

Total financial aid to 363 Northland students last year was $654,757 compared to $487,388 the previous year. Granting of most of the financial aid is based on need.

Such awards are made in three major categories: gift aid, which includes basic grants, state grants and local scholarships; employment aid or work-study, which provides jobs for students on and off campus at non-profit organizations; and loans, which are free of interest with no payments due until a student leaves college.

Last year Northland students were awarded $294,950 in the gift category, employment programs amounted to $128,183, and loans totaled $231,624.

Anyone interested in applying for aid should contact the financial aid office at Northland (681-2181).

When the payments are deposited in authorized commercial banks or Federal Reserve Banks, they must be accompanied by the Federal Tax Deposit Form 503.

Supplies of Form 1120-W and IRS Publication 542, "Tax Information on Corporations," are available free by calling the IRS forms/tax information number in the local telephone directory.

Originally from Glenwood City, WI, Dr. Garske attended Western Michigan university in Kalamazoo on a basketball scholarship, then received a BS degree in chemistry and mathematics at the University of Wisconsin at Eau Claire, playing on an NAIA championship basketball team.

Graduating from the University of Wisconsin medical school at Madison, he served his internship and residency at Akron, Ohio, where he received specialized training in orthopedic surgery.

Dr. Garske and his wife Donna, who is from the Akron area, have purchased the Brad Powell home. Jeff hopes to resume hunting and fishing activities which have been somewhat sidetracked during his medical training.

Dr. Garske said the orthopedic services offered here will include total joint replacement, including hips and knees.

Pipeline Work Underway Near Karlstad Area

Just southeast of Karlstad, preparations are underway for the laying of a gas pipeline storage loop to be constructee this fall in Kittson and Marshall counties.

The project is the second in this area, and will span a total of about 17 miles. Eleven miles of the large diameter pipe were layed last year.

At present, about 25 people are working on the site at what they call "double jointing", which consists of splicing 40 foot sections of the 36 inch diameter pipe into 80 foot sections. The joint is sealed with three welds, an inside seam, and a double seam on the outside of the pipe. The 80 foot sections are then stockpiled until later.

Once trenching is begun just west of Karlstad, the 80 foot sections will be hauled to the site of the pipeline to be laid in the trench. The crews should lay about a mile of pipe every day, and the project will take about 20 days once they begin.

The company that owns the pipeline, Great Lakes Transmission Company, Detroit, MI., pays personal property tax on the pipe and will be added to the tax rolls in 1983. A little over 12 miles of pipe will appear on the tax rolls this year and taxpayers should see a slight decrease in special assessments. Much of the new storage loop is within the boundaries of the Karlstad school district.

Although Inter City Gas Limited Inc., Thief River Falls, may purchase some gas from the pipeline as a secondary source of supply, its primary purpose is to carry the fuel from its source in western Canada at Alberta to a distribution center for eastern Canada at Sarnia, Ontario. The pipeline will cross the border at Humboldt, and was run through the United States primarily because of more favorable geography.

Actual construction work is being done by Welded Construction Company Inc. of Michigan and Ohio.

Mn. State Fair Breaks Record For Attendance

Minnesota State Fair 1981 attracted a record 1,414,809 visitors during its 12-day run, which concluded Labor Day, September 7. Previous record was set in 1979, when 1,405,669 people visited the exposition.

Mike Heffron, secretary-general menager, said that the exposition ran exceptionally well. "We had very nice weather after the first two days and very few problems."

Two single day attendance records were set during the fair. On Friday, September 4, 114,842 people attended the exposition, eclipsing the old Friday mark of 112,140 set in 1974. Saturday, September 5, was also a record day as 192,487 visited the fair. The old record of 191,726 was set in 1979.

Set Hearing On Improvements For Highway 59

To discuss the location and design features of improvements to highway 59 between First street and CSAH 62 in Thief River Falls, a public hearing will be conducted by the Minnesota department of transportation at 7 p.m. Tuesday, October 20, at the Thief River Falls city auditorium. Hearing is sponsored by the city of Thief River Falls.

Improvement project will include installation of traffic signals at First street on highway 59, widening the highway roadway to permit right and left turn lanes with concrete and painted medians, and construction of frontage roads.

The design concept calls for closure of most business entrances to highway 59 at First street, Sherwood avenue, Greenwood avenue and CSAH 62.

Cliff Larson, resident engineer for the state transportation department, said the improvements to be discussed at the public hearing have been developed in response to requests from the Thief River Falls city council. City officials have been included in discussions of the project since June of 1979 and two separate resolutions have been passed by the council in support of the improvements.

General public is invited to present testimony at the hearing, or written testimony may be postmarked no later that October 30 and mailed to R.E. Wolfe, District Engineer, Attention: Steve Baker, Mn-DOT, Box 727, Bemidji, MN. 56601

In addition to location and design features, discussion will include social, economic and environmental effects, tentative schedules for right-of-way acquisition and construction and relocation assistance programs.

The project development report and environmental assessment for the project along with maps, drawings and other pertinent information will be available for public inspection at the Thief River Falls Mn-DOT office at State avenue and Zeh street.

Congressman Stangeland will be hosting the second annual small business workshop at the Ramada Inn in Moorhead on Friday. The workshop, which will be open to all interested persons, will include four specialized seminars and a luncheon.

Mike McKevitt, director of the national federation of independent businesses (NFIB), will be the featured speaker at the noon luncheon. McKevitt will also lead a seminar on communications between small businesses and Washington, D.C.

Paul Jansen, Minnesota director of the U.S. small business administration, will lead a seminar on buying or selling a small business. Richard Ditto, an IRS specialist on retirement plans, will conduct a seminar on planning effective programs for retirement investments.

The fourth seminar will provide advice on financial planning.

"This workshop offers small businessmen a unique opportunity to hear from both government officials and experts from the private sector," Rep. Stangeland said. "Because we'll be rotating different groups to each seminar, participants will be able to get all their questions answered. I think it will be a very positive experience for everyone who attends."

Pauline Culver Honored In Nursing Home Pageant

by Bonnie Wentzel
Times Reporter

"I've had other thrills, but this is so different," Pauline Culver, 82, said in a shy but polite manner, as she tilted her head slightly and smiled beneath her glimmering silver crown.

Pauline, a resident of Valley Home in Thief River Falls, was recently crowned queen during the sixth annual Ms. Nursing Home pageant conducted at the Beltrami Nursing home in Bemidji.

"I woke up at five to seven this morning, and that's something I've never done before," she said, referring to thoughts of the honor which had been bestowed upon her last week — a vivid scene within her mind.

Pauline was named queen among 12 contestants competing from area nursing homes including those in Warren, Crookston, East Grand Forks, Northome, International Falls, Walker, Detroit Lakes, Clearbrook, Blackduck, Bemidji (Beltrami Nursing home; North Country nursing and rehabilitation center) and Thief River Falls.

Nursing home staff selects candidates and their escorts for the event (escort selected by Valley Home was Albert Berge). Candidates are interviewed by four judges who consider such things as personality, spryness of age, ability to show happiness in life in the home, life activities, activities in the home, attitude toward life and fellowman and craft and/or talent activities.

Since Pauline won the competition this year, next year's pageant will be conducted at Valley Home.

Pauline had been visiting the "bedridden" residents at the home before we arrived. "They like to see the crown, you know," she smiled.

"Some of them come here (to Valley Home) to sit and refuse to do anything," she explained. "They say they've worked all their lives. I don't want anyone to ever tell me that. When I was nine, I was taken out of school to work."

Pauline, who was born and raised in New Prague, was the third youngest of 11 children. When she was 17, she moved to St. Paul with her parents and worked in a millinery and grocery store, until she was married.

"I always stayed at home when I was married," she professed.

Pauline and her husband, Milton W. Culver, were married at the First Baptist church in St. Paul. "We had a big wedding," she smiled, recalling her past.

"I'm never lonely," Pauline stated. "I've worked awfully hard. I like to be useful."

When she was 14, a girlfriend taught her the delicate art of tatting (formed usually by looping and knotting with a single cotton thread and a small shuttle). Since that time, Pauline has continued with the hobby.

"It's fun to have a hobby," she said, describing her pastime. She taught the art to four college students who visited her at the home and wanted to learn it before they

PAULINE CULVER, 82, was honored recently when she was named queen in the Ms. Nursing home pageant conducted at the Beltrami Nursing home in Bemidji. "I'm never lonely," states Pauline, who has been a resident of Valley Home for the past three years. "I've worked awfully hard. I like to be useful."

United Way Has $50,000 Goal

With a goal of $50,000 set for the Thief River Falls United Way campaign this year, volunteers to assist with the drive are now secured by the United Way board. This year's goal has been reduced due to the anticipated reduction in the community's giving potential.

Orientation program for the volunteers will be conducted Monday at 7 a.m. at the Best Western inn. Packets of materials will be distributed and a film on the United Way will be shown.

"A Gift of Love" is the theme for the 1981-82 campaign which seeks funds to provide assistance to 29 cooperating member agencies. With the help of United Way funding, the professionals and volunteers in these agencies deliver services to young people, the elderly, mentally and physically handicapped and to individuals and families with social and health problems.

Among program assistance areas are delivering hot, affordable meals to the elderly, support and guidance to the mentally ill, public education on heart disease, arthritis and epilepsy, reasonably priced recreational and educational activities for young people and assistance in providing camping experiences for mentally and physically handicapped persons.

A new program this year is the "Kids on the Block" program which uses puppets to teach familiarity with and acceptance of the handicapped.

A list of volunteers who have agreed to assist the United Way board in conducting the 1981-82 campaign and who have been encouraged to attend Monday's kick-off breakfast includes the following:

NW Hospital Elects Three As Trustees

Two new trustees were elected and one incumbent elected to a second three-year term at the annual meeting of Northwestern Hospital association Monday evening at Lon's restaurant in Thief River Falls.

Elected as new members of the board of trustees were Mrs. Clarence (Frances) Stromberg, a registered nurse who has been involved in the AVTI licensed practical nurse instructional program for a number of years, and Clyde Christensen, an area farmer who previously served on the board of trustees some years ago.

Re-elected to a three-year term was Mrs. Paul (Evadell) Tangquist, also a registered nurse who is now a full-time housewife and mother. In addition to Mrs. Tangquist's term on the board, terms of Marvin Lundin and Andrew Skaar also expired this year. Lundin was ineligible to serve again, having completed three consecutive terms on the board. Skaar, who has served two terms, declined renomination. Other candidates on the ballot were Arve Moser, Kenneth Murphy and Si Hanson.

Annual report of the association was provided in printed form and distributed to the 150 association members in attendance. Terry Courneya, chairman of the board, presided at the annual meeting. In comments from him and hospital president Norman P. Peterson in the annual report, a call was given for the public to ask themselves, "What changes would I like to see in our hospital?" What the public has to say about what the hospital is doing is important, they said.

"Planning is a continuous process of evaluating the past, assessing the present and projecting the future," Courneya and Peterson said in their report. It was noted that an associate administrator, Raymond Bergroos, was added and that Peterson had been made president of the hospital with the objective of having more time for hospital planning and development.

Departments of pastoral service with Rev. Paul Bortnem as a full-time chaplain and community services and education with Judy Janneck as director have been recently created to expand hospital services and increase community outreach.

Improvements have been made in equipment and facilities in the areas of cardiac monitoring, ultrasound diagnostic equipment, respiratory therapy, orthopedic surgery, pharmacy and pediatrics.

Speaker at the annual meeting was Gary Adamson, director of the wellness center at Swedish hospital in Engelwood, CO. He projected health futurism by looking at hospitals as facilities for health excellence instead of receiving stations for illness.

Adamson compared hospitals to the railroads at the turn of the century when movement of goods and people was centered on railroad use. If the railroad management

MINNESOTA WASTE MANAGEMENT BOARD

Eighteen local areas—ranging up to 10 square miles each and in or near 15 Minnesota communities—have been proposed by the Minnesota waste management board for possible inclusion in an "inventory of preferred areas" for hazardous waste processing facilities, board chairman Robert Dunn has announced.

Speaking to a State Capitol news conference Friday, where he was joined by other board members, Dunn explained that the final board inventory—to be issued in February, 1982—will include "preferred areas" for each of three types of facilities: hazardous waste incinerators, chemical waste treatment plants and transfer-storage facilities for hazardous waste disposal site, is our 'first' siting process," Dunn said.

"Hazardous waste processing facilities offer, in the long run, the greatest potential for effectively addressing the state's hazardous waste problem," Dunn added. "Processing facilities will help to reduce the volume and level of toxicity of hazardous wastes, and will help Minnesota conserve and protect its natural resources."

Those views were echoed by Fifth Congressional District board member Louise Kuderling, who said that today's announcement "demonstrates how the board is moving ahead in its major siting responsibility, the establishment of hazardous waste processing facilities.

"Many residents apparently believe that we are devoting all our energies only to the search for a disposal site, and that we must delay that search in order to consider alternatives to hazardous waste disposal," she remarked. "Northing could be farther from the truth."

"The board is doing all it can—and will continue to do all it can—to promote hazardous waste reduction, recycling and reprocessing," Kuderling emphasized. "Facilities which may be established in our 'preferred areas' are products of some of the most exciting and promising advances being made in technology today, to effectively reprocess hazardous wastes."

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Brenda Jean Laidley And Kurt J. Marben Marry

Mr. and Mrs. Kurt John Marben are at home in this city at 225½ North Kendall following an exchange of marriage vows at the United Methodist church, and a wedding trip to St. Martin in the Virgin Islands.

The bride, the former Brenda Jean Laidley, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Laidley of Thief River Falls. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Art Marben of Tracy.

Officiating at the double-ring ceremony were Rev. Melvyn Budke, pastor of the church, and Rev. Rory Swenson, a friend of the couple. Jeanne Harger, a friend of the bride, served as organist. During the ceremony, Mona Mallak of Chaska sang "I Just Fall in Love Again." She was joined by John Glaser, also of Chaska, in singing, "For My Lady," and "Today." Following the pastoral meditation Les Howard of Warren sang "The Lord's Prayer."

For the five o'clock wedding, candles and a floral arrangement graced the altar and candelabra with greenery and bows formed the chancel setting.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a floor-length gown of white satin with lace overlay. Satin ribbon accented the high neckline, bloused sleeves, and the deep V-yoke, edged with ruffled lace. Lace tiers complemented the floor-length skirt. To complete her attire, she wore a floor-length veil secured by a pearl encrusted lace headpiece. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and blue carnations.

Linda Romancki, a friend of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Barb Laidley, sister of the bride, and Brenda Marben of Tucson, Ariz., a sister of the groom. The matron of honor wore a yellow satin gown with an overlay of yellow pleated lace, topped by a sleeveless yellow lace jacket. Similar gowns in blue were worn by the bridesmaids. All carried yellow roses with blue and white carnations.

Attending the groom as best man was Lon Flaten, a friend. Groomsmen were Al Helgemo of Golden Valley and John Glaser of Chaska, also friends of the groom. Serving as ushers were Gary Laidley, brother of the bride; Michael Marben of Minneapolis, a brother of the groom, and Gordy Markstrom, a friend of the couple. All wore black tuxedos with the groom and fathers wearing white shirts, the groomsmen blue shirts and the ushers yellow shirts. Their boutonnieres were blue and yellow carnations. The groom had a yellow rose pinned on his lapel.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Laidley wore a blue street-length dress with white accessories and a yellow rose corsage. A matching corsage was worn by the mother of the groom, who was attired in a dusty rose street-length dress, accented with black accessories.

Special guests at the wedding were Mrs. Ethel Laidley, grandmother of the bride, and Katherine Johnson of Crookston, great-aunt of the bride.

Renee Lammerson, Minneapolis, and Lynn Sommars, Eveleth, were the bride's personal attendants.

A reception and dance for 400 guests followed at the Thief River Falls Country club. Host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Ron Swenson. Val Grafstrom, Salol, was at the guest book and Brenda Steiger and Lori Sorvig served the punch. All are friends of the bride.

Centering the serving table was a three-tiered marblelized wedding cake, baked and decorated with yellow roses by Vern Reierson, a friend of the couple. The cake was cut and served by Verna Stave, Davenport, Iowa, aunt of the bride, and Dorette Miller, Crookston, an aunt of the groom. At the coffee service were Shirley Potucek, Warren, aunt of the bride, and Shirley Colwell, Cottage Grove, aunt of the groom.

Rick and Joel Blazek were in charge of the gifts. Waitresses were Gwen Herberg, Davenport, Iowa; Karen Potucek, Warren, and Jill and Susan Johnston, Lakota, N.D. All are cousins of the bride.

The bride is a 1975 graduate of Lincoln high school and a 1977 graduate of Northland Community college. She is currently employed at the Thief River Falls law enforcement center. The groom, a 1970 graduate of Tracy high school and a 1977 graduate of the University of Minnesota law school, is a partner in the law firm of Charlson and Marben in this city.

HOW MUCH SHOULD A FUNERAL COST?

Funeral costs — like those of other services and goods — must be equated with value received. Prior knowledge of what these costs can be serves the best interest of the consumer. We do not sell funerals. They are selected by survivors who have chosen us in their time of need. In addition to our costs there are those of final disposition of the body, a monument or marker and other miscellaneous expenses. We stand ready to discuss with you all aspects of funeral-related costs at any time. Since no two funerals are exactly alike it would be wise to find out what it would cost for the kind of funeral you want. Get the facts. Then, you make the decisions.

Student Loan Limitations To Be Imposed

Students who plan to pursue higher education with assistance of the guaranteed student loan program (GSLP) should be aware of new limitations which will be imposed October 1.

Until then, any student enrolling in an eligible post-secondary institution (including technical schools) can obtain a low-interest loan, regardless of family income. But, effective October 1, students whose families earn more than $30,000 a year will have to submit a statement showing financial need. They may not qualify for a low-interest loan or they may not get as large a loan after new regulations take effect, according to the higher education assistance foundation (HEAF).

The needs analysis is usually done by the financial aid office where the student plans to enroll. The school takes the cost of the year's education and subtracts any financial aid the student will receive, plus an "expected" family contribution. This contribution is based on the family's financial statement.

The new law also stipulates a narrower definition of education costs and inclusion of social security student benefits and veteran's benefits in the borrower's estimated financial assistance, thus lowering the student's "need."

If student grants and family contribution do not meet costs, the remainder may be borrowed with interest benefits. The loan, guaranteed by HEAF, is provided using private capital from a participating bank, savings and loan, or credit union. The student pays no interest on the loan while in school nor during a grace period (usually six to nine months) after graduation. At the end of this period, the student pays nine per cent interest (or seven per cent if the first loan was prior to 1981). The government pays the lending institution the difference between this and current market interest rate.

The parent loan to undergraduate students program (PLUS), authorized by Congress in 1980, will also be affected by the new legislation. PLUS permits families of students to participate in guaranteed low interest loans to help children acquire postsecondary education. Families participating in the PLUS program can borrow up to $3,000 per year (maximum $15,000) but pay back on the loan must begin with 60 days of its origination. Under the new legislation, interest on these loans will be increased from nine to 14 per cent, subject to lowering if interest rates moderate.

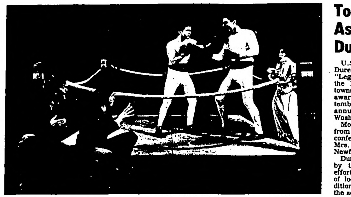
Congress has expanded the population permitted to borrow under the PLUS program. In addition to parent borrowing for dependent under-graduate students, independent undergraduate students (not receiving support from parents) and graduate students are now eligible.

Graduate student may borrow up to $3,000 per year to a total of $15,000 under this program in addition to amounts previously borrowed under the student loan program. Independent undergraduate students are eligible to borrow $2,500 per year including amounts borrowed under GSLP.

Under previous legislation, independent students were permitted to borrow a greater amount than dependent students living with their families. The new legislation has eliminated that provision.

The new law also authorizes lenders to deduct a five per cent origination fee from loan proceeds, thus reducing interest and special allowance paid by U.S. Department of Education. In addition, minimum annual repayment required will be increased from $360 to $600. However, lender and borrower can still agree to a lesser amount.

Anyone concerned that impending changes in the program may have an adverse effect on their ability to obtain such a loan after October 1 should inquire with local lenders or the financial aid department at the institution the student is attending or plans to attend.



TEDDY ROOSEVELT, a musical about one of America's most popular presidents, will be performed at 8 p.m. Saturday at Northland community college theater in Thief River Falls. The play portrays Roosevelt's first 24 years from a frail asthmatic child to his early years in politics. Tickets are available at Larson Music company. Funding for the production is through a grant from the Northwest regional development commission and the state arts board. Local sponsor is the Thief River Falls community arts council.

Quie Proclaims School Bus Safety Week

Week of October 4-10, has been proclaimed School Bus Safety Week in Minnesota.

According to James Haugen, juvenile officer for the Thief River Falls police department, Governor Al Quie, in signing the proclamation, urged all citizens to "exercise contant courtesy and caution" when in the vicinity of a school bus to protect our children.

"In Minnesota, over 600,000 students are transported to and from school each school day in over 9000 school buses. These buses travel over 114 million miles each year, officer Haugen said.

School buses have established an outstanding safety record, but are not immune from accidents. Statistics show that most school bus accidents occur while the bus is loading or unloading students. Many of these accidents are caused by motorists who do not obey the school bus top law.

Haugen explained that many motorists evidently are not familiar with the school bus loading and unloading law. "In Minnesota," he said, "we use an eight-lamp school bus light system." He went on to explain how the system works: "As a school bus approaches a loading or unloading area, alternately flashing yellow lights will be displayed at the top of the bus. As in other traffic situations, the flashing yellow lights are a warning to motorists of a potential hazard.

"When a school bus is stopped to load or unload students, alternately flashing red lights will be displayed and a stop arm will be extended from the left side of the bus. Again, as in other traffic situations, red flashing lights mean stop. Motorists approaching a school bus displaying the stop arm and flashing red lights are required by law to stop at least 20 feet from the school bus."

"Drivers in Thief River Falls should also be aware that the penalty for violating this law has been increased to a misdemeanor. The penalty for a misdemeanor is up to 90 days in jail, a fine of up to $500, or both the fine and jail sentence," officer Haugen added.

"The 1979 Legislature took further action to protect students from stop arm violators. According to the new law (M.S. 169.44, subd. 1a), the owner of a motor vehicle involved in a school bus stop arm violation may be fined up to $100 for such a violation. This new law will be helpful in providing a greater level of safety for students who are transported in school buses," he explained.

Red Lake Co. Project Up For State Bids

Up for bids the week of October 5 will be federal-aid improvements in Meeker, Red Lake, Roseau and Stearns counties, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) announced, acting for the counties.

Improvements also call for grading and aggregate surfacing on two miles of CSAH 3 between CSAH 18 and CSAH 11, 6.5 miles southwest of Red Lake Falls, and on 1.3 miles of CSAH 17 between the south county line and CSAH 3, 6.7 miles southwest of Red Lake Falls.

Bids will be received by county auditor David G. Kankel at the Red Lake county courthouse in Red Lake Falls until 11 a.m., Monday, October 5.

'U'M Plans Cuts Internally To Cover Salaries

With the handwriting of a money shortage clearly on the wall, the University of Minnesota is preparing to make $4 million in internal cuts during this fiscal year to cover yet unnegotiated salary settlements.

University administrators are assuming those settlements will add up to a figure larger than the amount the Minnesota legislature is likely to give the university to cover salary increases, president C. Peter Magrath told the board of regents Friday.

Traditionally, salary settlements are reached before the beginning of the new fiscal year. This year, however, salary agreements between the state and unions governing state employees and state university and community college system faculty members have been slow in coming.

Few employees are unionized, and their salary increase appropriation this year will be based on amounts negotiated by comparable groups of state staff and faculty members.

Magrath said the $4 million figure is the result of calculations based on "assumptions, not facts."

The university is assuming it will receive enough money from the legislature to cover about eight per cent in salary increases, he said. Further, it is assuming settlements for civil service staff will require a nine per cent increase retroactive to July, and another one per cent in January of 1982. Finally, the administration hopes to provide a faculty salary increase of at least 10 per cent.

The university had argued at legislative hearings that faculty salaries are too low to attract and retain the best faculty members and that top-notch faculty members were being lured away to better paying jobs in other sectors. But the legislature took no action on the faculty salary issue, opting instead to wait and base the University's amount on the average of settlements reached by faculties at the state universities and community colleges.

"We assume that the appropriation (from the legislature) will be inadequate in terms of what the regents requested and what we think is vital" for faculty salaries, Magrath said.

At its July meeting, the board of regents voted to find some way to increase faculty salaries, even if it meant making internal money shifts.

"Our objective is to do something, whatever we can, without wrecking the place and destroying programs," Magrath said.

Past internal budget cutting has been done across the board, but this $4 million cut will use a different formula, he said. "Across-the-board retrenchment is the easiest but perhaps the worst way to make cuts. We believe any across-the-board cuts on a massive scale would be very harmful to our educational programs," said Magrath, "the fiscal year is running, and if we're to do anything, we have to move now."

Next year's expected cuts will be decided after the administration has taken a look at each program in the system and given it a ranking based on such things as quality, demand and its relation to other units.

In an August 27 letter to the faculty, vice president Kenneth Keller said the projected long-term budget cutting is "not a transient situation. The state's financial crisis is likely to last for several years and the university's enrollment is likely to stabilize and possibly decline in that period."

"We are not simply responding to a crisis in this process," he wrote. "We are entering a new era for this university."

Row Crops Lag In Developing During August

A cooler-than-normal August with little sunshine and above normal rainfall caused row crops to lag further behind as the month progressed. Corn development is about two weeks behind the five-year average and soybeans are about 10 days behind.

The September 1 crop report reflects conditions as of the first of September and does not take into account any adverse weather which may affect row crop yields before next month's report. The report indicates potentially good yields if normal growing conditions exist.

The first forecast for sunflowers and fall potatoes will be released on October 9.

The state's corn production is forecast at 716.9 million bushels, a potential record for Minnesota. Yield is estimated at 107 bushels per acre, up two bushels from August 1 and a record yield for Minnesota.

Soybeans are estimated at 155.1 million bushels, two per cent more than 1980. Yield of 35 bushels per acre is unchanged from last month.

Spring wheat is forecast at 128.7 million bushels, up 33 per cent from last year. A yield of 39 is up two bushels from the August 1 forecast.

Durum at 5.1 million bushels is up 53 per cent from 1980. Yield at 38 is up one bushel from the August report.

Production of oats is forecast at 94.8 million bushels, up 15 per cent from a year earlier, but unchanged from the August 1 forecast.

A barley crop of 55.4 million bushels is slated, which is an increase of 60 per cent from 1980. Yield at 56 is a record for Minnesota.

The forecast for rye is 2.3 million bushels, up 24 per cent from last year. Yield is unchanged from August 1.

Dry edible beans are estimated at 1,339,000 hundredweight, which is down from last month's forecast, but still a record for Minnesota. Yield is estimated at 1,300 pounds per acre, down 150 pounds per acre from a month ago.

The summer potato crop of 1.6 million hundredweight remains unchanged from August 1.

Flax production at 1.4 million bushels is down 12 per cent from 1980.

Sugarbeet production, estimated at 4.5 million tons, remains unchanged from the August 1 forecast but is 24 per cent above last year.

Pauline Culver Wins Nursing Home Pageant

returned to school. She's done several pillowcases and has also tatted designs for stationery — enough to fill 60 boxes. Yet, everything she makes she gives away.

Her most recent project is the tatting she's done on the Communion tablecloth for the home, on which she used double thread.

"I can't wait until we have Communion!" she exclaimed, clasping her hands together and smiling.

The art takes much time and patience, according to Pauline. "And you have to love doing it," she said. Pauline does. The plaques she has received for her work prove it.

It was in January 1979 that she received a "Duchess of Tatting" plaque for "an art so rare" during the Winter Carnival in St. Paul.

"When I received that I thought I was the richest woman in the world," she said.

She has also received two certificates of recognition for her participation in the craftroom, bazaar, choir, band, bowling, January variety show, Easter hat parade, and a musical at Valley Home.

Pauline's philosophy on life seems to be to keep busy. "Those that want to, can," she said.

"I can truly say that I've never been idle," she said last week at the Home.

Articles of partially completed tatting lay on her bed along with an assortment of tatted cards. Her room was orderly — bearing a number of treasured possessions, including photographs, and remnants of other hobbies that keep her busy in her spacious room. Because of a heart condition, and because she likes to have it quiet when she is at work, she spends a great deal of time in her room, her feet upon her footstool, as she relaxes contentedly in her easy chair.

"I have a lovely room, and the birds keep me company," she said, opening the window and politely inquiring, "Is that too cool for you? I like fresh air."

Pauline spent approximately 10 years in the Presbyterian home in St. Paul prior to her arrival at Valley Home three years ago where she could be closer to her only daughter, Polly (Mrs. Carl Reed).

Since then, she has kept as busy as possible, even though her eyesight is beginning to fail, and she worries about not being able to complete the tatting she has begun on various projects.

She remembers a terrifying incident a number of years ago when she completely lost her vision after returning from having a physical in Rochester.

She had been using the stove and prayed she could push the buttons so there wouldn't be a fire in her home, and so she would not fall. "I've always had a fear of falling," she said.

It was during that incident that she became terrified at a knocking at her door which grew louder and louder. "I thought it was youngsters selling cookies," she said. "And they all knew Mrs. Culver never turned any of them down. But this time I had to."

Pauline sat quietly within her home like a helpless animal, praying that the visitors would not be anyone who would harm her.

The visitors, she learned, when they had forced their way into her home, were friends who had been summoned by Pauline's daughter, to help the woman.

"And you say prayers aren't answered," she smiled.

When the doctors told her after a period of being hospitalized that she was going to be put into a place where she could learn to live with her heart condition and she would no longer be able to do heavy work, she was shattered, she said.

But Pauline maintains that the Lord has enabled her to live her satisfying life among friends, just as it was He who enabled her to be crowned queen in the recent Ms. Nursing Home pageant.

Pauline handed us a piece of her original stationery before we departed. "There; now you've made me happy and I've made you happy," she smiled.

The woman is determined that as long as she is at Valley Home she is going to be the one to iron the Communion cloth she tatted. And she will continue visiting and trying to make friends with those at the home.

"It's fun talking with them," she stated. "You learn so much from older people."

Stripes Given By Air Force For Education

Seventeen to 27-year-olds with 45 semester or 67 quarter hours of college credits may now apply for enlistment in the air force in the rank of Airman First Class (A1C) (two stripes), air force officials announced.

Also 20 semester or 30 quarter hours may qualify a person for a guaranteed enlistment in the rank of Airman, said Sgt. Ron Gensler, air force recruiter, 510 North Washington in Grand Forks, ND.

The air force implemented the new "stripes for college experience" options for people without prior military service to enhance the recruitment of highly qualified people for the air force.

Persons with dependents qualifying for the rank of A1C will begin earning $776.70 per month in pay and allowances while a person with 20 semester hours will earn $757.20 per month as an airman.

Additionally, all air force enlistees earn four semester hours after successfully completing six-weeks of air force basic training toward an Associate in Applied Science degree through the community college of the air force, officials said. The college is similar to any other community college.

Airmen attending air force technical training schools also earn credits through the CCAF and may supplement these courses by attending nearby colleges and universities during off duty hours. In the latter case, the air force pays 75 per cent of the tuition. Other education programs are also available in the air force.

For more information about the "Stripes for College Experience" options and what other opportunities are available, call Sgt. Ron Gensler at 701-775-9361 collect.

Single Pastor's Children Gain Hope For Future

by Dave Berg
Times Reporter

Rev. Donald W. Fredine of First Lutheran church, Middle River, has never been married. Yet he has two sons, born of different mothers, thousands of miles away, on the island of Haiti in the Pacific ocean.

No, Rev. Fredine is not a bad man. He is a foster parent.

During a Caribbean cruise with friends in 1975, their boat put to shore on Haiti. "The crew tried to prepare us for what we would see," said Rev. Fredine, "but there was no way I could have been prepared for that." He said that on the boat they were treated "like royalty" but described his reaction to the poverty on the island as "utterly shocking . . . I knew I had to do something," he said.

An announcement on late night television following his return prompted him to contact Foster Parents Plan, a non-profit international service agency with no political or religious affiliations. "I'm sure I had seen that spot before," he said, "but it never registered." They offered to send him pictures of ten children and let him pick one. "Don't bother, just give me a kid and let's get started!" Rev. Fredine said he told them. On Christmas, 1976, he received a picture and case history of his first "son", Sonson Louima, and began sending $10 per month.

The nine-year-old son of an illiterate street porter, Sonson lived with his father, stepmother and half-sister in a one room, dirt floored hut with neither beds nor toilet facilities. His father made about $10 per month, of which the major part was spent on food of deficient quality and quantity. Because of their economic sutiation, Sonson was unable to attend school.

In 1979, Rev. Fredine decided to visit Haiti and see how his money was being spent. He visited with the family, and spent time with the FPP staff observing their operations. In addition to providing additional food, clothing, medical and dental care, the family is assisted through other services available at the FPP office.

Neighbors and staff members meet together to decide on special projects needed by the community. Such projects as immunizations, well-digging to provide clean water, or building a school are then accomplished by working together. Education is considered essential to improving the quality of life, so every effort is made to see that children attend school. Vocational training and skills are usually made available to older members of a child's family.

Reassured by his visit to the island, Rev. Fredine returned to Middle River and soon decided to sponsor another child. In June of 1979 he received pictures and a case history of his second "son", Maxe Medard. Maxe, nine, lived with his mother and an eight-year-old brother Tony. Their father and mother were separated and the father did not contribute to the support of the family. His illiterate mother made about $15 per month as a petty trader when she was able to work. The case history described Maxe as "thin and gets sick often." He attended the first grade.

Describing Sonson as a "public child" whom he "shared" with his congregation, community and "anyone who would listen," Rev. Fredine says that Maxe is more his "private concern." "I feel a very personal bond with this child," he states.

Kept informed of his charges' progress through letters, pictures and annual updates of their case histories sent by FPP staff members in Haiti, Rev. Fredine has since increased his giving to $22 per child each month. While it may not seem like a lot, when you consider what the families' incomes were before he got involved, it makes a huge difference.

Having recently returned from another trip to the island, Rev. Fredine related that he had visited with the families of his children with FPP providing transportation and an interpreter while there.

He told how Sonson and his family had wanted to give him a gift of a rooster as he was leaving. He compared the incident with the story "The Gift of the Magi" by O'Henry, and said he was "deeply touched to think that people with nothing still wanted to share."

Rev. Fredine stated that most Americans just can't comprehend the poverty in the third world. He said that Haiti has 80 per cent unemployment and a minimum wage of three dollars a day. Noting that one product of Haiti was hand stitched baseballs, he commented that if management had to pay someone seven or eight dollars an hour to make baseballs, "they'd have more than a players' strike on their minds."

The majority of the people speak Creole, which is a mixture of French, Spanish, and African "all thrown together." Rev. Fredine told how on a shopping expedition with Maxe and his mother, the boy (who is in the third grade and had apparently been told that if he studied hard he would not have to be poor) had giggled at a beggar. When asked what was so funny he had replied, "he speaks French and he is still poor."

Rev. Fredine said that two young men in their twenties, whom he had met on an earlier trip, had told him "Haiti is Hell" and had wondered what he could do to get them out of there. When Rev. Fredine had told them that it was "not all roses" for boat people in the United States, one had commented to him, "it is still better to die in the sea than to stay in Haiti."

The difference between these young men and the children, according to Rev. Fredine, was that he could see that the plan was giving the children hope. "That is more important than food or education," he commented, "because without that, they're dead."

MAXE MEDARD was the second foster child of Rev. Donald Fredine, Middle River. The total income of his family before the adoption was about $15 per month.

SONSON LOUIMA lives in a one room hut with a dirt floor in a rural area of Haiti. With the help of money sent by his foster parent, Rev. Donald Fredine, Middle River, his life and that of his parents has been raised from the lowest poverty level to one with hope for the future.

Authorization was given to the superintendent to formulate and implement a strike plan as necessary. Approval was also given to acceptance of the state high school league recommendation that football games be forfeited if they can not be played in event of a teacher's strike, and that a full week of practice precede a scheduled interscholastic game or event after a season resumes.

Report on the school lunch program by food service director Kay Fleegel indicated that the salad bar at Lincoln had proved successful but that there was an overall reduction of about 15 per cent in the school lunch program participation.

Rental fee for the Northwest vocational center was established at $1.26 per square foot for the coming school year and a $3 per week per child fee was established for children from Discovery Place using school district bus service.

Next regular meeting of the board is scheduled for October 6. A negotiations session with the Thief River Falls Education association is scheduled for September 21 at 7 p.m. in the Lincoln school library. That date if four days before the TRFEA has noted its intent to strike in a notice given to the board last week.

Name Grochow National Merit Semifinalist

Keith Grochow, senior at Lincoln high school and son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Grochow of route 3, Thief River Falls, has been selected as a National Merit semi-finalist.

There are over 15,000 semifinalists in the competition for some 5,000 Merit scholarships to be offered in 1982.

Over one million students enrolled in some 18,000 secondary schools nationwide entered the 1982 Merit program by taking the PSAT-NMSQT test in 1980. Semifinalists named in each state represent the top one-half of one per cent of the state's high school senior class. In addition to being honored publicly, semi-finalists are identified to colleges and universities in an effort to increase their educational opportunities.

To be considered for Merit scholarships, semi-finalists must qualify as finalists by meeting additional requirements. The finalist standards include being fully endorsed and recommended for scholarships by their principals, submitting records that demonstrate high academic standing, substantiating high qualifying test scores with equivalent scores on another examination, and supplying a self-description of their activities and extracurricular accomplishments. About 90 per cent of the semi-finalists are expected to advance to finalist standing; all Merit scholars are chosen from among the highly able group of 13,500 finalists.

Over 1,500 of the awards in 1982 will be nonrenewable National merit $1,000 scholarships for which all finalists compete. As in the naming of semi-finalists, one-time "national" awards are allocated on a state representational basis. A selection committee of experienced college admissions officers and secondary school counselors will be convened to choose the winners. The selection process is a subjective one, and $1,000 scholarship winners represent the finalists in each state who are judged by the committee to have the best combination of abilities, accomplishments and personal qualities important for success during and after college. About two-thirds of the $1,000 awards will be underwritten by grants from corporate and business sponsors that regularly finance four-year scholarships; NMSC's own funds will support the remainder.

About 3,5000 renewable scholarships, most of which are worth between $1,000 and $8,000 over four years of undergraduate study, will be awarded in 1982. Of these, some 1,500 will be financed by about 420 corporations, company foundations and business organizations that designate the four-year Merit scholarships they support for children of company employees, for finalists from particular geographic areas, or for those planning careers a sponsor wishes to encourage. Additionally, more than 2,000 four-year awards will be underwritten by 180 colleges and universities for finalists who will attend the sponsoring institutions.

In April, names of Merit scholarship winners will be released by NMSC in three separate nationwide announcements—one for each type of award. In the 26 competitions between 1956 and 1981, over 68,000 students have won Merit scholarships valued at about $192 million. Twenty-two classes of Merit scholars have completed their undergraduate study, and 17,500 Merit scholarship recipients are currently enrolled in over 700 of the nation's higher education institutions.

Crookston Central high school may be on the verge of dropping from Region 8AA into Region 8A competition, it was revealed by superintendent Richard Baker of Fergus Falls, a member of the board of directors of the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL).

Baker noted that possibility last week during the annual Region 8AA meeting held in Detroit Lakes. He told those at the meeting that Albany may replace Crookston as a Region 8AA member after the 1981-82 school year, with Crookston switching places with Albany in the 8A ranks.

Declining enrollment is cited as reason for the Pirates' interest in dropping from Class AA to Class A status.

It was pointed out by Baker that the MSHSL commitment is to stay with the largest 128 schools (in grades 10-12) in Class AA competition statewide, with the remainder in Class A. He said that both Crookston and East Grand Forks of Region 8AA are near the cut-off mark, meaning both are possibilities for Class A status next year. There has been no indication that the Green Wave will petition the MSHSL for Class A membership in 1982-83. Rumor of Crookston's move has been circulating for some time.

Declining enrollment figures, remember, were used by Crookston and East Grand Forks officials for their withdrawl from the five-team Northwest Athletic Conference (NWAC) in football. Based on average enrollment figures among the five schools, the NWAC was a Class A conference, but members Bemidji and Fergus Falls were Class AA-size schools. The Pirates and Green Wave didn't want to continue to schedule the Lumberjacks and Otters in light of enrollment figures which are expected to continue dropping.

Region 8AA has operated with the same 16 schools for the past two school years, with Detroit Lakes, Moorhead, Fergus Falls, Park Rapids, Crookston, East Grand Forks, Bemidji and Thief River Falls grouped into the North Half, and Alexandria, Melrose, St. Cloud Tech, St. Cloud Apollo, Cold Spring-Rocori, Sauk Rapids, Brainerd and Little Falls together in the South Half. Tournament formats differ for many sports, but in sports offered at Lincoln high school, basketball, baseball, tennis, track and volleyball, the two halves crown their winners, who in turn met in the Region 8AA finals. Cross country and golf, meanwhile, feature just a Region 8AA meet. Football uses the altogether different five MSHSL classes — AA, A, B, C and nine-man — while hockey and swimming have sectional tournaments which includes both Class A and Class AA schools.

Previous changes in the Region 8AA membership saw Wadena, one of the original 16 teams, drop into Region 8A when its enrollment fell below the 128-student figure for the top three grades after two years of Class AA competition, and after a two-year period when the region had only 15 schools, Cold Spring-Rocori was moved into Region 8AA.

Should Crookston or both Crookston and East Grand Forks drop into Class A, the realignment of Region 8AA would be a major concern.

Miscellaneous

+Trailing 20-7 with 2:03 remaining in the game, Bemidji scored twice in the dying moments of play to pull out a dramatic 21-20 high school football victory over Little Falls Friday. The winning points came on a two-point conversion after time had expired. Little Falls seemed to have it wrapped up when Scott Burinson picked off a Daryl Strunk pass late in the game and returned it 33 yards into the end zone for a 20-7 lead. But Burninson was hit hard when he lunged into the end zone, sustaining a compound fracture of the leg. Play was delayed almost 30 minutes while he was given aid and finally taken to the Bemidji hospital by ambulance. Strunk then came back to hit Tom Luoma for a seven-yard touchdown pass with nine seconds to go for a 21-13 game and Mike Sauer recovered an on-side kick at the Little Falls 47. With seven seconds on the clock at the snap, Strunk scrambled until he found Kent Kavanagh alone at the Little Falls 10 for the touchdown and a sudden 20-19 score. Disdaining a possible tie and overtime with a conversion kick, Bemidji went for the win. Strunk's two-point conversion pass went right to a Little Falls defender in the end zone, but bounced high into the air and into the arms of tight end Scott Nelson for the unlikely victory.

+Lincoln high school principal Frank Hamerlinck has been named as a member of the Region 8AA committee on the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL), along with Bob Rasmus of Crookston, Bob Martinson of Cold Spring-Rocori, Curt Borgen of Moorhead and Carol Howe of St. Cloud Tech, with John Knowles of Alexandria elected the committee chairman and Robert Ness of Detroit Lakes vice-chairman.

+Friday's Thief River Falls vs. Grand Rapids high school football game will be featured as "Parent's Night." Parents of the players will be treated to coffee and doughnuts before the game in the Lincoln high school cafeteria; will be invited into the Prowlers' lockerroom before the team leaves for the playing field; and will be introduced to the crowd at halftime.

No. 2 Rated Grand Rapids Visits TRF Friday

Having lost its first two starts and scoring just one touchdown in the process, the Lincoln high school football team finds itself facing a monumental task Friday when the struggling Prowlers will be matched against highly regarded Grand Rapids. The Indians will enter the 7:30 p.m. game on the Thief River Falls athletic field with a 2-0 record and a No. 2 ranking in the Associated Press Class AA poll.

Grand Rapids opened the 1981 season with a 28-0 win over Duluth Denfeld when Bruce LaRoque returned the game's opening kickoff 87 yards for a touchdown, the first of three scores for the fleet senior who rushed for 140 yards on 16 carries.

Quarterback Tony Kellin, an all-stater last fall as a defensive back and recognized as one of the finest hockey players in the state, added a spectacular 35-yard touchdown run against Denfeld with a weaving run through a maze of defenders.

A strong Grand Rapids defense, which limited Denfeld to a mere 36 yards total offense, featured linebackers Marty Pirjevec and Greg Chandler, tackles Todd Venema and Jeff Johnson, nose guard Tom Rubado, end Ron Renner and defensive back John Reif, who came up with three interceptions.

Grand Rapids defeated Thief River Falls 30-6 last year when the Indians reached the Class AA playoff semifinals.

"We knew we had the potentidl to be a good team last year," reported Grand Rapids coach Bill Soltys, "and we surprised some people. This year they'll be ready. But with the athletes of the caliber we have, coachable as they are and with 12 starters returning from last year, we'll be ready." Soltys says he's "excited" about the 1981 Indians. "Our offensive line will average 210 pounds, and our backs aren't much smaller," he noted.

But things didn't click as well last week against Duluth East when Grand Rapids struggled to a 20-8 victory. Chandler, the fullback, scored on runs of 11 and one yard — the second touchdown following a poor East punt snap that was downed at the Greyhounds' 17 — to give Grand Rapids a 14-0 halftime lead. East cut it to 14-8 with 9:30 left and appeared to have the momentum, but four plays later Kellin hit Renner with a 42-yard pass play to the Duluth 11, and Chandler carried it to the six before Kellin and Renner got together again for the touchdown.

Chandler finished with 80 yards and halfback Darryl Solem hit 83 in the Indians' 203-yard ground attack. East got just 69 yards on the ground.

However, Soltys wasn't happy with the penalty-plagued performance. "It seems like we can turn it on when we want to," he said. "I don't particularly like playing that way; I'd rather have us going all-out through the game. But it was a good game for us. We didn't dominate, and we learned we have to go out and work quarter by quarter."

In addition to their well-rounded offense and strong defense, Grand Rapids features an excellent kicking game. Jim Altobell is an accurate place kicker and Kellin boots kickoffs deep and is a consistently strong punter.

"They're just a real solid club," confirmed Thief River Falls coach John Schmitz. "They have good people."

Schmitz' biggest concern is in getting the Prowlers' sluggish offense going against a strong Grand Rapids defense.

"We haven't done a whole lot with our offense so far," admitted Schmitz. "We're working on it, and it is improving. We have to continue to improve; hope our defense can hang in there; and hope we get a break or two."

Despite two losses, Thief River Falls has played well on defense. Detroit Lakes quarterback Dan Douglas hurt the Prowlers Friday with his passing, but Schmitz credited Douglas with a strong performance instead of discrediting his own defense. "He just stayed in there and threw the ball real well," said Schmitz.

Kellin and Renner give the Indians an even more formidable passing combination than Detroit Lakes' Douglas and Todd Jorgenson, who caught six passes for 138 yards. But Kellin isn't likely to throw the ball 23 times for 182 yards like Douglas did.

"They don't throw unless they have to," explained Schmitz. "It is not a big part of their game, even though it might be the strongest part of their game."

Thief River Falls' manpower will be bolstered a bit with the addition of Tom Ose and Steve Olson, a pair of seniors who were forced to miss the first two ball games because of Minnesota State High School League rules violations. A third potential starter — Wade Hruby — might be in uniform, too, after missing the first two starts because of an arm injury.

Friday's game has been designated as parent's night.

DONATIONS TOTALING $1,200 were made by area archery clubs for Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) projects in northwestern Minnesota. The checks, donated on behalf of the Minnesota state archery association (MSAA), were presented by Dana Klos of Thief River Falls, an MSAA governor who serves the region as a member of the MSAA board, to John Parker, area DNR game manager. A $700 check was designated to go to the Roseau refuge food plot program and a $500 check went to Parker for fire fighting equipment. MSAA donations have surpassed $38,000 over the past eight years. Organizations contributing funds include the Thief River Falls Archery Club; Roseau Bowhunters; Northwest Archers of Kennedy; Northwoods Archers of Fosston; Bemidji Archery Club; Heart-of-the-Lakes Archers of Detroit Lakes; Sioux-Line Archers of Alvarado; and the Lake Agassiz Bowmen of Moorhead.

TRF Runners Are Winners

Thief River Falls boys and Bagley girls were winners Tuesday in the Crookston high school invitational cross country meet.

After a disappointing third place performance last Thursday in the Grand Forks Central inviational, the Thief River Falls boys bounced back with an improved effort yesterday, winning with 31 points, followed by East Grand Forks 38, Crookston 85 and Roseau 99. Bagley fielded an incomplete team.

East Grand Forks' Ted Sundin and Dave Lee came across the finish line one-two, but Thief River Falls placed all of its meet-counting five top runners among the top ten. Sundin won it in 16:24, with Lee edging Thief River Falls' Lon Aune by about five yards for second place. Aune ran a 17:07, with teammate Bruce Johnson a step back at 17:09.

"The biggest improvement," explained Thief River Falls coach Lynn Dyer, "was keeping our time difference from the No. 1 runner to the No. 5 runner much closer. At Grand Forks we had a spread of almost two minutes for our boys and girls; yesterday we were running much closer. That's what we need to keep doing."

Bagley won the girls portion of the meet with 36 points, coming up a two-point winner over Thief River Falls. Crookston was a distant third with 113 points. Roseau and East Grand Forks fielded incomplete teams, but Roseau's Robyn Skogland was the individual winner in 13:00, sprinting past Thief River Falls' Sue Hanna, the race-long leader, over the past 100 yards. Hanna finished second in 13:05.

Thief River Falls boys also took both the junior varsity and junior high school races.

In the junior varsity event, Thief River Falls runners crossed the finish line 1-2-3-4-7 and totaled 17 points, followed by Crookston with 52, Roseau 70, and East Grand Forks 93.

Matt Grabanski paced the strong Thief River Falls junior varsity showing with a first place 17:55.

In the junior high school race, Thief River Falls finished with 34 points, Crookston 47 and Roseau 87. Bagley did not field a complete team.

Paul Kuznick of Crookston won the junior high race in 12:11, with Thief River Falls' Stacy Svir running a second place 12:26.

Thief River Falls will run Tuesday at Bagley where the Prowlers will meet Bemidji for the first time at 4:30 p.m. The two teams are both gunning for a top finish in Northwest Athletic Conference competition this fall and they both have their eye on a strong Region 8AA finish.

Skippers vs. Bulldogs . . .

Conference Lead At Stake Friday

After brushing aside North Tri County Conference challengers Oklee 36-6 and Clearbrook 48-14 to open the 1981 high school football season, Middle River faces a third major test Friday when the Skippers go on the road for the first time, taking on Gonvick-Trail in a 4 p.m. nine-man game.

Friday's winner will be 3-0 and will have a big edge over the rest of the ten-team North Tri County Conference field over the final five weeks of the season.

"Gonvick is going to be the toughest team we've faced," warned Middle River coach Eldon Sparby, who had also predicted tough games against Oklee and Clearbrook. But the physically stronger Skippers handled the Bobcats and Hornets, and will try to do the same thing with the Bulldogs, who have been impressive, too, in posting back-to-back wins over Mentor 56-22 and McIntosh-Winter 34-20.

Ducks Unlimited Banquet Scheduled Tuesday

Eye-catching publicity shots, like the "Wanted" poster of a mallard drake have been drawing attention of sportsmen nation-wide as Ducks Unlimited chapters across the country conduct their membership drives.

Sixth annual Thief River Falls Ducks Unlimited (DU) Chapter banquet will be held Tuesday at 6 p.m. at the Best Western Inn. Tickets are on sale at Thune-Upham & Associates, TG Sporting Goods, Sjoberg's Cable TV and Tony Dorn, Inc.

Last year a full house of over 300 persons attended the Thief River Falls Ducks Unlimited Chapter banquet, contributing some $23,000 to DU programs in Canada. That figure was up considerably from the $6,000 the local chapter raised in its initial effort in 1976.

A special invitation is going out to those interested in joining the Green Wing portion of the Ducks Unlimited program. Green Wings, for those 18-years-old and younger, had six Thief River Falls members last year. To date the 1981 figure has hit 60.

Auctions for DU wildlife prints and commemorative shotgun will highlight the fund-raising efforts Tuesday. Other prizes will also be available.

North Tri County Showdown Saturday . . .

MCC, Argyle Will Meet For Early League Lead

Marshall County Central finesse vs. Argyle power is the match-up Saturday when the Nordics and Eagles clash in a key early season Top of the State Conference nine-man high school football game at Newfolden.

The two teams shared the Top of the State pennant a year ago, and they've both picked up where they left off. Marshall County Central opened the 1981 season with a 39-6 nonconference rout of Halstad-Climax and last week came up a 39-12 winner over Tri-County high school of Karlstad in league play. Argyle, after a first-week open date, drilled Hallock 39-6 Friday. The Bears were expected to challenge the Nordics and Eagles in the Top of the State Conference standings this fall.

Against Tri-County, Marshall County Central displayed a nifty passing game that saw quarterback Dave Kragness hit on 13 of 18 passes for three touchdowns and 157 yards, with receiver Jeff Dahl catching eight of those passes for three touchdowns and 108 yards.

Meanwhile, Argyle overran Hallock by recovering five fumbles, intercepting two passes and blocking a punt in an outstanding defensive effort.

The key to Saturday's outcome, says Marshall County Central coach Sam Gebhart, will be the Nordics' ability to block the aggressive Eagles.

"We've got the people who can throw the ball and catch the ball," noted Gebhart, "but they need time to do it."

It'll be the third straight home game for the Nordics, who will be playing four of their next five on the road. It'll also be the first of two Marshall County Central-Argyle match-ups this fall. All six Top of the State Conference teams play each other twice, and both games count in the conference standings.

Gebhart said he favors the twice-a-year meetings, figuring the losing team has another shot at their conquerors. However, he undoubtedly isn't thinking in losing terms Saturday.

In other Top of the State Conference games Friday, Hallock visits Greenbush and Tri-County is at Stephen. Doug Schindele scored five touchdowns on runs of 2, 34, 40, 4 and 39 yards, added a two-point conversion and rushed for 160 yards on 20 carries last week to lead Stephen over Greenbush 40-12 and take an early lead in the Top of the State scoring race with 32 points. Dahl is a distant second with 18.

Lincoln high school junior varsity football team opened its 1981 season Monday with a 12-0 loss at Moorhead.

MJCAA Athletic Rivals . . .

NCC, UMC To Play Saturday

Two teams who played well defensively in their openers a week ago will renew their area athletic rivalry Saturday when Northland community college visits the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) for a 1:30 p.m. MJCAA Northern Division football game that will inaugurate the Trojans' newly-completed campus athletic facility.

Crookston opened on the road and came up with a 7-3 win at Itasca when the Trojans stopped the Vikings twice inside the UMC five-yard line in the second half. Northland list its home opener, but gave defending Northern Division champion Golden Valley Lutheran a real run before dropping a 19-7 decision. The score had to open a few eyes around the league. It did in Crookston where UMC coach Jim Sims said, "They've arrived; no question about that."

The Trojans beat the Vikings when sophomore runningback Brook Buchholz of Wheaton scored on a 12-yard run that capped a 67-yard second quarter drive. Gregg Engel added the conversion kick. Only Itasca points came on a 26-yard field goal by John Stifter that finished off an 80-yard, 12-play drive in the first quarter.

"We made some opening game mistakes that cost us," acknowledged Sims, the former Lincoln high school coach. "We were fortunate to come away with a victory."

Sims thinks he has a Northern Division contender. "We certainly hope so," he said. "We feel we have a shot at that title until we're knocked off."

Uncharacteristic of Sims' ground-oriented football, the Trojans will be throwing passes this fall. Sophomore quarterback Jim Harris of South St. Paul was 12-for-25 for 173 yards passing against Itasca. He had a couple of balls that were dropped, too. "He threw the ball well," pointed out Sims, who isn't even using the wishbone attack that he installed at Lincoln in the early 1970's and carried with him to Crookston in time for the 1976 season.

And while Northland played outstanding defense against Golden Valley Lutheran, it was the defense against the pass that let the Northmen down. The Royals, limited to 78 yards on 43 running plays, were 11-for-22 in the air for 137 yards.

But Northland coach John Helley isn't worried about his team's defense. "I was very well pleased with our defense after the first quarter against Golden Valley," he said. Some of the passing yards came when the linebackers didn't drop back into their passing zones, he said. That problem has been worked on in practice.

"We're looking forward to Saturday's game," said Helley. "We're going to do the same things we did against Golden Valley, although we hope to eliminate some of the coaching errors and execute a little better. I was very pleased with our performance against Golden Valley. We just have to refine a few things."

Elsewhere in the Northern Division this week, Brainerd visits Hibbing, Fergus Falls is at Vermilion, Itasca travels to Mesabi and Golden Valley Lutheran hosts the Gustavus Adolphus junior varsity in nonconference play.

Last week, Fergus Falls showed its power in shutting out Mesabi 35-0, Hibbing surprised Vermilion 12-7 and Brainerd handled the Bemidji State University junior varsity 34-7.

Annual Skate Exchange Is Set Thursday

Annual skate exchange and registration for both the Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA) and the Thief River Falls recreational skating program will be held Thursday from 4 to 9 p.m. in the city auditorium.

Registration for both the youth hockey program and the recreational skating program for the 1981-82 season will take place Thursday so plans can be made for the skating season that begins with TRFAHA and recreational skating clinics Monday, October 19.

Persons unable to register for the recreational skating program Thursday may contact the Thief River Falls park and recreation department, or one of the program's board members: Jan Nelson, 681-7139; Jan Fessler, 681-6092; Mike Lee, 681-1169; Nancy Tofte, 681-2133; Linda or Earl Lorenson, 681-6053; Rick Thomton, 681-3686; or Ila Anderson, 681-2056.

Those unable to register for the TRFAHA program Thursday may contact youth hockey program director Ron Novak, 681-3959.

Skates and hockey equipment may be taken to the auditorium for the skate exchange, with TRFAHA and the recreational skating program each conducting their own skate exhange, although they'll be run simultaneously.

MCC Volleyball Team Remains Undefeated

Marshall County Central remained unbeaten in four high school volleyball matches Tuesday with a 2-0 victory over Grygla-Gatzke in the Nordics' 1981 home opener.

The winners rallied from a 17-15 first game deficit to triumph 19-17, 18-8. It was the second loss in three starts for the Eagles.

Marshall County Central coach Sara Ackerman praised the play of Jill Johnson, whose spiking produced the points, and Tammy Anderson, who came up with 12 sets.

NCC Volleyball Team Will Play At Hibbing, Itasca This Week

Northland community college volleyball team opens its 1981 season by participating in a pair of multiple-team events this weekend in Hibbing and Grand Rapids.

The Northwomen will compete in the Hibbing quadrangular Friday at 6 p.m. and will play in the Itasca triangular Saturday at 1 p.m.

Northland coach Deb Jacobson said the opening match line-up would probably include sophomores Kathy Walker and Nancy Noreen of Thief River Falls, along with freshmen Kelly Thompson, McIntosh; Kay Pemberton, Warren; Shelly Taggart, Greenbush; and Marlys Huot, Thief River Falls.

Rest of the squad members are sophomores Vicki Troska, Goodridge; Linda Lessard, Oklee; and Barb Pfefier, Thief River Falls; along with freshmen Diane Zimple, Plummer; Shannoon Singer, Roseau; and Deb Koskela, Plummer.

"I'm very optimistic," reported Jacobson, who says the Northwomen have higher skill levels than ever. But she warned that the rest of the Minnesota women's community college athletic association (MWCCAA) teams will probably be improved as well, and she expects Northwest Division rivals Brainerd, Fergus Falls and Crookston to all be strong.

Early practice drills show Walker and Huot to be strong setters, with Thompson and Taggart supplying spiking power.

UND Basketball Clinic Is Set For Nov. 13-14

Third annual University of North Dakota basketball clinic has been scheduled at the Westward Ho Motel in Grand Forks Nov. 13-14, according to UND head basketball coach Dave Gunther.

Gunther said information concerning the clinic can be obtained by writing to him at the Hyslop Sports Center or by calling him at 701-777-2974. Registration fee at the door is $20 and pre-registration is $17.

A SUCCESSFUL opening day bear hunt Saturday produced four bruins for, left to right, Joe, Jim, Scott and Stuart Courneya. They all had their bears by 6 p.m. Saturday — the opening day of the 1981 Minnesota bear hunting season. They were hunting near Bemis Hill. Scott and Stuart are Twin Cities area cousins of Joe and Jim of Thief River Falls. Jim Courneya downed his bear with a bow; the others used rifles.

Minnesota Senior Citizen Hunting Licenses Available

Minnesota senior citizens who hunt were reminded by the Department of Natural Resources that they are entitled to a special senior citizens small game license which costs less than the standard license.

Senior citizens small game license costs $5 while the standard license is $7.50. The cost includes a $2 surcharge for wetlands acquisition and an issuing fee of 50 cents which is paid to the license agent.

To be eligible for the senior citizens license, the hunter must be at least 65 years of age and a Minnesota resident.

Senior citizens receive another break if they are waterfowl hunters since they are not required to purchase the State Migratory Waterfowl Stamp costing $3.00.

They are, however, required to purchase the federal duck stamp, sold at U.S. post offices for $7.50.

DNR NEWS

There are two new regulations Minnesota deer hunters must be aware of this fall, according to Roger Holmes, Chief of the DNR's wildlife section. One is the requirement that all bows be unstrung or cased between one-half hour after sundown and one hour before sunrise.

Although deer hunting hours for both firearms and bow and arrow are sunrise to sunset, indications are that some archers are taking deer after the sunset closing time, said Holmes. This year bow hunters still afield one-half hour after sunset must have their bow unstrung or cased.

Other new regulation states that "no person who has purchased a 1981 firearms deer license shall operate a snowmobile, three-wheel cycle or any other all-terrain vehicle, between 7 a.m. and 3 p.m. in any area open for the taking of deer on any day during which that person's license is valid for taking deer."

Holmes explained that this regulation has applied to snowmobiles for over 10 years and has been expanded to apply to other types of all-terrain vehicles that can travel virtually anywhere.

"The proliferation of the use of all-terrain vehicles by deer hunters, if it continues, could threaten the quality of firearms deer hunting just as use of snowmobiles did in the late 1960's," the wildlife chief said.

He emphasized that snowmobiles, three wheelers and other such vehicles can still be used before 7 a.m. and after 3 p.m. - which should accommodate the transportation needs of most hunters.

"The new regulation will treat users of all-terrain vehicles the same as snowmobilers," he said, "and the regulation does not apply to four-wheel drive vehicles."

Holmes also pointed out that the law prohibits the tagging of more than one deer in any one year. He said confusion exists because people are allowed to purchase a bow license and a firearms license, which leads some people erroneously into thinking they can tag a deer under each license.

Holmes also reminded firearms deer hunters that they can take only legal bucks unless they possess a valid antlerless permit. A legal buck is defined as a deer having at least one antler not less than three inches long. This regulation has been in effect since 1978 and still applies, he said.

HUNGRY BEARS

Department of Natural Resources reported that black bears have been causing problems around homes and farm buildings in northern Minnesota.

"There was a poor berry crop in some areas this summer and the bears are evidently seeking alternative sources of food," said DNR wildlife chief Roger Holmes.

Although state law provides that bears may be taken to protect property, anyone so doing must report such taking to a conservation officer within 48 hours.

Holmes said that these reports are not only required, but are also important to help monitor the size of the bear population.

"Bears that are making a nuisance of themselves can often be live-trapped and relocated and do not have to be killed," he said.

DNR AUCTION

An auction sale of firearms and other hunting and fishing equipment will be held by the Department of Natural Resources in St. Paul on Sept. 26.

The guns and equipment have been confiscated by state conservation officers from violators of Minnesota game and fish laws.

The sale will start at 10 a.m. and be held in the National Guard Armory, located at 600 Cedar street.

Included in the more than 400 items being offered at auction are 170 firearms, 200 rods and reels and miscellaneous gear such as flashlights and nets.

All sales will be made on a cash basis; no checks or money orders will be accepted. Sales of firearms will be restricted to Minnesota residents or licensed forearms dealers.

DNR OFFERS

Department of Natural Resources will be purchasing cones from various species of Minnesota trees in order to obtain seed to plant in DNR forest nurseries.

Foresters say they are in the market for cones from Norway pine, white spruce, jack pine, white pine and black spruce. They are offering to pay $14 per bushel for Norway and jack pine, $18 for white spruce, $4 for white pine and $20 for black spruce.

Cones must be free of needles, branches and debris.

Cones must be picked at the proper stage of development.

In addition to the DNR forest nurseries at Akeley (Badoura) and Willow River (General Andrews), cones are being purchased at forestry stations in Bemidji, Blackduck, Cloquet, Deer River, Hibbing Orr, Littlefork, Brainerd, Cambridge and Lake City.

Minnesota Has 498 Volleyball Schools

Numbers and accomplishments are impressive: 98 victories, 11 losses, six state tournament appearances, two state championships, one runner-up finish and a consolation title.

That's what Moose Lake and Armstrong high school girls' volleyball teams have done during the past three-year period, reports Larry Larson of the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL).

And rival coaches naturally point to those two schools as threats to repeat the state titles they won a year ago in the Class A and Class AA state girls volleyball tournaments.

Observers have good reason to think the two schools may win state championships again this fall. Moose Lake lost only two players to graduation, while Armstrong returns six performers from the 1980 state tournament team roster.

Moose Lake success story in volleyball dates back to 1975 when the Lakers won the first ever Class A title at the second annual state girls volleyball tournament. Then in 1979 and 1980 Moose Lake won their way back to state tournaments. In 1979 the Region 7A school was state runner-up and last year won top honors, going undefeated. Their won-lost record the past two seasons is 43-3.

Not only is Moose Lake successful in volleyball, but many of their performers in that sport are also a part of the success the girls basketball and softball teams have had during this past three-year period. Their basketball teams have made three successive state tournament trips, including a runner-up finish last year, and their softball squad won a state championship last June in its second state tourney appearance.

Armstrong, meanwhile, can boast of its share of volleyball success, too. The school, located in the Minneapolis suburb of Plymouth, has made three straight state tournament appearances while compiling an impressive won-lost record of 55-8.

While Armstrong's 1978 tourney team failed to win in two state tournament matches, the 1979 team lost in first round play but went on to capture the consolation trophy. And last November the Falcons won it all, claiming the Class AA title via a three-match triumph over defending champion St. Paul Johnson.

Whether Moose Lake or Armstrong can earn trips to the eighth annual state girls' volleyball tournament scheduled for the Met Center in Bloomington on November 20-21 will be the subject of debate during the next two months.

This season 498 high school teams from throughout Minnesota began their seasons in August. The interscholastic program for girls involves nearly 15,000 participants.

The Times—A Great Gift!

ANOTHER NICE NORTHERN from the river system in Thief River Falls was reported this week when Christ Ley landed this trophy which weighed 11 pounds, 12 ounces. Ley was using a jig and minnow on six-pound test line when he caught the fish about 6:30 p.m. in the Thief river just north of the Eighth street bridge. Roger Hagman, who was in the boat with Ley, netted the 35-inch fish after about a 10-minute battle.

Grouse Hunters Start Season On Saturday

Minnesota's 1981 hunting seasons will shift into high gear Saturday when rabbits, squirrels and grouse will all be legal targets for hunters.

Shooting hours on these species are from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset.

Limits on ruffed and spruce grouse are five daily and 10 in possession. The birds are treated as one species for purposes of setting seasons and bag limits since they closely resemble one another in appearance and are frequently found in the same types of cover.

Ruffed and spruce grouse may be hunted state-wide but sharp-tailed grouse hunting is closed in a large section of northwestern Minnesota.

A map showing the closed area is found in the 1981 small game hunting and trapping regulations, available from license agents.

Limits on sharptails are three daily and six in possession.

DNR wildlife specialists say ruffed grouse populations were down slightly when surveys were made this spring except in the northeast where they showed a 15 percent increase over last year.

Sharptail populations are similar to last season while squirrel and rabbit numbers are at a high level, said the Department.

Limit on cottontail rabbits is 10 daily and 20 in possession. The limit on jack rabbit and snowshoe hare is 20 of each and the daily and possession limit is the same.

MN Retired Teachers Ass'n. Workshop Held

Representatives from each of the four locals in the northern division of the Retired Educators association of Minnesota met for a workshop recently in the Rex Cafe in Thief River Falls. Marvin (Barney) Forker, Kansas City and Myrtle Berggman, Moorhead, were in charge of the day-long program.

Forker is vice president of Area VI of the National Retired Teacher association (NRTA). Area VI consists of the seven north central states of Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri. Berggman is assistant state director of the Retired Educator association of Minnesota. Purpose of the workshop was to refresh old knowledge and impart new knowledge which would enable the delegates to enrich their local organizations.

A slide presentation entitled "The NRTA Story," shown with Berggman narrating, summarized the growth of NRTA from its founding by Andrus through its founding of the sister group AARP for all retired persons. Combination of these two groups together comprises 12,600,000 persons. Some services available to both these groups are Group Health insurance, Motoring plan, Purchase Privilege-program, and the Pharmacy program. Slide ended with the NRTA motto "To serve-not to be served".

Forker and Berggman defined the work and responsibilities of the membership, legislative, and public relation committees, which was followed by group discussions.

Preferred Area For Hazardous Waste Listed

The board designated six areas in the seven-county metropolitan area, and 12 rural areas. The board designated the following numbers of areas statewide for each category of facility (some areas are suitable for more than one type of facility): transfer-storage, 17 areas; incineration, seven areas; chemical waste treatment plants, eight areas.

"Preferred areas" for transfer-storage facilities include areas throughout the state, including areas in Rochester, Willmar, Grand Rapids, Crookston and Fergus Falls.

Areas in Duluth, St. Cloud, Mankato and Owatonna were proposed for chemical waste treatment plants, as well as areas in such metro-area communities as Plymouth, Inver Grove Heights and Blaine.

The areas proposed as "preferred areas" for hazardous waste incinerators include areas in Duluth, Mankato, Blaine, Coon Rapids, Plymouth, Inver Grove Heights and Shakopee.

Kuderling explained that the board did not make any "arbitrary" decisions to reach the proposal, but screened all of the 60 "preliminary areas" originally designated in June. To evaluate the areas the board used major siting criteria developed in public meetings statewide, including such factors as transportation access, estimated hazardous waste generation, soil and groundwater conditions and the availability of wastewater treatment facilities.

Included in the 18 "proposed" areas are two "volunteered" sites: a site operated in Plymouth by the AgLite division of the Anchor corporation, and the former PCI hazardous waste incinerator in Shakopee. The Shakopee site was presented to the board by Shakopee Mayor Walter Harbeck.

The board also announced that it will give further, special consideration to 13 sites volunteered by Northern States Power Company, United Power association, Minnesota Power and Light and Interstate Power. The board decided not to propose the utility company sites at this time.

Fourth District board member Milton Knoll of White Bear Lake explained that the board will soon announce special public hearings in each of the communities affected by the "proposed areas," to be conducted in November and December. The hearings, he stated, will be held only to "gather information" for the board's final selections of "preferred areas" in February.

"Counties which include any of our 'proposed areas' may be interested in the establishment of hazardous waste processing facilities, but may wish to propose alternate areas in their counties," Knoll said. "For those counties, the board will make available grants out of a total program of $90,000 in technical assistance to help evaluate alternate areas.

"Local governments which include any of the areas proposed by the board today will be able to apply for grants through their counties," Knoll said. "We call upon community leaders to continue to participate in this important siting process.

"In addition, we call upon the involvement of industry, which will ultimately be responsible for siting and operating hazardous waste processing facilities," Knoll added. "And we look forward to the continued involvement of concerned Minnesotans in solving the state's hazardous waste problem."

NW Hospital Elects Three Trustees Mon.

had seen itself as being in the transportation business instead of the railroad business, he speculated, rail companies would be operating trucks and airplanes instead of filing bankruptcy and closing down lines.

Hospitals need to look at health care with a view toward prevention rather than only treatment of illness, he said. Fifty-one per cent of all deaths in the United States are now related to lifestyle causes, he said. Death is caused by what we do to ourselves through our indulgent way of life.

For every employee killed in an industrial accident, he said, 50 more die of cardiovascular disease. Every two years more people die from problems caused by cigarette smoking than died defending America in all of its wars combined. Seventy to 80 per cent of all illnesses are stress-related.

Hospitals must look to changing the accepted norms if the present health picture is to be materially changed. They must extend beyond the hospital walls, he said, and modify the lifestyle which is increasingly influenced by the worksite. Hospitals must have a responsible role as an employer as well as a corporate responsibility, he added, noting that a wellness program is a recruiting tool as well as a benefit for both employees and patients.

Adamson pointed out that existing norms reinforce negative habits, make initiating change demand personal heroics, sabotage the maintenance of change and punish the victim. Change needs to be made, he said, from the curing of illness and rehabilitation of people to preventive medicine which impacts on the group norm instead of the individual.

SPECIAL MUSIC was provided by a group of Youth Temperance campers during a banquet last evening at Our Saviour's Lutheran church in Thief River Falls. Also performing during the evening for those attending were the Kings Men. Mrs. Floyd Dalzell was organist. Banquet was conducted during the 104th state convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union (WCTU) September 14-16, hosted by the Thief River Falls Alice Mae Stuart WCTU.

EXTENSIVE DAMAGE and personal injury to several people resulted from this collision at the intersection of Kendall avenue and Annie street at 9:12 a.m. Sunday in Thief River Falls. The car at left, driven by Aloma Koop of Thief River Falls, was traveling east on Annie street when it collided with the car driven south on Kendall avenue by Gary Sauve, Thief River Falls. Mrs. Koop received bruises; Ron Koop, 13, received a laceration near the eye and bruises; Ross Koop, 7, sustained bruises; and Sauve received a laceration on the top of the head requiring treatment. Damage was estimated at $900 to the Koop car and $2,700 to the Sauve vehicle.

Lundeen Seeks NFO National Directorship

Merle Lundeen

Merle Lundeen of Trail is a candidate for election from Minnesota to the national board of the National Farmers organization (NFO) and asked for support at the Seventh District NFO meeting held Saturday in Perham.

Minnesota state convention at which directors to the national board will be elected is scheduled for September 26 at the Sunwood Inn of St. Cloud.

Seeking support at the district meeting, Lundeen told the members of northern Minnesota's need for representation at the national level. As the father of several sons who might wish to farm, he stated, "I feel I should do all within my ability to obtain cost of production plus a reasonable profit for farmers if we are to enable our younger generation to have the opportunity to farm."

Banquet speaker at the district convention in Perham was Brynolf Grahn of Roseau, national finance and budget director of the NFO and former national director from Minnesota. He emphasized the need for agriculture to have an orderly marketing system.

"The economy today is at a lower rate of return than during the days of the black depression," he said. "The plan of program marketing, set up within the National Farmers organization structure, is a goal each and every farmer should implement."

Commodity reports were given by each of the regional representatives in the areas of grain, specialty crops, beef, hogs and dairy. Bill Archer, regional dairy representative, warned members of impending over production of milk. He noted that NFO has control of two per cent of the gross pounds of milk marketed in the country, while the largest single processor has control of 12 per cent. He said he felt the NFO was making gains each year.

Attending in addition to Merle Lundeen and his wife were Don Erickson, Clair Larson, Mr. and Mrs. Darrow Lundeen, Jens Steen, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mathson, Mr. and Mrs. Cal Harmoning, Kenneth Boucher, Leonard Boucher, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Harmoning and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Schleicher.

SILVERTON . . .

In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Chapman and Florence Bakke were supper guests at the Erwin Chapman home at St. Hilaire and later they visited with their sister, Mrs. Hazel Jesperson of Plummer. Mrs. Bakke was an overnight guest at the Lester Chapman home. Friday morning the three had coffee with Mrs. Marguerite Chapman in Thief River Falls and in the afternoon Florence was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Olger Green in Thief River Falls before returning home that day.

Jerry Erickson of Apple Valley, Janice Matson of Minneapolis and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Matson were breakfast guests Tuesday morning of Mrs. Gladys Porter in town. Jerry and Janice left from there for their homes and Mrs. Porter came home with the Matsons to spend the day.

TITLE XX BLOCK GRANT PROGRAM FOR SOCIAL SERVICES

— State of Minnesota —

On July 1, 1981, the Minnesota Department of Public Welfare and local county social service agencies published a proposed Title XX Plan for the period of October 1, 1981 through December 31, 1982. Since this publication, Congress has passed President Reagan's Block Grant Program for Social Services which makes significant program and fiscal changes.

The estimated social service expenditures were published in the Proposed Comprehensive Title XX Services Program Plan for the period of October 1, 1981 through December 31, 1982. These figures must be revised because of an approximately 20% reduction in federal financial participation and substantial program changes. Some of the new program requirements include: development of a statewide report listing services to be provided to eligible persons rather than a complex state plan; mandatory use of the 12 month federal fiscal year; inclusion of staff training funds in the allocation; and increased discretionary powers for county officials in the selection of the types of services they will provide and the persons who may receive them.

The Title XX Block Grant Program period will be October 1, 1981 to September 30, 1982.

Social services provided under this program are designed to help individuals achieve the maximum level of independent living and self-support of which they are capable; to prevent and remedy neglect, abuse and exploitation of children and adults; to preserve, reunite and strengthen families; to prevent or reduce inappropriate institutional care by providing for community-based care; and to secure referral or admission when institutional care is appropriate.

There are variations in this program from county to county to reflect local priorities for service offered and people to be served. In this county, services to be provided are as follows:

SERVICES:

Adoption	Day Care	Health	Money Mgmt.
Chore	Employability	Housekeeping	Detoxification
Counseling	Family Planning	Housing	Guardianship
DAC	Foster Care	I & R	Residential Treatment
			Transportation

ELIGIBILITY:

Applicants may be required to pay a fee based on income or assets.

FUNDING:

Before the Block Grant Program	After the Block Grant Program
Federal Allotment $2.9 billion	Federal Allotment $2.4 billion
State Allotment $36,413,943	State Allotment $44,271,200

CHANGES:

Social service estimates previously provided in our local proposed Title XX Program Plan have been changed as follows:

Federal Title XX money available to Pennington County has been reduced from $172,483 to $133,369. Comments on these changes or requests for copies of the State Title XX report may be made by contacting the Pennington County Welfare Department, P.O. Box 340, Thief River Falls, Minnesota 56701.

Soil Test!

Don't make a move without it.

Today's successful farmer is a businessman. A producer of food for men and animals. Consider yourself as a manufacturer.

The soil is your factory and a soil test is simply an inventory of the supplies needed to meet your planned production. And the balance of that inventory is as important as its size. (It doesn't help an auto maker to have plenty of wheels if he doesn't have enough lug nuts to put them on the cars.)

So, take that inventory . . . soil test now. Then determine the fertilizer elements (both amount and balance) you must add to your soil's inventory to reach the high-yield goals you have set. Finally, apply that fertilizer according to plan.

Need help? Let our Fertilizer Specialist assist you in every part of your plan, from soil test through application. We can even arrange custom application if you wish. Come in today and let us help you develop a comprehensive crop production program.

NHF Day Has Star Athletes As Chairmen

In an unprecedented show of support for National Hunting and Fishing (NHF) Day September 26, Terry Bradshaw, Ron Guidry, Jim "Catfish" Hunter, Bert Jones, Johnny Miller and Tom Weiskopf will serve as NHF Day honorary chairmen for a second time.

This brings the number of honorary chairmen for the tenth anniversary celebration of National Hunting and Fishing Day to 10. In addition to the six honorary chairmen of previous NHF Days, four other of America's top athletes — George Brett, Cindy Nelson, Roscoe Tanner and Tom Watson — are serving as honorary chairmen.

Hunter, a star New York Yankee pitcher and outdoorsman, was the first honorary chairman for NHF Day in 1975. He described hunting and fishing as an important part of conservation in America.

Miller pointed out that sportsmen had contributed over $5 billion to conservation since the turn of the century. An avid hunter, he is a leading golfer on the PGA tour.

Jones, a star quarterback for the Baltimore Colts, first served as NHF Day honorary chairman in 1977. "On National Hunting and Fishing Day, millions will learn what they can do to ensure clean lakes and streams in the decades ahead," he said.

"Too few people have an idea of the tremendous contributions that sportsmen have made to conservation and wildlife management. It's a story that needs to be told," said Watson, a leading golfer on the PGA tour.

Guidry, a star pitcher for the New York Yankees, praised sportsmen for volunteering their time to organize NHF Day activities. He was the 1979 honorary chairman for NHF Day.

"I urge every sportsman to join with us in celebrating NHF Day," said Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who served as 1980 NHF Day chairman.

Save Our Game Fish Group Rips Minnesota DNR

Doug Wahl, co-chairman of the "Save Our Game Fish Committee", designed to ban commercial fishing on Lake of the Woods and Rainy Lake, reported this week that according to Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) figures, commercial fishermen on Minnesota waters of Lake of the Woods have taken over 30 tons of walleye in June and July of this year.

Wahl said he was "absolutely flabbergasted" when he found out about the walleye take. "I have never seen such a waste of natural resource in my life," said Wahl. "Governor Quie should fire everybody in the Department of Natural Resources fisheries division for allowing this to happen."

Dick Knutson, co-chairman of the "Save Our Game Fish Committee," said he had the same reaction to the DNR figures. "The Department of Natural Resources must have their heads stuck in the sand to allow something like this to go on," responded Knutson. "I can't believe that the taxpayers of the state of Minnesota should stand for this unbelievable waste. The state is broke and here's the Department of Natural Resources giving away walleyes for a penny apiece when it costs us, the taxpayers and sportsmen, over a dollar to put a three-inch fingerling walleye into the lakes."

Knutson added, "The governor and the senate should launch an immediate investigation in the practices of the Department of Natural Resources fisheries division and somebody should start rolling heads."

"Save Our Game Fish Committee," along with the Western Roseau county Sportsmen's club, will stage a fund-raising banquet Saturday, September 19, at the Greelin Supper Club in Greenbush. The banquet will start at 6 p.m. Tickets are available at Wahl Bros. Bait and Tackle in Greenbush.

Steel Shot Zones Posted For 1981

Steel shot zones covering portions of 26 states have been announced by the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service as part of its continuing effort to reduce lead poisoning in waterfowl.

About 20 per cent of the waterfowl harvest in the United States occurs within these zones. They were identified in cooperation with the individual states.

This year's regulations differ from those in previous years because they are "basic" rather than "annual" rules. "Basic" rules remain in effect from year to year, with only specific changes — such as adding or deleting a particular zone — having to be proposed as needed. This procedural change was made to reduce the uncertainty associated with the demand for either lead or steel shot ammunition. "Annual" regulations also created a problem for the suppliers of ammunition, because shotshells are normally ordered during the winter for sale during the following fall.

Final steel shot zones were announced in the August 13, 1981, Federal Register. Detailed descriptions of the zones will also be listed in news releases to be issued by the Fish and Wildlife Service's regional offices. The states in which the steel shot zones occur are:

Atlantic Flyway — Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina and Virginia.

Mississippi Flyway — Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Ohio, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri and Wisconsin.

Central Flyway — Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico, and Texas. (Steel shot zones in Colorado and South Dakota, concurred in by the Fish and Wildlife Service, will be described in state regulations rather than federal regulations.)

Pacific Flyway — Oregon and Washington.

Regulations regarding the use of non-toxic shot on certain units of the national wildlife refuge system will be published separately.

Steel shot zones in Minnesota include:

+All state wildlife management areas and all federal waterfowl production areas.

+On the waters on Swan and Middle Lakes in Nicollet county, North and South Heron Lakes in Jackson county, Pelican Lake in Wright county, Bear Lake in Freeborn county and Christina Lake in Douglas and Grant counties and within a 150-yard zone of land adjacent to the margins of the above lakes.

UMC Dedicates New Football Field Saturday

After ten years of dreaming, planning, and waiting, the dedication of the University of Minnesota — Crookston (UMC) football field is a reality, reports UMC officials. The event will take place Saturday, September 19.

"All area fans are invited to the festivities," said Marv Bachmeier, UMC athletic director.

Beginning the celebration will be a parade complete with color guard, antique cars, Shrine clowns, and several bands from neighboring towns. The parade will begin at 12 noon by the courthouse and make a loop through town, down Main street, and back on Broadway.

Pregame festivities beginning at 1:15 p.m. at UMC field will include presentation of the flagpole by the Veterans of Foreign Wars and introduction of the players.

At 1:30 p.m. Provost Stanley D. Sahlstrom will throw out the football from the stands symbolizing the start of the game as the UMC Trojans meet the Northmen of Northland community college of Thief River Falls.

Halftime activities will include recognition of special guests and presentation of trophies to winning bands by the provost.

Tickets for the game are $2 for adults and $1 for students. Senior citizens and children under 12 with parents will be admitted free.

No More Testing Of Elm Disease

Due to fall coloration of trees, Dutch Elm disease symptoms are being masked, therefore the Thief River Falls park department will not be doing further testing for the disease until spring.

John Johnson, city tree inspector, reminds citizens to remove or debark any elm beetle brood material such as logs, limbs, branches or firewood as soon as possible.

Dutch Elm disease symptoms will appear next spring after the trees leaf out. Look for yellow or brown leaves in the upper branches of the elm trees.

X-Rays Effective In Bone Marrow Surgery

by Ralph Heussner
'u'M News Service

A few days before she was to enter the ninth grade, Deanna Smalley noticed black and blue marks on her arms and legs. Like most active 12-year-olds she ignored them. "Then, one day, my legs gave in," she said.

Deanna was rushed from her home in Aliquippa, Pa., to Pittsburgh Children's hospital where doctors diagnosed her problem as severe aplastic anemia, a disorder characterized by a deficient supply of healthy red blood cells. The disease is fatal in 85 per cent of the cases, and the cause is unknown.

Despite six weeks of medication and repeated blood transfusions, Deanna's condition continued to deteriorate. Finally, doctors said only a bone marrow transplant could save her life.

The bone marrow is the body's factory for blood cells. Protected in cavities within bone, the marrow produces red blood cells to carry oxygen, white blood cells to guard against infection, and platelets to stop bleeding. In aplastic anemia, the bone marrow is underproductive, while in leukemia, it is overproductive.

Nov. 1, 1977, Deanna entered University of Minnesota hospitals in Minneapolis, one of only four regional transplant centers at the time. Two weeks later, Deanna became the 36th patient to undergo a bone marrow transplant there. And just a few days before the operation, she became the first aplastic anemia patient to receive total lymphoid irradiation (TLI), a new pre-transplant treatment in which X-rays are used to suppress the body's natural defense system, thus reducing the chances of rejection.

Four years later, 18-year-old Deanna Smalley is making wedding plans. She says of the operation, "It's almost like it never happened." But her mother, Margaret, is quick to add: "Deanna would not have lived until Christmas without it.".

What was experimental in 1977 is now routine at the University of Minnesota. TLI has enabled doctors to achieve a high rate of success in treating aplastic anemia.

Doctors say the procedure, when used with drug therapy, has saved the lives of many patients whose bodies might not have responded to traditional forms of immunosuppression. In transplantation, the immune system is suppressed to avoid problems of rejection--the body's natural tendency to protect itself against foreign organisms.

Of 34 aplastic anemia patients who have undergone TLI since 1977, only one has rejected the marrow transplant, according to Dr. Norma Ramsay, a pediatric oncologist (children's cancer specialist) who developed the procedure with colleagues in the department of therapeutic radiology. "It's a very effective regimen," Ramsay said. "Other transplant centers are now using our regimen because it is so effective."

Before 1977, Minnesota doctors tried total body irradiation to suppress the immune system. While it was effective in avoiding rejection problems, there were harmful side effects. In an attempt to take advantage of the immunosuppressive qualities of irradiation while sparing vital organs such as the lungs and brain, researchers developed the alternative procedure of TLI. Here, only the lymph system – the thymus, spleen and lymph nodes--is irradiated.

Radiation may, of course, result in effects years after the operation. But, so far, Deanna and other patients have been free of any problems. She received a clean bill of health during a recent checkup at the University.

Since the start of the pioneering program in 1968, Minnesota doctors have performed 169 bone marrow transplants. For patients with severe aplastic anemia the overall survival rate is 62 per cent and 70 per cent in children under 18. In most cases patients would not have lived more than a year without the treatment.

In the transplant operation, approximately one to two pints (one billion cells) of marrow is removed from a donor's pelvic bone through a long needle and syringe. This procedure, performed in an operating room under general anesthesia, takes about two hours.

The marrow, a thick reddish-brown liquid, is then transfused into the patient's blood. By a process as yet unknown to doctors, it circulates through the body and eventually settles in spaces in the bone marrow cavities.

Within 14 to 21 days after the transplant, doctors are able to see if the bone marrow is producing normal blood cells. Patients are generally able to leave the hospital in four to six weeks. And if normal growth of red cells is still occurring one year later, the patient is considered cured.

"I definitely didn't think it would fail," Deanna said. "I was a little scared, but I knew nothing was going to happen."

Deanna received the marrow graft from her four-year-old sister Michelle after tests showed the sisters had similar tissue types. In medical jargon, they are called "HLA-identical siblings." The HLA refers to the human leucocyte antigen system.

When the marrow is transplanted, the recipient's white blood cells recognize the antigens (protein molecules on the new cells as foreign and immediately launch an attack. In siblings that are HLA-identical, this attempt at rejection is minimized.

"When Michelle learned that she could help her sister, she was very proud," Margaret Smalley recalled. "But when we got to the hospital, she was scared about what was going to happen. Thanks to the doctors and nurses who made her feel very special, she came through with flying colors."

There's another reason for Deanna's annual visit to Minnesota. She spends some time with younsters awaiting bone marrow transplantation. And when asked about the worst part of the operation, Deanna replied: "Losing your hair. But it grows back, so you don't have to worry about anything."

Over 8,000 Expected At MSU This Year

A record enrollment of more than 8,200 full and part-time students, about 300 more than last year, is expected at Moorhead state university (MSU) when classes begin September 10. Residence halls open at noon September 7 and final registration and orientation is scheduled September 7-10.

Opening ceremonies, including an academic procession through campus, will be conducted a week into the school year, at 10 a.m. September 16.

Because of enrollments, the MSU residence halls are expected to fill up fast again this year. Students are encouraged to contact the housing office as soon as possible for on or off-campus housing information.

Tuition and fees at MSU are $787 for the year for students carrying a full course load. Tuition is up about 12 per cent from last year; no change in fees. Room and board on campus will average $1,311, up about 7 per cent from last year.

Grants, loans, scholarships and campus job opportunities amounting to about $9 million will be available to MSU students, about one-third of that in grants and scholarships. Also, the MSU foundation will begin its third annual fund drive this fall to increase the number and amount of locally-funded scholarships available to MSU students. This year the Foundation will give $147,000 to MSU students, mostly in $300 and $500 scholarhips.

MSU has created a number of new degree programs, most recently in criminal justice, nursing, business and special education. Other new academic programs include a master's degree in computer science plus a new master's program in liberal arts designed for part-time evening students. New undergraduate degree programs in early and exceptional education and office administration have also been added. In the works are a master's program in social work and undergraduate degrees in legal assistance and industrial chemistry.

Besides its regular day program, MSU offers nearly 200 late afternoon and evening courses on campus each quarter in addition to 40 to 50 off-campus continuing education courses in two dozen surrounding communities. Its external studies program has admitted over 1,000 students since it began eight years ago. MSU's new center provides a transition for students with special educational needs. Admission is restricted to 200 each fall.

MSU continues to offer its teacher candidates a chance to student teach in a foreign country. Also, through the university's membership in the National Student Exchange, about 50 students a year ccan sample academic programs at 40 other colleges and universities across the country.

Dr. Roland Dille is in his 14th year as the eighth president of Moorhead State.

Annual homecoming celebration will be conducted September 29 - October 4. For details, contact the MSU public affairs office at 236-2555.

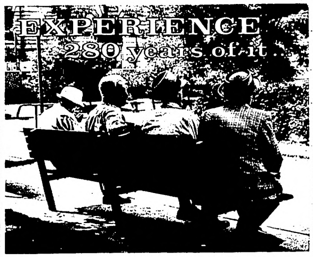
Servant to the World . . .



According to the want-ads, experience is invaluable. Yet on this park bench 280 years of experience add up to boredom.

Religion got involved early in the problems of our senior citizens. Our churches have made us aware of the worth of the individual. And this emphasis on every one of us as equally important before God inspired modern society to look seriously at the concerns and the potential of the aging.

Recently a youth remarked that his Church is the one institution in the community in which young and old command equal respect. "It's where everyone appreciates you if you do whatever you can!"

Strengthen your place of worship as it serves God and our community by doing all you can!

Collecting — A Disease Or Nothing But Pleasure?

by David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

It has been called a disease, but in its most advanced stages, it is nothing but a pleasure.

Collecting, as art historian John Rewald once put it, may take hold of the mind and soul to a degree where there in no escape from it; the fatal symptom of the true collector is his strong acquisitive and possessive instinct, an instinct that rarely reaches a point of saturation.

But unlike any other disease, he added, there are plenty of rewards: the joys of discovery, the delights of conviction, the indescribable pleasures once a coveted object has been secured. "Possession," he said, "not only enriches the owner's experience and enjoyment; it also enables him to share his happiness with others."

For some people, the collecting addiction becomes so severe that it begins to control the direction of their lives. One of the 20th century's most prominent art collectors, the late John Quinn, was so taken with modern paintings that in 1923-24 he sold his valuable collection of rare books and manuscripts at a "fearful slaughter" to buy a new stock of Picassos, Seurats, Rousseaus and other modern masters. Quinn, "an avid reader of medical literature, surely understood the seriousness of his own condition," critic Aline B. Saarine once remarked.

Such art collecting moguls as Quinn, J. Pierpoint Morgan, Charles Lang Freer and Peggy Guggenheim, who years ago voraciously bought everything from Rembrandts to Renoirs, are now a vanishing breed. The dollar doesn't go as far today, of course, and the masters and pioneer modern paintings are now mainly in the nation's public museums.

Yet major collections of art continue to be put together all over the country, and in a way, such institutions as banks and law firms have assumed the role of the influentiol private collector, as they buy prints, paintings and sculpture for their offices. Other collectors, meanwhile, continue to look for specialized or "undiscovered" art to satisfy their acquisitive appetites and stretch smaller budgets.

Today's collections are as diverse as their owners. From the 19th century's staid focus on the masters, rare books and fine objects, an eclectic collecting frenzy has boomed that now encompasses everything from seashells and fishing flies to baseball cards and truck medallions; from fountain pens and paperweights to tribal masks and native pottery; from fine prints and drawings to primitive furniture and ancestral portraits. In fact, almost anything, it would appear, can be collected.

But why? Why do we do it, even when there is little room, if any, left to display all the stuff picked up at flea markets, auction houses and antique shops or discovered along the beach and up in the attic?

"I often wonder what makes people collect theings," Smithsonian Secretary S. Dillon Ripley asked, "The Sacred Grove." "It seems certain that collecting is at least as old as culture."

After a summer of observing two tribes, the Ndani and Uhunduni, living in Stone Age conditions in the mountains of New Guinea, Ripley concluded that their desire to collect was "as highly evolved as any professional coin or stamp collector could wish." Though these people collected for religious, medical or economic reasons, there appeared to Ripley to be another reason in back of the urge for humans to amass things. "Skill and aesthetics enter at an early age," he noted. "The objects made have beauty, style and economy of line."

Today's American collectors share this love of beauty, says Edward P. Lawson, education director at the Smithsonian's Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpruew Garden, and are motivated by the "love of discovery, owning things, completeness and acquisitiveness."

Interestingly, many contemporary collectors say they do not buy an object strictly for its potential to increase in value, but if that happens, so much the better. Instead, they are drawn first by a work's aesthetic appeal and a fascination with their own specialty, be it glass sculpture or tortoise shell boxes.

The novice collector, once he gets the bug, begins to think about specializing in a certain area, Lawson says. "And after a while, he looks at thenigs bought early and says, "That's not my style now."

Some collectors think out their goals in advance, Lawson adds, and devise a "rational plan" for buying. Others buy out of instinct—"They are they are the more emotional purchasers." Joseph Hirshhorn, for example, whose donated collection of 6,000 paintings, drawings and sculptures became the core for the Smithsonian museum that bears his name, is admittedly that type of collector.

"I buy if I get a gut feeling," Hirshhorn said recently. "It starts with the head, then the gut, and the heart....I buy very fast....I will go into a gallery sometimes and see 35 or so paintings. I'll walk around once or twice and I'll say: "Gee, that looks interesting, that looks interesting and that one and so on." Maybe I'll select five or six, and they'll take them out and put them aside."

Hirshhorn and other collectors also say they have a strong desire to help out their favorite artists, get to know them, be their friends. During the 1930's, Hirshhorn assisted scores of artists, "talented men" who were in "bad shape" with bills piling up during the depression.

Some artists eventually come to play a strategic role in directing and refining the collector's taste. Mrs. Potter Palmer, one of the nation's major collectors at the turn of the century, was guided in selecting 19th-century impressionist paintings by her artist friend Mary Cassatt, then living and working in Paris. Today, the Palmer collection is a jewel in the Art Institute of Chicago's unsurpassed collection of impressionist works.

Mary Cassatt also helped shape another great American art collection, that of Henry O. Havemeyer and his wife, steering them to then little-known modern painters such as Courbet, Degas, Cezanne and Manet. Their collection is one of the treasures at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City.

Often as not today, art collections are built from scratch--and quickly--for specific settings, such as bank and corporation offices. Acase in point is acquisition by the Federal Reserve Bandk of Richmond of 415 works between 1977 and 1981 to grace the offices and public spaces of the bank's soaring new office tower alongside the James River.

The guiding concept behind the acquisition program was that the art, most of which was chosen by the "consensus"of a five-member committee, would come from the Mid-Atlantic region the bank serves, according to Jackson L. Blanton, an assistant vice president who served on the selection panel and who administers the bank's art program. The collection was to reflect the spectrum of contemporary art in that area.

Both Blanton and Lawson point out that there are important differences between building private and public collections. "The private collector really can do anything he wants," Lawson says, "whereas museums and other institutions follow master plans that define their interests and goals." In fact, he adds, modern art museums often "must and do look gift horses in the mouth" because some prospective donations have little to do with a musuem's acquisition objectives.

Blanton says that he will consider a work of art for the bank that he does "not particularly like personally," but which he believes is "important" for the collection's completeness. For his own collection, however, Blanton weighs three criteria before purchasing a painting, drawing or sculpture. He must "really like the work," it must have some "investment potential" and he must "respect the body of the artist's other work." Like Hirshhorn, Blanton is interested in knowing and helping artists. "I'd rather buy from an artist than a dealer," he says. "I like being involved with the artist."

For these would-be collectors who say that braces for the kids and new washing machines always seem to eat away at discretionary funds that could be used to purchase a painting or two, Lawson offers this encouragement: "You actually don't need to own an object. Collecting can simply be a matter of looking, forming collections in your mind. I collect museums, for example, visiting and enjoying their collections."

SOLVING PROBLEMS BEFORE THEY HAPPEN.
Lutheran Brotherhood announces MagniMed™... a major medical program with 100% coverage for outpatient surgery and generic drugs.

A major need. What would happen if you or a member of your family suffered a major illness or injury requiring an extended hospital stay, long term treatment, major surgery or a combination of all three? Are you really covered against such catastrophic costs by your current insurance?

Improving on a good thing. Lutheran Brotherhood has recently introduced an extraordinary new major medical plan called MagniMed. It's designed to provide quality coverage at an affordable cost. Broad coverage, too. Unlike most other plans, for example, MagniMed pays a full 100% of your outpatient surgery and generic drug costs after the deductible has been satisfied.

Flexible, million dollar coverage! Among MagniMed's many other features are these:
- There are a number of deductible options so that you can tailor your coverage to what you can afford.
- There's no limit to the number of days or scheduled amount of benefits provided under the plan for intensive care, and room and board is provided based upon average local semi-private room rates.
- Coverage is provided either while confined in a hospital or while being treated as an outpatient.
- Each covered family member is eligible for up to $1,000,000 of lifetime benefits.

Taking the lead. Once again Lutheran Brotherhood has spared no effort to provide Lutherans with the very best in insurance benefits—at a very competitive cost. Once again we're ready and able to help you solve problems before they happen.

Find out now. Don't wait another minute to protect yourself from the kind of calamity that could happen any minute. And if you already have major medical coverage, it could still be very worthwhile to compare it with what MagniMed offers. Call your nearby Lutheran Brotherhood representative today and find out all about MagniMed.

A United Effort

Reminder in today's Times that the United Way campaign will soon be starting again is a reminder that a time for sharing and caring is upon us once again.

Thief River Falls, like so many communities, has never been one to walk away from meeting a need. Community residents have been always willing to help others and to join in efforts for the common good. United Way board members have given of their time, along with many, many volunteer workers, to organize, solicit, collect and distribute in the United Way effort.

It is generally recognized that Thief River Falls is undergoing a downturn in ecoomic activity to some degree, and the United Way has recognized the situation by reducing its goal substantially from a year ago. It is a realistic approach, but there are needs to be met and expenses of participating agencies continue to rise.

Another united effort is needed to make the United Way campaign another success. Each of us will have to respond with a little extra effort ourselves. There is a lot of truth in the slogan that "It works for ALL of us — the United Way."

A Rising Tide?

We received a news release this week froom a group known as the Animal Rights Coalition, Inc., which is sponsoring a three-day national symposium in Bloomington this month. Title of the symposium is "Concern for Animals — A Rising Tide".

Speakers will include Dr. Michael Fox and Cleveland Amory, both well-known among animal rights actitivists. "Animal rights" may be translated into such things as opposition to public hunting and confinement production of domestic livestock.

Amory founded the "Fund for Animals", a group which has attracted the sympathies of a number of national personalities and, subsequently, a ready supply of financing. Fox is head of the Institute for the Study of Animal Problems, as well as an author of a couple of books on animals.

It is likely that the symposium's title has a degree of accuracy. There does seem to be a rising tide of activism in opposition to hunting, trapping of furbearers and use of furs, production of farm animals in confinement operations, even sport fishing. As more people become further removed from the land and the natural environment, the more reality will be unfamiliar and vocal minorities will have their effect.

While much of the effort in the past has been toward swaying public opinion and influencing legislation, animal rights activists have become more overt in their actions. Small groups of them have appeared in the field in the past couple of years, harrassing hunting parties and attempting to disrupt hunting activities. Some states have been forced into considering — and at least one into adopting — special legislation protecting hunting parties in their legally-licensed pursuits.

A speaker at the symposium mentioned in the release is listed as an area representative of Defenders of Wildlife, one of the organizations which has been an in-the-field active body. The "rising tide" of animal activism will likely lead to more of this and confrontation is almost sure to result.

Can you imagine the reaction, for instance, if half a dozen activists ran back and forth at dawn in front of the controlled hunt area at Thief Lake wildlife management area, playing battery-powered stereo sets and waving red flags? Or if they picketed deer check stations and shouted, "Bambi killer!" at every hunting party that stopped there? Or if they invaded Camp Ripley during the bow season and followed archers from their cars, creating a disturbance to drive deer away?

Don't be surprised if any or all of these things and more take place. In some states where hunters have obtained licenses for big game after years of waiting for permits, saving hard-earned money for a life-time hunt, they have been met by militant anti-hunters who attempt to frighten game out of the area and even physically restrain hunters from going afield.

We're sorry to see the start of this movement in Minnesota, a state with an outdoor heritage equal to any state in the nation. A member of the board of directors of the coalition stated in the news release, "Whether or not you work with animals or want to know what issues animal rights groups are grappling with, the September symposium is certain to provide insight as well as controversy. This will be an exciting event!"

The tide is rising. It's time for sportsmen and farmers to get the sea wall built before the flood hits. People rights — including farmers, hunters, trappers and fishermen — must be guaranteed protection by legislative action. We don't want the potential for violence in the outdoors to become reality.

Averages Deceiving

It has been truthfully stated that it's easy to get over your head in water that only averages three feet deep. Averages and percentages can be deceiving. Columnist Larry Windom in the Detroit Lakes newspapers discusses averages as follows:

There is the story about 10 bow-legged girls and 10 knock-knee girls. On the average, then, they were perfect.

Then there is the one about the statisticians hunting ducks. When a duck flew over their blind, one shot high and the other shot low. "On the average," said one hunter to the other, "there flies a dead duck."

These are things to keep in mind when reading about averages and percentages in the newspaper.

There are some interesting averages, taken from the book "American averages: Amazing facts of Everyday Life." From this book, we learn:

—After shaving everyday for 55 years, the average man has spent a total of 138 days, nearly five months, before the mirror. (It's no wonder I hate to waste my time shaving.)

—One of every 33 workers in America works for the federal government, but one of every seven works for state or local government.

—If you're talkative, run for the U.S. Senate where the average senator talks for 109 hours a year. A member of the house gets of only two hours a year from the floor.

—The average person's foot strikes the ground 7,000 times per day per foot.

—The average American worker goofs off for 45 minutes a day, or nearly 10 per cent of his or her time on the job.

—The average American supermarket shopper spends at the rate of 93 cents per minute.

—The average American is most likely to die in March and is least likely to die in August. (That's not so good since August is already past.)

—Only three-fourths of 1978's law school graduates got jobs as lawyers.

—If you are between 30 and 50 years old, the chances are one in 50 that you'll be working for your present employer in five years. The chances are one in 100 that you'll be in the same place 10 years from now, though.

—Compared with the average wages for private industry, janitors in city hall make 56 per cent more in Phoenix, 54 per cent more in Washington and 30 per cent more in Houston.

—The typical magazine sits around the house for 29 weeks before someone throws it away.

Now, on the average, aren't you glad I've told you this?

Warnings May Intensify

Following comment is from the Land O'Lakes Mirror:

The Federal Trade Commission is beginning to suspect that nobody is paying much attention to those taglines that read "Warning, The Surgeon General has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health."

So, according to "Environment" magazine, the commission is plotting something with a little more punch. After a five-year study, staffers have concluded that the current warnings aren't scary enough, because they just don't make enough of a point about specific diseases. According to the study, about 30 per cent of the public is still unaware of the connection between smoking and heart disease. In addition, nearly half of all women know nothing about the risks of smoking during pregnancy.

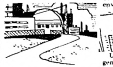
True, you might wonder about getting through to anyone so totally out of touch with the normal flow of information, and there is that tendency these days for even informed people to ignore the most explicit warnings. Perhaps a listing of the symptoms of all the diseases associated with smoking might make more of an impression.

In any case, at-least, one group seems to feel the new labeling recommendations might get through to smokers. The Tobacco Institute plans to file detailed comments in opposition to the FTC recommendations.

FACTS & FIGURES

Experts indicate that coal and nuclear are the energy technologies most capable of producing large-scale alternatives to imported oil for the generation of electricity from now until at least the year 2000.

Coal is the nation's most abundant energy resource. There is enough to last at least several hundred years, point out the experts at General Electric, which is spending millions to produce electricity from coal without harming the environment.



The U.S. has more than two decades experience in building and operating nuclear power plants. Last year, for the first time, nuclear energy passed oil as a primary fuel for generating electricity in the U.S.

ELECTRICITY GENERATION

U.S. nuclear electric generation is now delivering each day the power equivalent of five tankers, each filled with 260,000 barrels of imported oil. Nuclear power meets about 13 percent of U.S. electrical needs at costs well below those for fossil fuel generation.

Dealing With Federal Budget Cuts

President Ronald Reagan has been successful in enacting strict budget cuts at the federal level. His budgetary reform is similar to what we have been able to achieve in Minnesota during my administration. In fact, in percentage terms Minnesota is ahead of the federal government. I recommended and the Legislature enacted a 9 percent reducation in spending and requests during the past year; Reagan's federal cuts represent a 6 percent reduction. Minnesota therefore has cut 50 percent more than the federal government.

Despite my agreement with Reagan's budgetary policy, we must acknowledge that federal budget cuts will have an impact on state and local governments.

In mid-July I asked Kent Eklund, Commissioner of the Department of Energy, Planning and Development, to head a state Task Force on Federal Budget Reductions. The task force reported last week that due to federal budget cuts Minnesota would receive $200 million less in federal funds than originally anticipated for 1982.

It is important to note that the federal money that Minnesota receives is completely separate from state revenues. The $8.7 billion state budget figure frequently referred to for the next two years is state money only. In addition to that amount, the state is now expecting to receive $1.6 billion in federal funding for 1982. Before the specifics of the federal budget were adopted estimates were that Minnesota would receive $1.8 billion in 1982.

Further, one point that I want to make totally clear is that state government is very unlikely to pick up local expenses formerly funded by Washington.

Local Government Involvement

The task force report states that reduced federal funding, changes in state funding levels for aids and programs, and property tax levy limitations combine to place local goverenement under serious strain. It says state government must be aware of this and search for ways to be helpful.

I concur that there will be pressures on local government, and I agree that state government should be responsive to them. But because state government connot pick up the slack, people in local communities will be expected to decide for themselves whether to continue funding such programs.

In this regard, I have directed my commissioners and members of my staff to establish an intergovernmental task force for each program area experiencing serious cutbacks. Membership of such an intergovernmental task force will include, as appropriate, representatives of local government, legislators, members of my administration, private vendors and recipients.

Further, I have asked Commissioner Eklund to have a staff paper developed on new joint governmental financing measures.

The major change in fiscal philosophy emanating from Washington is happening very quickly. State and local officials have very little time to plan and implement these changes.

I'm pleased, though, that we have taken these early steps in Minnesota, and am confident that we will be as well-prepared as any state in the nation in adjusting effectively, and smoothly, to fundamentally new economic conditions.

Insurances For Condominiums Are Somewhat Unique

One could update the old saying, "When in Rome, do as the Romans do" to declare, "When in America, do as the Romans did!" Condominiums, well known to the citizens of ancient Rome, have made their way through the ages to become a housing alternative for modern America.

Buying a condominium entitles you to essentially two things: exclusive ownership of your unit and an "undivided interest" in common areas of the development with the other unit owners.

These two features attempt to combine the worlds of homeownership and rental structures (such as apartments). Like a single family home, exclusive ownership means that a unit may be sold, mortgaged, insured, taxed and leased. The legal definition of a unit usually refers to the space embraced by the interior walls.

Unlike owning your own home, you do not have exclusive ownership of such property as land or recreational facilities. These become common areas in a condominium complex and you share the ownership of them. Besides the land on which the condominium has been built, common areas include exterior walls, roof, hallways, elevators, stairways and lobbies.

One of the advantages of shared ownership is that you, as an individual, are not directly responsible for the maintenance of these areas. However, you do pay a fee to the association for the cost of the maintenance and insurance of the common areas. Also, you are not free to build on or alter these areas on your own as you would be if you had exclusive rights to this property.

As a unit owner, you have an agreement with your condominium association (of which you are a member) which states the terms of your purchase. "It is very important to read the association agreement and find out what property you are responsible for insuring," advises Jim Witt of a major insurance company's personal insurance department. This means understanding the limit of coverage on the association's policy and the perils and damages covered by the insurance policy. Policies will usually vary from association to association so do not take anything for granted.

Witt cites four areas of coverage to the basic unit owner's policy:

(1) Personal Property. This provides coverage for exactly what it says — your personal property. A straightforward determination of how much insurance you need to cover your personal belongings can be made with little difficulty. Simply take an inventory of your personal property — such as clothing, furniture and dishes — and make your best assessment of what these items are worth. Being able to prove the value of these items, as with receipts or appraisals, is important.

(2) Additions and Alterations. "This can be tricky," warns Witt. "The title is a bit of a misnomer." The coverage actually includes parts of the building within the unfinished interior walls, floors and ceilings of the owner's unit, in addition to any changes you might make. This would include such things as kitchen cabinets, counter space and bathroom fixtures.

Close scrutiny of the association's agreement — perhaps with the eyes of an attorney — should clarify exactly what you own and most insure. Unlike a single-family home, the total amount paid for a condominium does not represent the value of what is exclusively yours to insure (i.e. land). "The difficulty then becomes assigning a dollar value to your property," said Witt, "and, this is where your nsurance agent can help." The amount of coverage you need can then be set. If and when you do alter your unit in any way, the limit of liability can be increased.

(3) Rental Coverage. At some time during the year, you may want to rent out your condominium unit as a secondary home to someone. The owner's condominium policy excludes coverage for the owner's personal property situated in the unit while it is rented to others. These exclusions can be removed for an additional policy premium charge.

(4) Loss Assessment — is standard in some policies and optional in others. This pays for the owner's share of an assessment charged against all unit owners because of losses incurred by the association. In order for loss assessment ccoverage to be applicable:

—The assessment must be charged against all unit owners.

—The damage or loss must be caused by a peril (i.e. fire) which is insured against in the unit-owner's policy.

—The damage must be caused to property that is collectively owned by all of the unit owners.

This coverage would also be effective for liability suits brought against the association which would be covered by the liability section of the unit owner's policy.

For instance, say a person has an accident falling down on the sidewalk (a common area), sues the condominium association, and is awarded $600,000 in damages. If the association is only covered for $400,000, the remaining $200,000 will likely be made up by assessing the individual unit owners. Loss assessment coverage would absorb this assessment subject to the limit of coverage which you purchased.

Your policy will clearly list the perils you are covered for and the limit for each of the coverages. "Make sure you understand the terms of your policy," recommended Witt, "and, if you have any questions, don't hesitate to ask your insurance agent."

NEWS IN PICTURES

Under a demonstration program initiated by the U.S. Department of Energy in 1978, some 75 companies, universities and government agencies are taking part in a nationwide project that could provide an alternative to conventional gasoline engines. They're operating about 1,500 vehicles driven by battery-powered electric motors.

The leading non-governmental participant in the program is General Telephone & Electronics Corporation (GTE). Ten of its telephone companies are operating a total of 170 small battery-powered pick-up trucks, vans and two-door sedans.

The program is designed to do several things. By putting vehicles similar to the electric vans above on the roads, the government hopes to increase public awareness of electric vehicles as an alternative to gas-consuming cars.

In addition, the program is helping the government evaluate the technical and operational characteristics of electric vehicles to determine how well they meet the needs of business, academic and government organizations.

The program is expected to involve some 10,000 electric vehicles by its completion in 1986. It's estimated that more than 2,000 electric autos are now in service in this country, exclusive of those taking part in the Energy Department's program. The program is being conducted under the Electric and Hybrid Vehicle Research, Development and Demonstration Act of 1976.

Quiz Reveals What Drugs Do To Body

by Jeanne Hanson

Most of the 18 million marijuana smokers and 150 million drinkers in this country probably know their bongs and corkscrews pretty well. But they may not know as much about what these two commonly used drugs are doing to their bodies.

James M. Schaefer, director of alcohol and other drug abuse programming at the University of Minnesota, has provided information for a comparison of the two drugs in the following quiz. To test your knowledge of the effects of marijuana and alcohol, decide if you think these statements are true or false:

(1) Alcohol and marijuana are essentially the same in their mood-altering qualities.

(2) Alcohol is more addictive than marijuana.

(3) Marijuana remains in the body longer than alcohol does.

(4) Overuse of marijuana leads to worse hangovers than does overuse of alcohol.

(5) Women get "high" more easily than men on either drug.

(6) Drivers are more dangerous after drinking alcohol than after smoking marijuana.

(7) People who overuse marijuana are a greater general danger than are excessive drinkers.

(8) Alcohol causes greater sleep disturbances than marijuana.

(9) Marijuana users have worse memory problems than drinkers do.

(10) Marijuana puts more stress on the heart than does alcohol.

(11) Alcohol causes more psychological problems than marijuana does.

(12) Alcohol is more harmful to the reproductive system than marijuana is.

(13) Marijuana is not as bad for pregnant women as alcohol is.

(14) Alcohol has more positive effects than marijuana does.

(1) False. Although both drugs have a calming effect, marijuana can produce hallucinations. Alcohol, however, is essentially a sedative. Alcohol can cause hallucinations in the delirium tremens or "DT" stage of intense withdrawal.

(2) True. Deprived of alcohol, chronic drinkers suffer physical withdrawal. But long-term users of marijuana (those who smoke six or more cigarettes a day) show no such symptoms; they experience a milder type of withdrawal.

Both drugs, however, can create psychological dependency--a process that begins with occasional enjoyment, proceeds to the level of habit, becomes a craving and ends with the need to use the drug to feel normal, Schaefer said.

In heavy use of alcohol, the last stage seems to be caused by alcohol-induced changes in cell membranes in the brain, liver and other parts of the body. Those cells membranes become regid and remain so until more alcohol is consumed, according to a study cited in Science magazine.

(3) True. Alcohol is expelled from the body within eight to 36 hours, depending on the initial dose. The THC (marijuana's active ingredient) in one cigarette remains in the body for four to six weeks occasionally creating mild flashback experiences.

The two drugs differ so much in this respect, Schaefer said, because the body has a natural chemical system for ridding itself of alcohol which is a carbohydrate. Carbohydrates are produced in our bodies in small amounts every day from certain foods.

Marijuana, however, is stored in fat cells; the body's biochemical system for its removal is not nearly as efficient. Crash diets that deplete the body's fat cells can rid the body of marijuana a bit more quickly.

(4) False. Marijuana does not create hangovers. When overused, alcohol can cause thirst, headaches, rapid heartbeat, sweating, nausea and diarrhea as it leaves the body.

(5) True. Since women are generally smaller than men, the same amount of either drug has a greater impact on their bodies. Women also have a larger proportion of fat cells, which store marijuana. Women are even more susceptible to the drugs just before their menstrual period because their bodies retain water and their metabolic processes slow.

(6) False. Both pose serious risks. Marijuana affects perception, accuracy and reaction time and can cause short-term memory loss. The effects of alcohol are similar, although individual reactions vary. A drink or two with dinner may actually improve the driving skills of a nervous driver. But chronic heavy drinking can irreversibly impair night vision, Schaefer said new research indicates.

(7) False. Since alcohol is a legal and commonly used drug, the public accepts more bizarre and dangerous behavior from its users. Heavy marijuana use is not as common or obvious, so its effect on the public is not as widespread.

(8) True. Marijuana is not known to cause any sleep disturbances. Alcohol suppresses the deepest stage of sleep and disrupts the rapid eye movement stage, where most dreaming occurs. Both alcohol-related disturbances can occur after one night of drinking and in chronic alcoholics when no alcohol has been consumed.

(9) False. Marijuana interferes with short-term memory skills involving reaction time, number manipulation and perception, but it does not disrupt well-learned habits. Chronic alcohol use can create serious memory deterioration; even occasional overuse can cause blackouts--a type of temporary amnesia, Schaefer said.

(10) True. Marijuana increases the heart rate by more than 50 percent, putting stress on the circulatory system. Schaefer said heart patients are strongly advised not ot use the drug. The long-term effect of marijuana on young users has not been studied.

One or two drinks a day may benefit the heart by activating the chemicals that scrub artery walls. Studies have also shown that heart attack victims who give up alcohol are more likely to die from second heart attacks than those who continue to drink, Schaefer said, but long-term abuse of alcohol is related to high blood pressure and is bad for the heart.

(11) False. Alcohol disrupts thought processes, but marijuana causes emotional shifts that may result in paranoia. Marijuana also disrupts abstract thinking and verbal skills. Research is under way to determine whether these effects are permanent, Schaefer said.

(12) True. But chronic use of either drug has serious effects. Long-term abuse of alcohol reduces fertility, impairs males' ability to develop healthy sperm and can even cause the testicles to atrophy. Chronic use of marijuana interferes with female fertility by disrupting ovulation; in males it reduces sperm levels, can damage sperm and can cause impotence. But, Schaefer said, marijuana's effects seem to be temporary.

(13) False. Both cross the placenta from the mother to the fetus whose enzyme systems cannot process either drug. Both can cause lower birth weight, stillbirths and other abnormalities that are still being studied.

The serious effects of drinking are at least better known; one of every 600 babies born show signs of fetal alcohol syndrome (FAS). Birth defects such as facial abnormalities, central nervous system disorders and mental retardation have been linked to FAS and chronic alcoholism in pregnant women.

(14) True. Marijuana is useful in small doses for treating glaucoma, the nausea caused by some cancer treatments, asthma and perhaps for blocking the pain messages of the central nervous systems. But its disadvantages outweigh its advantages for most people.

The relaxation induced by marijuana can better be found through small doses of alcohol, one or two drinks a week, which have no apparent ill effects. But alcohol is a "baffling, cunning, powerful and patient drug" that must always be carefully watched, Schaefer said.

A score of 12 to 14 is excellent; 9 to 13 is good; 6 to 8 is average; and fewer than six answers means you may want more information.

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

SUCCESS: HOW ONE COMPANY DID IT

This story of a company that saw a new market opening up and raised its profits by buckling down and going after it, could serve as an example to other companies on how to get ahead.

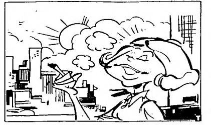
The American Tobacco Company, a division of American Brands, Inc., has made good progress in the "low tar" field recently.

The Federal Trade Commission's most recent report measuring the tar content of most cigarettes currently available in the U.S., showed no cigarette to be lower than its Carlton Box product. Today's Carlton has even less tar than the version tested for the government's 1981 report.

Despite new low tar brands introduced since, Carlton Box has maintained its leadership position as the cigarette lowest in tar (less than 0.01 mg. tar, 0.002 mg. nicotine).

In the early 1960s, The American Tobacco Company recognized the demand for a low tar cigarette and assigned the development of such a product to its Department of Research and Development. The first Carlton cigarette was introduced in the New York, Chicago and Los Angeles markets in January, 1964. It was the first brand—and for years the only brand—to print tar and nicotine data on the pack.

The timeliness of the original Carlton concept is underscored by the fact that approximately 40 percent of all cigarettes sold today are identified as "low tar."



The company that created one of the first low tar cigarettes has what is now the lowest tar cigarette.

Keeping Wild Pets Not An Easy Task

by Robert L. Stear, D.V.M.

Just as you close the door of your summer cottage for the last time, your 13-year-old son runs up with a gift from the boy next door. It's a young raccoon. "Can I take it home?" he asks. "It eats regular dog food, and is just like a puppy." Right? Wrong!

A wild or exotic pet is not the same as a domesticated animal. It will require special attention and care to thrive in your household. You should ask several questions before bringing your wild pet home. Will the pet require special food or housing? Is it healthy? Does it have any unusual requirements?

If you have the opportunity, let your veterinarian discuss the wild pet's characteristics with you. Then you can examine the pet before accepting it, and be alert for signs of ill health, including dull eyes or dirty coat. You should also schedule an early visit to your veterinarian if you do decide to bring the pet home.

In deciding where to keep an exotic or wild pet, note that some animals, especially those from the tropics, require more warmth than most cats and dogs. Their living quarters should be draft-proof as well as escape-proof. Considerable damage has been done by "escaped" monkeys and large parrots.

Certain animals require special accommodations inside the cage too. Snakes, for example, need a retreat — a large piece of broken flower pot, or hollow piece of wood. Lizards accustomed to licking rain from wet foliage may not drink from a bowl. You cn satisfy their moisutre requirement by placing a wet plant in the cage each morning.

Make sure you know what your new pet will eat before you buy it. Although reptiles do not eat often, many times their food must be live, or they will refuse to eat and starve. The same rule holds for certain large spiders. Make sure the pet store owner informs you of the animal's requirements. Not all veterinarians are fully knowledgeable about wild animal nutrition. Veterinarians with experience in exotic animal medicine can help you design a balanced diet, including vitamin supplements, for most pets.

Keeping a wild pet health is not an easy job. Monkeys, for instance, are extremely susceptible to tuberculosis; even zoos have problems keeping them sell. And there are few sprays or vaccines that are marketed for use on wild animals. Such animals as raccoons, skunks or otters are susceptible to both cat and dog diseases, and must be immunized against both feline and canine distemper.

Most veterinarians discourage keeping wild mammals (warm-blooded animals) as pets. When these animals are captured in the wild, it is impossible to be sure they are free from rabies, a disease fatal to man. There is, in fact, a constant reservior of rabies in the native population of skunks, raccoons, bats, foxes and other wild mammals. Every year, cases are reported where wild animals held in captivity suddenly begin to show signs of rabies after weeks or months of apparent good health. In such situations, all human beings in contact with the affected animal must undergo a series of therapeutic injections.

If you are determined to keep a wild pet, try to find someone who has kept your type of animal before, so that you can learn something about its disposition. Wild pets are often independent creatures, and may disappoint you with their lack of affection. Also make sure that your new pet fits into your normal household routine. Some animals are active only at night, and quickly bore owners who see a sleeping ball of fur day after day. If you travel frequently, check before buying for someone in your vincinity willing to care for your pet while you are away.

Some wild pets are being domesticated with considerable success. Gerbils (small mouse-like rodents) are now common in pet stores across the country. Chameleons, small frogs and toads, easily satisfied with a diet of raw meat and small bugs, all life and interested to balanced terrariums.

The demand for wild animals as pets is, of course, causing problems. For every 10 animals captured for dealers, only one or two survive long enough to be sold. And the growing interest in exotic animals is encouraging a black market in endangered species.

One last caution: an exotic pet is easier to acquire than to discard. Zoos flooded with pleas to accept partially-tamed raccoons and the like probably will not take your pet if you tire of it. The pet store where you purchased your lizard, snake or spider will want it only if it's in saleable condition — well-fed, and healthy. And pets turned loose in the woods or fields after a period of captivity may starve before they learn to catch their own food, and otherwise have problems adjusting to their new environment.

Hints For Homeowners

LOG SPLITTER CUTS TIME, COST

The energy crisis created a demand for alternatives and Americans responded in a variety of ways—some new. . .like synthetic oil or gas, some dating back to Grandpa's day. . .like the woodburning stove.

Although these stoves are now an accepted—and welcome—fixture in many modern-day "parlors," keeping them fired poses a challenge, especially the strenuous and time-consuming job of splitting logs to size, or paying the added cost—typically up to 50%—of buying wood already split.

Woodburners should welcome a new device: an economical electric log splitter that not only splits wood to usable sizes quickly, but trims expenses as well.

The electric log splitter is made by Flowtron, a division of Armatron International, of Melrose, Mass., and retails for under $400, considerably less than gas-powered, heavy-duty models. It is safer and faster than using a maul or heavy sledge hammer. The unique double-wedge design and reversible ram action splits logs in both directions, so the owner doesn't have to wait for the ram to return. And the log splitter automatically turns itself off at the end of each split, enabling the operator to stack or get the next log ready.

The splitter's patented power train and UL-listed motor exerts a force in excess of seven tons, and is capable of handling logs up to 26 inches long.

This new electric log splitter easily splits logs up to 26 inches long.

Clean, efficient and portable, the Flowtron log splitter can be used in garages or basements, as well as the outdoors. It runs on a standard 110/115 volt, 15-amp household current conveyed by any standard heavy-duty three-pronged extension cord. The splitter also boasts a switch which automatically shuts off the motor to prevent overload.

It's surely another example of American ingenuity on the firing line.

CPAs — Student Aid Available For Adults

If you are the one adult in five who is enrolled in college or an adult education program you should be aware of the wide variety of loans, grants and scholarships available to you. In addition, adults can often take advantage of tuition reimbursement plans at work, as well as income tax breaks, says the Minnesota society of certified public accountants (CPAs).

More than 18 million adults are part-time college students and over one-third of all college students are over 25. Many financial aid programs are aimed at special adult categories such as women reentering the job market, mid-life career changers and senior citizens. CPAs say, so with careful financial planning and available aid, anyone should be able to continue his or her education.

According to the national center for education statistics, more than half the adult education courses are taken for job-related reasons with business, engineering and health-care sciences the most frequently studied. If your employer offers tuition reimbursement, you will most likely be reimbursed after you complete the course. However, if you are unable to accumulate the money in advance to pay for the course, it may be worth asking your employer to make a loan of the tuition. That way, if you finish the course, it is all paid for. If you don't you will have to reimburse your employer. Most plans will pay for studies directly related to your work, but some company plans are more liberal and may also apply to families of employees.

Most of the federal aid programs available to regular college students are also available to adults, but regardless of age, you must be taking at least six credits per semester or a part-time college load. Many adult students carry this for an evening program. You may be eligible for the basic educational Opportunity Grants (BEOG); supplemental educational opportunity grants (SEOG); national direct student loans (NDSL); or guaranteed student loans GSL). For information on these grants and low interest loans call toll free (800) 638-6700.

Federal government also provides aid to part-time students in the form of income tax deductions for education-related expenses, say CPAs. However, to deduct these expenses, your education must maintain or upgrade your skills in your current job, be required by your employer or help you keep your position. You may deduct the cost of tuition and fees as well as books, supplies and any travel and lodging related to this education.

There are an especially large number of financial aid opportunities for women--especially homemakers returning to the work force--sponsored by businesses, foundations and associations. These include the Clairol scholarship program, business and professional women's foundation, the Altrusa international foundation in Chicago, Diuguid fellowship program in Atlanta, the Soroptimist clubs, the American association of university women, the daughters of the American revolution and Kelly services. Some of these are not limited to tuition only, and funds can be awarded for child care, transportation, and travel expenses. Be sure to have all these expenses estimated before you apply for aid, CPAs say.

If you are a veteran, contact your local Veterans administration office for information on education benefits. Spouses and children of deceased veterans are also eligible for education benefits. As a senior citizen, many public or private institutions will charge you little or no tuition.

Special fields, such as medical services, offer financial aid with the assumption that the student will eventually work in that field. U.S. department of health and human services will grant loans for nurses, for instance, and forgive the loan if the nurse will agree to work for two years in federally designated shortage areas.

You may be able to finance your tuition payment through the school or agency you are attending. It usually pays to ask, because the school often will bend the rules to accommodate you. Most college financial aid programs are for students studying at least half time, but there are exceptions, so ask around and don't give up if one school turns you down.

Flavor Secrets by Lea Perrins

WORCESTERED FISH IS CHEF'S SECRET

Whether you do your fishing in a river, ocean or at your local market, it's helpful to keep in mind a seasoning secret for fish used by many chefs. The original Worcestershire sauce. No matter which kind of fish you "catch," or how you prepare it, a few shakes from the handy bottle gives a nice flavor pick-up to the delicate fish.

For sauteed fish, dip fish fillets in Worcestershire then coat with bread crumbs and saute as usual in butter or margarine and oil.

If you're broiling the fillets, brush them with Lea & Perrins Worcestershire Sauce, sprinkle with lemon juice and dot with butter before sliding under the broiler. (This combination can also be used when baking the fish fillets in a preheated 375° F. oven.)

For fish go-alongs, Worcestered tartar sauce tastes quite special. Just stir in 1 teaspoon original Worcestershire sauce to 2/3 cup of prepared tartar sauce. And for a first-rate cocktail sauce for shellfish, add 1 teaspoon Worcestershire and a dash of lemon juice to ½ cup of chili sauce.

Stangeland: Interest Rates Must Go Down

"Unless interest rates are lowered significantly and quickly, the economic revival we have all been working for will be delayed or stifled," Rep. Arlan Stangeland said in letters to President Ronald Reagan, federal reserve board chairman Paul Wolcker, and his 434 colleagues in the House of Representatives.

"High interest rates are choking off new economic growth, are threatening millions of small businessmen and farmers, are complicating the unemployment picture, are contributing to the return of double-digit inflation, and are boosting the federal deficit and the cost of servicing the national debt," Stangeland said.

"Interest rates, which are hovering above 20 per cent for most borrowers, are acting as a brake on the positive economic forces created by the tax cuts and spending reductions passed by Congress this summer," Stangeland said.

"The most immediate impact of the current high interest rates is being felt by millions of small businessmen and farmers," the congressman said. "While big companies can afford to absorb the high costs of borrowing money by rolling those costs into their products' prices, the little guys are being crowded out of the credit market. And those small businesses which depend on reasonable levels of consumer credit, such as the home-building industry and car dealers, are facing bankruptcy."

"These trends are threatening to stop our economic recovery in its tracks," Stangeland said. "After all, it is the small businesses which we hope will create most of the 13 million new jobs over the next five years, and it is the farmers who we hope will increase their productivity and assure an adequate food supply. If high interest rates are crippling small businessmen and farmers, we can't expect them to create new jobs, harvest more food, or keep prices down."

Interest rates are being kept artificially high by the tight monetary policies of the Federal Reserve Board (FRB). Reagan supports the tight monetary policies advocated by FRB chairman Volcker as part of the White House's comprehensive economic recovery package.

"I support the president's economis program, but conditions have changed significantly since the Congress passed the tax reforms and spending reductions," Stangeland said. It is time for the president and Mr. Volcker to reconsider the usefulness of their tight monetary policy."

"For example, the high interest rates are now contributing to inflation," the congressman said. "Last month, we saw the return of double-digit inflation. Although there were moderate increases in food prices, most of July's inflation boost came from leaps in the cost of cars and homes. Until interest rates and mortgage costs come down, those two items will keep inflation at high levels.

"These ruinous rates are contributing to inflation in another significant way," Stangeland continued. "For every one-per cent increase in interest rates, the cost of servicing the national debt increases by $2 million in the current year and by $7 billion over the next four years. Current rates have already expanded next year's deficit by at least $10 billion, erasing the benefits of one third of the spending cuts Congress approved this summer. These high rates are steadily deepening the deficit and are moving us ever further away from a balanced budget.

"Under the current economic conditions, the tight monetary policy is doing exactly the opposite of what it is supposed to do," the congressman said. "It is contributing to inflation in several ways, it is choking off the economic renewal we hope to kindle, it is forcing small businessmen and farmers to the brink of bankruptcy, and it is preventing millions of Americans from finding jobs which could have been created this summer.

"Normally, a tight monetary policy does control inflation," Stangeland said. "But under these conditions, we can have a tight monetary policy that fuels inflation and restricts the economy, or we can have a more generous monetary policy which lowers interest rates, stimulates economic growth, and encourages the creation of a broader tax base."

The congressman called on the president to apply all appropriate pressure and persuasion of FRB chairman Volcker, to encourage the FRB to ease its policy. He made a direct appeal to Mr. Volcker to do the same. And he asked his colleagues in the House to make similar appeals.

"The bankers in my district tell me that the money for loans is there, but that the FRB's tight monetary policy is keeping the rates artifically high," Stangeland said. "If we can ease that policy, interest rates will come down, loans will be made, and we will be on the road to recovery and prosperity."

Yesterday's roast becomes tomorrow's dinner in this "planned-over" entrée.

When is a leftover not a leftover? When it's a "planned-over." By planning ahead, it's easy to save time and money by stretching one meal into two.

For example, this beef and pasta skillet yields three servings at seventy cents per serving by utilizing yesterday's roast beef and green beans. The basic ingredient is canned Franco-American Spaghetti in Tomato Sauce with Cheese—a convenient and economic staple that adds a zingy new taste to "planned-overs."

PRONTO PASTA SKILLET

2 tbsp. chopped onion
1 tbsp. butter
1 can (14-3/4 oz.) Franco-American Spaghetti in Tomato Sauce with Cheese
1 c. cubed cooked beef
1 c. cooked cut green beans
1/4 tsp. garlic salt

In saucepan, cook onion in butter until tender. Stir in remaining ingredients. Heat; stir occasionally. Makes about 3 cups, 3-4 servings.

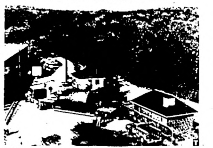
Little-Known Facts About Water



After installation at the well site, this adsorber (round vessel) is filled with carbon granules that make polluted water pure and safe to drink for some 11,000 people in Rockaway Township.

Did you know that more than 100 million Americans are supplied with drinking water from our nation's vast underground water supplies? Each day over four billion gallons of drinking water is pumped from private and municipal wells.

Once considered pristine repositories of pure, fresh water, many of the underground aquifers which hold groundwater are now chemically polluted.

For generations, millions of pounds of chemicals — some hazardous to human health — have polluted aquifers from past practices of improper landfill disposal; from leakage of buried, containerized wastes; from septic tanks, and from ruptured underground gasoline and other chemical storage tanks.

Eckardt C. Beck, the EPA's former assistant administrator for water and waste management, testified to Congress in 1980 that "thousands" of additional cases of groundwater pollution would be found in the U.S. in the coming years. He called groundwater contamination one of the most serious environmental problems of the 1980s.

In the industrialized Northeast, hundreds of wells have been shut down due to chemical tainting of the groundwater. Rockaway Township, New Jersey, is one community that has taken steps to solve its contaminated groundwater problem.

After discovering trichloroethylene (TCE) — a suspected cancer-causing industrial solvent — and other chemicals in its well water, the Township installed a granular activated carbon adsorption system supplied by Calgon Corporation, Pittsburgh.

The carbon system can remove organic chemicals in the water to non-detectable levels. Highly porous carbon granules attract and adsorb organic chemicals from the water and, after this treatment, the water is safe to drink.

The two adsorbers at Rockaway Township hold 20,000 pounds of carbon each. They process and purify about one million gallons of water a day.

Total cost for this type of water treatment system may range from 20 cents to $2 per person per month, depending on contaminants in the water, concentration of contaminants, water flow, and other factors.

Write to Calgon Corporation, Department G, P.O. Box 1346, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15230 for a free booklet about the national groundwater problem and carbon solution.

Barbecue May Add Spice To Summer

by Linda St. Thomas
Smithsonian News Service

Summer just wouldn't be summer — at least not in America — without barbeque.

"Sitting around eating ribs or chicken coated with a tangy sauce and cooked over an open fire is my idea of a perfect night," barbeque expert W.J. Strickland says. His 20 years' experience behind the grill recently earned him a spot at the Smithsonian's 15th annual festival of American folklife where he cooked ribs from 5 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily for two weeks.

Barbeque is a tradition of the South, but you don't have to be a Southerner to enjoy it. You just have to know what you're doing, take your time cooking and not mind messy fingers, Strickland advises.

At the festival, Strickland and fellow expert Grover Price of Tarbaro, N.C., cooked on 14-foot-long open pits made of cement blocks, going through about 1,600 pounds of ribs and 600 pounds of chicken a day, all topped with 30 gallons of sauce. At home, though, most people will be using standrad outdoor grills to cook modest amounts of ribs, chicken or chopped beef.

Say you're cooking up some barbeque in your backyard. What's the first thing to do? Work on that critical element, the fire. If it's just charcoal, use only 10 or 12 coals and wait until they begin to turn ash white before putting the meat on, Price says. For a lighter flavor and a great aroma, you may use hickory and oak chips with a smaller amount of charcoal.

Either way, the experts agree, it takes at least 40 minutes for the charcoal, or the coal and wood combination, to be "just right" for the meat. Too many people rush this process and put meat over cold charcoals or over flames, charring the outside and leaving uncooked pork or chicken inside.

"The quality of meat is important in a barbeque," Strickland says. "You can't just cook any old fatty meat and expect it to taste great with sauce." He and Price prefer three-down ribs, that is, slabs of spare ribs that weigh three pounds or less. (The larger slabs, for example, five and six pounds, have tougher meat with more fat). Ribs are cooked for an hour to an hour-and-a-half and the large pieces of chicken (broilers or fryers) should stay on the grill about an hour.

Knowing precisely when the meat is done is a tricky business; sometimes it's just a question of experience. But in the meantime, novice cookers may test by inserting a sharp knife into the meat to be sure it's not pink.

If you have good meat, there's no need to marinate it overnight. The only thing you might want to do before cooking, Price recommends, is to trim some of the fat from the back of the ribs.

Now, about that barbeque sauce. First of all, in many southern families the recipe is a secret, passed down from grandfather to father to son, with some modifications along the way. It can be tomato-based, vinegar-based, mustard-based, chili-flavored and even flavored with fruit or honey. There's no one authentic Southern-Style barbeque sauce, so it's fine to disagree over the best recipe.

Most old-time barbequers in the South do agree as to when to brush the "secret" sauce onto the meat — approximately five to 10 minutes before it's done. Of course, you must turn the meat several times after the sauce has been brushed on both sides. If you cook meat for the full hour or so with barbeque sauce on it, the sauce turns black and has that burned flavor instead of a nice tangy taste, Price adds. He has tried all kinds of sauces but now sticks to his grandfather's recipe.

For many women, perhaps the best part of the these cookouts is the fact that husbands who steadfastly refuse to prepare meals in the kitchen become barbeque gourmets during the summertime, branching out from the traditional hamburgers and hot dogs to barbeque sauces on chicken and ribs.

"It's relaxing for me to come home from work and start to cook outdoors," says Strickland, who began by watching his father do barbeques. "It's only too bad more people don't teach their children to barbeque. It's a fun way to teach them how to cook."

Now, what do you serve with the ribs and chicken? For a complete Southern meal, try potato salad, baked beans, corn on the cob, hot bread or rolls and a simple fruit pie, say peach or strawberry. At the folklife festival, they served banana pudding for dessert. (A layer of vanilla pudding is placed in a large baking dish topped with a layer of vanilla wafer cookies and slices of banana. This is repeated three times and the pudding is refrigerated for a few hours before serving.)

Then again, if you really follow the traditional Southern-style barbeque menu, you may not have room for dessert.

One recipe for barbeque sauce used at the 1981 Smithsonian festival of American folklife was not a secret:

Barbeque Sauce (2 Quarts)

3 chickens halved or several three-down ribs
2 cups catsup
½ cup beer
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup olive oil
2 tablespoons minced onion
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons soy or Teriyaki sauce
1 tablespoon vinegar
2 tablespoons minced garlic
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon basil leaves
1 teaspoon dry mustard
¾ teaspoon thyme
½ teaspoon oregano
½ teaspoon chili powder
¼ teaspoon cayenne

Mix all sauce ingredients in a two-quart saucepan and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer about 10 minutes. When the meat is just about done, brush sauce on and turn. Repeat several times for five or 10 minutes. Remaining sauce may be heated and served on the side.

Under the initiative of the Federation of Organized Trades and Labor Unions, some 340,000 workers participated in a movement for an 8-hour day in 1886, according to "Important Events in American Labor History," published by the U.S. Department of Labor.

Tips On Your Teeth

Good oral hygiene is important to the prevention of tooth decay and an attractive set of teeth.

Each year, hundreds of people contact The Dental Society of the State of New York to find out what kind of dental specialist they should go to for care.

According to Dr. Edward Whalen, Dental Society president, there are eight areas of dental specialization besides the general practitioner. He offers the following "dictionary of dental specialties":

Orthodontics is the science of tooth and oral structure development. The orthodontist treats problems related to irregular dental development, missing teeth, and other abnormalities in order to establish normal functioning and appearance.

Oral surgery includes a broad scope of diagnostic, operative and related services dealing with diseases, injuries and defects in the jaws and associated structures.

Oral pathology is concerned with the nature of diseases of the mouth, a study of their causes, processes and effects. The oral pathologist may not necessarily treat the diseases directly but may provide counsel and guidance to the other specialists who do provide treatment.

Endodontics deals with the causes, diagnoses, prevention and treatment of diseases of the pulp and other dental tissues which affect the vitality of teeth.

Pedodontics is limited to the treatment of children, adolescents and young adults whose dental development is not complete.

Periodontics is the science of diseases which affect the oral mucous membranes, as well as other structures which surround and support the teeth.

Prosthodontics deals with replacing missing natural teeth and associated structure with fixed or removable substitutes.

Dental Public Health is the control and prevention of dental disease and the promotion of oral health through organized community efforts. It is a form of dentistry which treats the community as a patient, rather than as individuals.

Good daily oral hygiene, proper diet and regular checkups are the best ways to prevent problems before they start, says Dr. Whalen. They'll save you time and money in the long run.

Parking Plan Is Returned To City

At a special session of the Thief River Falls City Council held Friday, September 18 in the city auditorium, representatives of the downtown parking committee announced intentions to resign, and turn the problem over to council for a decision. No action was taken.

In his opening remarks, Mayor Bob Carlson stated he had called the meeting to "once and for all put to rest" the problem of securing off-street parking in the city. Following the meeting he was heard to comment, "I don't think we're going to resolve this on Tuesday either."

The committee suggested a parking district consisting of the Ben Franklin property, and the Lind Motor building and adjacent property to First Street, and recommended that Council rescind it's previous action taken in December. The burning of the Ben Franklin building and slowdown in business activities were reasons given for the suggested change. A petition which had been circulated in the downtown area showing support for the proposal was shown.

Mayor Carlson commented that the names of those who had opposed the previous proposal were not on the petition. Alderman Bill Penning commented "some people wouldn't go on a $10 project."

Jon Larson, noting that you could never get everyone to agree on any proposal said that was one reason for turning the matter over to Council. Apparently making reference to name-calling which had occurred, he said, "that way the Labree Avenue Mafia won't be involved."

Matters were complicated by the fact that the Lind Motor building has been comdemned by the city building inspector, which dictates that it must be torn down within 90 days. Since the building shares a common wall with the Bloomquist building, Alderman Penning expressed concern over liability for damages during the demolition should the property be purchased. Larson stated that a "worst case" was included in their estimated cost figures.

Bob Dondelinger of Jobs Incorporated, which owns the building, commented that if the building was unsafe, it would be torn down, within the required time.

Noting that only a government body had the power necessary to act on the problem, Larson urged the council to take the initiative and develop its own plan. Dick Bjorkman commented "without a viable business district, you don't have a viable community." "It might take cramming down some throats", said one person.

The general consensus was that council should decide on a project which was agreeable to the majority of the downtown businesses and assess them for it.

County Jobless Rate Double State Average

Pennington county's unemployment rate for the month of July was nearly double the state average, according to information published in the "Northwest Minnesota Labor Market Review", published by the Minnesota department of economic security.

While the Minnesota unemployment rate dropped to 4.6 per cent in July, Pennington county unemployment was a 9.1 per cent — an increase from 8.9 per cent a year ago but down from 10.8 per cent in June.

Employment in Pennington county did show a substantial increase in July from June, however, as an increase in the work force was also noted. In July of this year there were 7,779 people in the labor force with 7,066 employed and 713 unemployed. In June the labor force totaled only 7,531 with only 6,715 employed and 816 unemployed. Last July there were 8,184 people in the labor force, 7458 employed and 726 jobless.

Pennington ranked about in the middle of Region One counties in northwestern Minnesota in terms of unemployment percentage. Roseau was at the top with 13 per cent, followed by Red Lake with 10.8 and Marshall with 10 per cent. Behind Pennington were Polk with 7.1, Kittson with 5.6 and Norman with 3.5 per cent. Average unemployment for the region was 8.2 per cent.

Area Farmers Invited To Tillage Demo

Farmers in the Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls area are invited to attend a conservation tillage demonstration October 1 at 9:30 a.n. on land farmed by Naplin Farms one mile south of St. Hilaire on highway 32. Demonstration is jointly sponsored by the agricultural extension and soil conservation services of Pennington and Red Lake counties in cooperation with area implement dealers.

Demonstration is designed to show the comparison between conventional and various reduced tillage practices. Program emphasis will be centered on the effects of reduced tillage on erosion control, energy requirements, weed, insect and disease control and spring seeding dates.

Speakers will include area extension agent Marlin Johnson, Pennington and Red Lake county district conservationist Allan Gustafson, Pennington county extension director Terry Courneya and Red Lake county extension director Dave Kabes.

ATTEMPTING TO EXPLAIN the position of the Minnesota waste management board in regard to site selection for hazardous waste disposal at a meeting in Middle River Wednesday evening is Kathy Moore, community representative for the board. The meeting at Middle River was the fourth held by the board since public lands were added to sites being considered for hazardous waste disposal. Three of the proposed sites are located in eastern Marshall county.

Hazardous Waste Sites In Marshall Co. Aired

A LITTLE WEARY of answering questions about proposed sites for hazardous waste disposal in eastern Marshall county, Dale Setterholm of the Minnesota Geological survey rests on his elbows while meeting with interested area residents at Middle River Wednesday evening. An estimated 150 people attended the open house information session at the Spruce Valley community center in Middle River, many of them providing information as well as asking questions about the public lands and being considered as hazardous waste disposal sites.

Consideration of several sites on public lands in eastern Marshall county as potential locations for hazardous waste disposal brought about 150 people to a public meeting at the Spruce Valley community hall in Middle River Wednesday evening.

The sites being considered are sections 33 and 34 in East Park township, section 24 in Whiteford township, sections 19, 30 and 31 in Rollis township and sections 33, 34 and 35 in Espelie township.

Representing the Minnesota waste management board at the meeting are Kathy Moore, community representative for the board, and Dale Setterholm of the Minnesota Geological survey. Moore presented the board's position in site consideration and answered questions about the site selection process. Setterholm sought additional information about the sites in question and surrounding lands, and answered questions regarding disposal site construction and proposed operation.

Among points brought out at the meeting were that clay soils provide the best retention for hazardous waste, that waste to be disposed of would be in sludge or solid form and buried on containers, and that consideration of sites would include criteria combination of best hydogeology statewide, protection of most productive farmlands, location on existing public lands and proximity to the metro area.

Setterholm told the group that clay soils provide greater protection against movement of wastes than any materials man-made. He said waste would be stored in cells according to type and in closed containers, and that it would be waste from materials which would be "treated" to reduce volume, detoxify them or change their physical state to make them resistant to leaching (dissolving into water).

Treatment of wastes prior to disposal include the following methods:

(1) Sludge Dewatering — Excess water can be removed from sludges in order to reduce the volume and make toxic pollutants less likely to leach.

(2) Detoxification — For example, cyanide-containing materials can be oxidized to convert cyanide into less toxic sobstances. Chromium can also be converted to a less toxic form.

(3) Fixation — Certain commercial processes exist which combine a cement-like material with water to form a substance highly resistant to leaching. The cementing process chemically binds the metal ions and makes them

Legislators Hear Testimony On Commercial Fishing

LOREN MOREY, manager of Morey Fish company which buys 85 per cent of the fish caught commercially on the Minnesota waters of Lake of the Woods, testified Friday at a subcommittee hearing in Bauudette. Morey and Jim McCarthy of International Falls were two fish processors to speak at the subcommittee hearings in Baudette and Warroad. McCarthy testified Saturday and referred to the commercial fishermen as "consumer fishermen" because they provide food for people unable or uninterested in angling for fish themselves.

Testimony for and against a bill introduced in the Minnesota senate by Sen. Keith L. Langseth of Glyndon, which would restrict commercial fishing on Lake of the Woods and Rainy lake to rough fish only, was heard by a subcommittee of the senate's agriculture and natural resources committee Friday in Baudette and Saturday in Warroad.

Sen. Collin Peterson of Detroit Lakes, chairman of the sub-committee, chaired the hearing sessions, attended by about 75 people in Baudette and about the same number in Warroad.

Sen. Langseth's bill amends 1980 Minnesota Statutes, Section 102.26, Subdivision 1, by changing a listing of individual fish species which may not be presently taken commercially (black bass, rock bass, muskellunge, crappies, sturgeon and sunfish) to state: "Any variety of rough fish only may be taken subject to all other restrictions contained in Chapters 97 to 102." It also deletes references to the commercial taking of game fish.

Prior to the presentation of testimony by individuals in opposition or support regarding the bill, Sen. Peterson called on representatives of the state department of natural resources for a report on Lake of the Woods walleye resource and related questions.

Dennis Schupp of the fisheries division reported that in 1948 the state enacted law to eliminate gillnet fishing on Lake of the Woods by attrition, not permitting the transfer of gillnet licenses from the 1948 holder to another fisherman. This has resulted in a reduction from 40 to 45 fishermen with 90,000 feet of gillnet to nine present fishermen using 27,000 total feet of net.

Schupp cited statistics taken from DNR test netting and surveys which indicated that there has been virtually no change in two to three-year-old walleye numbers from comparative studies in 1968-70 to 1980-81, indicating that the spawning population of the lake is not being damaged. He also noted that the taking of larger average size fish is two and one-half to three times the abundance of 11 years ago.

He said that the sports fishery takes about 77 per cent of the walleyes taken from the lake in a given year and the commercial fishermen take about 23 per cent. The anglers generally take younger fish and take more fish than commercial fishermen in every age category except seven-year-old walleyes. In this age category, commercial fishermen take slightly more than sports anglers.

Schupp speculated on what could happen if the commercial fishery was removed from the lake. He said there would be a likely reduction in total fish mortality from about 43 per cent to 34 per cent, and that anglers coule expect to gain about 25 per cent of the commercial loss. Fish of a larger size would likely be more abundant, although there could be a slowing in the growth rate and a reduction in the younger age fish.

He added that on lakes not commercially fished—such as Leech lake and Winnibigosh—the average size of walleyes caught by anglers is approximately the same as on Lake of the Woods, about 1.2 pounds.

Mike Larson, fisheries biologist stationed on Lake of the Woods, told how DNR monitors the commercial fishery by riding with fishermen, checking gear and checking catches. He also reviewed results of test netting done by the department. In 1968-70, the test net catch averaged from 7.6 to 10.25 walleyes per 100 feet of net, he said. In 1980 the catch was 9.22 fish and in 1981 to date it has been 7.69 fish.

He said interviews with fishermen and creel census to weigh and measure the catch of anglers have been conducted at 18 locations. There have been 3,360 Minnesota caught walleyes measured in the census and they were 13.86 inches in average length, ranging from 12.6 to 15.8 inches. There were 1,705 Ontario fish measured, averaging 14.82 inches and ranging from 13.5 to 15.6 inches, and 1,013 Manitoba fish checked, averaging 14.19 inches and ranging from 13.2 to 14.4 inches.

Sen. Peterson said that testimony would be heard first from those in opposition to the bill, followed by those in favor. The procedure at Warroad would be reversed, he said.

Loren Morey of Morey Fish company, a division of International Multi-Foods, said that the company's fishery at Warroad buys 85 per cent of the commercial fish harvest from Minnesota's side of Lake of the Woods. He urged the legislative group to consider the transfer of licenses so that the number of commercial fishermen would not be permitted to end as a result of attrition.

Morey said 75 per cent of the commercial fishermen's total take is rough fish, but that walleyes provide 75 per cent of the fishermen's income. He noted that the company had built a new fishery at Warroad for about $100,000 and that Morey Fish company employs about 125 people at all its locations.

"Minnesota has 10,000 lakes," he said, "and commercial fishing is allowed for walleyes only on two border lakes. The state has a population of about four million people, with less than 600,000 who fish. The rest should be able to buy fish from Minnesota lakes because the fish belong to all the people of the state, not only those who go to catch them."

He added that he believed the commercial fishermen were doing the lake more good than harm by the relative removal of rough fish.

Mike Marvin, whose father Cal operated a resort at Warroad for many years, expressed a concern about the ability to buy fresh walleyes for his restaurant operation. He said he would serve 1,000 to 2,000 walleye dinners a year and depended upon the commercial fishermen to supply him with fresh fish which he was proud to serve.

Alvin Johnston of Warroad, a commercial fisherman whose sons are the fourth generation fishing the lake, told of his experiences with attempting to use other gear than gillnets for commercial fishing. He said they put $45,000 to $50,000 into the gear and four years into the effort, and that even at the peak year the attempt was a disaster.

Johnston emphasized that it is not enough to catch rough fish, there must be a market to dispose of them. "The bill proposed here today doesn't restrict commercial fishing."

SEN. KEITH LANGSETH of Glyndon, sponsor of the bill which would limit the commercial fishing on Lake of the Woods and Rainy lake to the taking of rough fish only, visits with one of the people attending a legislative sub-committee hearing at Baudette Friday.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Renae Twistol And John Carlson Wed Here

Miss Renae Twistol and John Carlson exchanged marriage vows recently at the Evangelical Free church in Thief River Falls.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Twistol of Thief River Falls; and the groom is the son of Mrs. Vernon Carlson of Moorhead and the late Dr. Vernon Carlson.

Approximately 300 relatives and friends attended the double ring ceremony with Rev. Curtis Anderson and Rev. Philip Antilla officiating. David Musselman of Lynchberg, Va., was pianist. He accompanied Darwin Anderson as he sang "For Baby, For Bobbie," "My Tribute," and "Gentle Shepherd." Dave and Debbie Musselman sang "I Am Loved." During the lighting of the altar and aisle candles, Rich Trontvet and Renelle Twistol played the piano duet, "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring."

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a gown of polyester chiffon and Chantilly lace, featuring a pleated chiffon skirt with a Chantilly lace flounce that flowed into a cathedral length train. The bodice, of Chantilly lace embroidered with seed pearls, was styled with a Queen Anne neckline trimmed with Venice lace, and shepherdess sleeves of lace and chiffon. A satin ribbon accented the waistline. Her veil of white chiffon was held by a wide brimmed hat appliqued with rose patterned lace. She carried a bouquet of garnet Sweetheart roses, French lilies, babies breath, ivy and ribbon streamers.

Renelle Twistol attended her sister as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Raelynn Twistol, sister of the bride; Verna Carlson, sister of the groom, and Karen Dobratz, and Debbie Musselman, friends of the bride. Kathryn Lindahl, a friend of the bride, was flower girl. All wore floor-length gowns of a dusty rose polyester featuring pleated skirts and brocaded capes. Their headpieces were dusty rose flowers with babies' breath and streamers. They carried baskets of garnet lilies, pink and burgundy roses and babies' breath.

Attending the groom as best man was his brother, Dr. David Carlson. Groomsmen were Roger Erickson, Bruce Harkness and Todd Ordal, friends of the groom, and Randy Twistol, a brother of the bride. The ring bearer was Danny Bjerknes, a friend of the bride. They wore black-cherry tuxedos, and white pleated shirts with a dusty rose tiger lily and babies' breath pinned on their lapels.

The ushers were Scott Kjellberg, a cousin of the bride, and Jim Lichtsinn, a brother-in-law of the groom. Serving as acolytes were Stacy Kjellberg, a cousin of the bride, and Lisa Glass, a friend of the bride. The bride's personal attendants were Colleen Swanson and Ruth Owen, friends of the bride.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Twistol selected a burgundy knit floor-length gown. The groom's mother wore a slate-blue floor-length gown.

Special guests were the bride's grandmothers: Mrs. Olga Oswald and Mrs. Amy Twistol.

A reception in the church fellowship hall followed with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kjellberg, uncle and aunt of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Don Wahlbeck, friends of the bride, as hosts and hostesses. Ruth Owen was at the guest book, and Mr. and Mrs. Ron Bjerknes, friends of the bride, ladled the punch. At the gift table were Melanie and Kim Thorson, cousins of the bride.

Centering the serving table was a three-tiered wedding cake with a flowing water fountain. The cake, decorated in the bride's chosen colors and topped with a cross surrounded by flowers, was baked and decorated by Mrs. Alice Hanson. It was cut and served by Nancy Tviet and Nancy Blake, friends of the bride. Pouring coffee were Beverly Wolf and Lin Christensen, also friends of the bride.

Waitresses were Jennifer Glass, Karin Redinger, Stacy Glass, Angie Anderson, Kristi Wahlbeck and Becky Anderson. Distributing the rice packets were Karin Redinger and Andie Anderson.

The couple is at home at Renton, Wash., where the bride is employed by the Renton school district. The groom is employed by Boeing. Photo, LeMar Studio, Crookston.

Family Is Found After 63 Years

Times Reporter

A very special family reunion occurred on Labor Day weekend for Alton Beauchane and his twin sister Alice, (Mrs. Lawrence Raymond), Red Lake Falls, for they were united with a family, including two brothers, whose existence they hadn't even been aware of until August 31.

When she answered the phone on that otherwise ordinary morning, Mrs. Raymond heard a voice on the other end say, "Is this you Alice? This is your brother." And so it was that plans were made for the first reunion of a family separated for 63 years.

Elvin Sorenson, who made the call, was nine and brother Archie was seven when they last saw the twins. The children's father, Antone Sorenson, died in 1918, and two years later, unable to support them, their mother Sophie gave up all four children. "Mom had no job, no nothing. We had to split a bean over three different days," said Archie, 69, now living in Wyoming, "In those days, 50 cents was something."

The twins were adopted, at age four, by Mr. and Mrs. Felix Beauchane who farmed west of Red Lake Falls, near Dorothy, and the older boys were placed in foster homes. The only memory the twins have of their original family is a faint recollection of being lifted to look into their father's coffin.

Elvin and Archie have seen each other periodically over the years. Together, they had tried in vain to track down their brother and sister. Archie said he gave up looking about two years ago. Elvin said he never did.

A law change, opening once-private court records to the public, led to writing the state department of public welfare. Within days, the connection was made, and a welfare worker called August 31 to say the twins had been located in Red Lake Falls. From there it was just a matter of getting together, beginning with the phone call.

The reunion, originally planned for Red Lake Falls, was moved to a hospital waiting room in Albert Lea when Elvin, 72, became suddenly ill. There, at noon on Friday, September 4, the twins and their two brothers became a family again.

"There was a lot of reaction, let me tell you," Elvin said. "How would you feel after 63 years?"

"There were a few tears," said Archie. "It'll take me another day or two before I believe it."

Elvin and Archie refused to budge from the twins' sides during the hospital reunion. "Elvin says he's going to keep me here and never let me go," Alice laughed as family members' cameras clicked away.

On the following Sunday, over 200 other members of the family joined them for a reunion picnic in Minnesota Lake, where Elvin now lives. "I just can't tell you how wonderful it was," said Mrs. Raymond.

She has one daughter, and the three brothers have five children each. The Felix Beauchanes have five other children besides the twins.

Elvin and Alton are both retired carpenters, and Archie is a retired landscaper and carpenter among other things. Their father Antone was also a carpenter.

They don't know what ever became of their mother, according to Mrs. Raymond. She reportedly lived in Fosston for a while after the family was broken up, but no one old enough to remember her is around any more. They did find their father's grave "back in the brush" where the farm used to be.

Now that the Sorenson family has been reunited, they'd like to stay that way. Mrs. Raymond says she is looking forward to a visit October 15 from Elvin, who recovered from his illness and "is just fine now".

A statement made by Archie at the hospital reunion pretty well sums up the feelings of this family: "There's going to be a change. We're going to see each other every year. You can bet on that."

Teachers At Newfolden Cite Their Position

Marshall County Central Education association in Newfolden was one of several area schools to file its intent to strike this week. At this time the teachers and the board remain $111,250 apart.

The teacher associations last request on September 16 amounted to an average increase of $6,590 per teacher. The board's last proposal on that same date offered the teachers an average raise (salary, insurance and extra-curricular) of about $3,500 per teacher.

"These figures are a little deceiving," states Carol Peterson, chief negotiator for the teachers, "since they are based on salaries for last year's 36 teachers. Because of staff cuts, there are only 33 teachers employed by the school system this year."

The two negotiating teams have met 12 times, but most of this time has been used in discussing contract language. It has only been the last two sessions which have dealt specifically with money, she said.

"We are not asking for 'pie in the sky'," states Mrs. Peterson. "We simply want to be average — to be able to compare favorably with teachers in area schools around us.

In a study made comparing MCC's 1980-81 BA maxumum salary of $15,450 (few 1981-82, 1982-83 figures are available yet) with area schools (Roseau, Warroad, Lake of the Woods, Red Lake Falls, Greenbush, Lancaster, Middle River, Alvarago, Argyle, Strandquist and Goodridge) MCC ranks ninth with only Strandquist, Goodridge and Alvarado ranking lower. This same $15,450 figure compares with $16,342 for like-size schools statewide, Mrs. Peterson adds.

"We have no intention of striking at this time," she continued. "We are merely following the guidelines established by MEA in keeping all our options open. We will continue to negotiate and hope to soon reach a settlement that will be fair and reasonable for all — teachers, administration and community."

Teachers Reject Board Offer At Newfolden

Newfolden teachers have rejected a September 8 proposal by the Newfolden school board that would have resulted in a 23 per cent increase in their salary and fringe benefits during the next two years. Teachers are seeking instead a 41.5 per cent increase over the same two year period, according to Mark Carlson, chief board negotiator.

On September 15 the teacher association presented to the school board an intent-to-strike notice which may be effective after September 25.

"The board's latest proposal was developed and presented after long deliberation and careful consideration by the entire board," Carlson noted. "It has unanimous board support and without exception board members believe it to be both fair and reasonable."

Under the current board proposal, the average teacher would receive $3,500 in salary and fringe benefit increases during the 1981-83 biennium. The teacher's current proposal calls for a $6,590 average increase during the same biennium.

"Further negotiations have been scheduled," Carlson said. The teacher's contract expired on June 30, 1981.

Parents of students will be notified by letter on Friday with details regarding school schedules in the event of a strike, Carlson added.

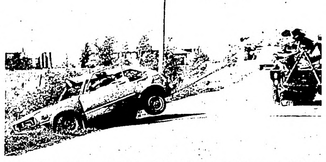
ENJOYING EACH OTHER after a 63 year separation, the Sorenson family, Alton, Alice, Elvin and Archie did a lot of laughing and shed a few tears at a reunion held in Minnesota Lake park Labor day weekend. Alton and Alice were adopted by the Felix Beauchane family, Red Lake Falls, at the age of four, and were finally found by older brother Elvin after a 50-year search.



MINOR CUTS and bruises to two Thief River Falls residents but a totaled car, resulted following an automobile accident Friday at approximately 1:31 p.m. Driver of the 1975 Honda, Deborrah Denise Debenedt, 27, lost control of the vehicle on north Dewey (one-half mile north of the round house) causing the car to roll into the ditch. Passenger in the car, Caroline Segersten, 27, sustained a bump on her forehead and bruises to her left shoulder. Debenedt, who received a cut above her left eye as well as scrapes, was treated at Northwestern hospital and released.

Mrs. Hallstrom New Head Of State Program

Several changes have been made in the Minnesota make it yourself with wool contest situation, according to Mrs. Wilbur (Gladys) Hallstrom of Red Lake Falls, new state director for the program.

Mrs. Hallstrom, who has been District 1 director, will be succeeded in that position by Mrs. Lloyd (Janice) Noreen of rural Thief River Falls. In turn, Mrs. Noreen will be succeeded as Pennington county director by Mrs. Norris (Arlene) Thune of rural Thief River Falls. Counties in District 1 include Beltrami, Clearwater, Kittson, Lake of the Woods, Mahnomen, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau.

For the past few years, Minnesota has worked with North Dakota and held the state wool sewing contest in Fargo, ND. Last year North Dakota made the decision to conduct a state contest on its own, and Minnesota will therefore have its own state contest as well this year, Mrs. Hallstrom said.

As a result of the change, each state will be eligible to send a winner to the national contest. District contests this year are to be held by the first week in November and the state contest will be in connection with the annual North Central Wool Marketing association convention in mid-November.

District I competition will be held Saturday, October 31, at Northland community college with judging in the morning and a fashion revue in the afternoon.

Meeting Held On Hazardous Waste Site

virtually insoluble in water. The promoters of these processes claim that the resulting material may be suitable for such uses as roadbeds or building material.

(4) Encapsulation — This process encloses the waste in a watertight shell (plastic, for example) which is intended to prevent leaching from the disposal area.

(5) Treatment of Aqueous (water) Solutions Aqueous solutions may be hazardous only because they are acidic or alkaline. These solutions may be nautralized — often at the point of generation — and may then be suitable for disposal in the sanitary sewer. Other aqueous wastes may be treated by removing the hazardous solids; the solids are then further dewatered and may be treated by one of the methods described above before land disposal. Processes used here are generally the same as are routinely used for treatment of industrial wastewaters.

Setterholm said that the sites presently under consideration around the state would be reduced to 20 in number, at which time five test holes per square mile would be drilled to determine soil types and other information. The 20 sites would then be reduced to six possible sites and much more extensive testing would be conducted prior to final selection.

Before the draft plan is submitted to the legislative commission on waste management in August of 1982, it will be reviewed and commented upon by local project review committees in the six areas proposed for a disposal site. In addition, one public meeting will be held in each county proposed for disposal and processing facilities.

Both Moore and Setterholm emphasized that the hazardous waste disposal plan is necessary to solve a major pollution problem which may be causing great harm to people and the environment at the present time. They noted that only half of the hazardous waste being produced in the state can now be accounted for, with the remainder being released into the environment.

"We can't go on slowly killing ourselves with waste which can be more adequately handled," Moore said.

Many people at the meeting expressed concern over the high water table in the areas under consideration in Marshall county, pointing out that the areas often flood in the spring and that in several cases there are water courses through the areas which lead to the Thief river and therefore to Thief River Falls and other downstream communities.

There was also concern about wastes polluting ground water wells in the area, hazard of hauling wastes long distances for disposal, monitoring and management of disposal sites once established, and the thought that metropolitan areas which gain the economic advantage from industry creating the wastes want to solve their problem by dumping the waste on the rural areas.

While efforts may be aimed at reduction of waste by industry as well as recycling and recovery efforts and alternate disposal methods, it is recognized that there will likely always be some waste which can not be utilized or disposed of in any other method than land storage. The question the management board faces is finding the best location with the least risk to meet that need.

Paul Lutenske Ass't. Director Of NW Library

Paul Lutenske, formerly assistant head of a large branch library in Ann Arbor, MI, has been named assistant director of the Northwest Regional library at Thief River Falls. He succeeds Julie Chase in that position and began his duties here September 1.

Originally from Saginaw, MI, Lutenske received his master of arts degree in library science at the University of Michigan after earning a bachelor of science degree in mathematics and physics at Saginaw Valley state college. He finished his master's degree work in May.

Lutenske has been in library work for more than six years with service from bookmobile driver through the assistant director post. He believes that libraries should not be considered passive and non-dynamic entities and expects to study community needs in cultural and other areas to further improve library service and involvement in the area.

Paul and his wife Nan have been married three years. He enjoys music and expects to begin piano lessons again after first learning to play at age 23. Nan is interested in veterinary medicine, auto mechanics and auto body work and enjoys baking.

"We have moved about quite a bit in the last few years and are hoping to settle in for awhile," Lutenske said. "We both want to work on some of the things we haven't had a chance to do in less permanent situations.

Hearings Held On Commercial Fishing Bill

he said. "it eliminates it. There is no way we can catch and sell enough rough fish to stay in business. We need the walleye catch to make a living."

Ken Siemon of Arlington, who has an inland commercial fishing license to take rough fish from Minnesota inland waters, said that in lakes over-populated with game fish the size is small. Most of his catch is carp and bullheads with a few suckers and other rough species, he said. Also giving testimony were Curt Molstad and Joe Arnold who fish commercially on Rainy lake.

Leading witness for the supporters of the bill was Ron Lindner, a professional fisherman and publisher of a fishing magazine. He said he was not opposed to commercial fishing, but was convinced absolutely that commercial fishing and quality sports fishing could not co-exist on the same lake. He said gillnetting tends to reduce the size of the average fish in the lake and that the tendency is for anglers is to want to catch bigger fish.

He said walley fishing is being developed in other areas and that sportsmen will go from the big cities to those areas where they can expect to catch bigger fish. "The money-spending angler will not go fishing in a cigar factory," he said, referring to average catch of small walleyes.

Howard Hanson of Minneapolis told of the decline in fishing on Rainy lake where he had fished for approximately 20 years and recently bought a resort. None of the guests at his resort this year went home with a limit of walleyes, he said.

Vic Beckel of Sportsmen's lodge testified that most of the customers at the lodge would like to catch larger fish. There is a trend toward quality, he said. He also added that one area of the lake which was not netted for a number of years produced 90 per cent of the large fish taken by the resort's guests this year.

Because of a dinner planned to be served at the Moose lodge in Baudette where the hearing was held, it was adjourned before all witnesses could be heard. Dick Knutson of Moorhead, one of the primary supporters of the bill, requested more time for the Saturday hearing at Warroad, stating it would be a convenience for both sides. Chairman Peterson declined to make a change, citing constraints for prior notice under the state's open meeting law.

Knutson spoke at the Warroad meeting, emphasizing that the sports fisherman spends more dollars per fish caught than the commercial fisherman, and therefore is a greater benefit to the economy. He also pointed out that continued commercial fishing would cause sports fishing to decline on Lake of the Woods to the point that sports fishermen would no longer go there.

Doug Wahl of Greenbush questioned the validity and interpretation of the department of natural resources' research and reporting, suggesting that everyone in the department connected with the studies should be replaced.

Also appearing in support of the bill were Dennis Braaten, president of the Lake of the Woods resort association; John and Tony Beckel, resort operators; and Bill Krause, Trail's End resort guide and former biologist.

Sen. Peterson said that other hearings would be held prior to action on the bill at the next legislative session.

In 1936, in the first large "sitdown" strike, the United Rubber Workers (CIO) won recognition at Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., according to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Foundation At UND Raises $1,273,689

University of North Dakota foundation raised a total of $1,273,689 in contributed funds, bequests and other gifts during 1980-81, according to Earl Strinden, executive vice president of the UND foundation and alumni association.

Annual sustaining fund drive, the core of the foundation's fund-raising efforts, took in $391,043 in gifts from 6,239 alumni, according to Lowell Swenson of Thief River Falls, foundation president and national chairman for the sustaining fund drive. The sustaining fund easily passed its goal of $325,000, and topped last year's record total by nearly $56,000.

"It was a very good year," Swenson said. "I particularly want to thank the thousands of contributors who provide the broad base of our fund-raising program."

In addition to the sustaining fund, 16 major gifts, bequests and other types of contributions totaled $882,646 to push the foundation past the $1.2 million mark for the year. The foundation was established in 1978 to streamline the contribution process for UND alumni and friends.

About $230,000 of the sustaining fund total was earmarked by the donors for specific purposes at UND, with the remainder listed as unrestricted donations to be used for priority needs determined by the foundation.

The UND Class of 1924 took honors for the highest percentage of class members donating to the sustaining fund, with almost half of that class contributing. And for the third year in a row, the Class of 1970 came through with the largest number of gifts, with 170 class members making donations.

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Peres
Q. Pastor Don, I have asked many pastors this question and no one seems to know the answer. Would you please answer from the Bible where Cain got his wife?
A. I would have to agree that this is one of the most often asked questions by Christians and non-Christians alike.
One theory that has been put forth to explain the existence of a wife for Cain is a pre-Adamic race dwelling in the neighborhood of the Garden of Eden for Cain to pick from.
But this is directly contrary to scripture as I Cor. 15:45 says that Adam was the first man on the earth.
Gen. 3:20 says that Eve was the mother of all living.
So we see that there could not have been a pre-Adamic race for Cain to pick a wife from.
Gen. 5:4 mentions that Adam and Eve had sons and daughters. Assuming the accuracy of the Genesis account, and considering the length of lives recorded (around 900 years, on the average), a very sizeable population could have developed very rapidly.
Gen. 4:16 mentions that Cain went to the land of Nod, next to the Garden of Eden, and took a wife. There is no doubt that it would have been his sister or a relative.
All this raises the additional question of incest. If incest is scriptually forbidden, according to the Mosaic law in Lev. 20:11-21, how do we explain all this marrying of brother and sister or relative?
When sin entered the world at the Fall of Adam and Eve, it brought with it death, disease, and corruption. At first, no harm would have resulted from marriage of brothers and sisters, or other relatives, but the genes would gradually become corrupt as the generations passed, disease, environment and sin took their toll on the genetic heritage, which resulted in mutant and defective genes. Finally incest was prohibited in Moses' time, from a biological standpoint, because it was now dangerous and resulted in deformed, moronic, or otherwise defective offspring.
I hope that these scriptures will help you understand where Cain got his wife.
If you have any questions you would like to have answered from the Bible, please write Pastor Don Peres, Box 129, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Hospital Mission

In the annual report of Northwestern Hospital association distributed to the membership at the association's annual meeting recently, part of the hospital's mission statement was published. Because the hospital is an important institution to the area and affects many people in this and neighboring communities, we are printing that statement here as follows:

. . . It is the mission of Northwestern hospital to continue to provide a broad range of primary and specialty care to its immediate service area; and, further, to extend its resources as a referral center for smaller hospitals and community physicians throughout Northwestern Minnesota.

In doing so, the hospital will provide access to the most advanced technology and medical excellence that can be made available on site, in consulation and through shared continuing education opportunities. It will be a conduit for consultation and referral for care through affiliations with Grand Forks and Fargo hospitals, University of Minnesota and other metropolitan hospitals in Minneapolis-St. Paul and Rochester.

The hospital will continue to carry on cooperative exchanges with other hospitals and health service providers. This effort may take the form of joint ventures, affiliations, or contracting, assuring the hospital's ability to provide needed health care services for people in the region.

The present organizational format of the non-profit corporation will be evaluated with the intent to restructure it and facilitate maximum fiscal and service delivery capabilities. Consideration will be given to the creation of separate subsidiary divisions along with the formation of a holding company.

Northwestern hospital association is committed to contain its costs and the costs to patients through creative, efficient management of technological, supportive and personal services. Advanced medical equipment will be made available to physicians and their patients based on proven effectiveness, need and financial feasibility. If new services cannot be financially viable or self-supporting patients will continue to be referred to more appropriate sources of care.

Cooperative arrangements will be made to provide follow-up and home care for patients and allow the release of inpatients as soon as it is medically advisable. Education in health promotion and preventive health maintenance will be extended to inpatients, outpatients and community groups. The hospital will provide its medical and health resources to teach people of its service area how to prevent unnecessary hospitalizations and, when care is needed, how to use the health care system properly.

Getting The Job Done

This item from an area newspaper makes a valid point as we have a tendency to hurry from one thing to another during the passage of time:

An old farmer had plowed around a large rock in one of his fields for years. He had broken several plow shares and a cultivator on it and had grown rather morbid about the rock. After breaking another plow share one day and remembering all the trouble the rock had caused him through the year, he finally was determined to do something about it.

When he put his crowbar under the rock, he was surprised to discover it was only about six inches thick and that he could break it up easily. As he was carting it away, he had to smile remembering all the trouble the rock had caused him and how easy it would have been to get rid of it sooner.

There is often a temptation to bypass small obstacles when we're in a hurry to get a large problem solved. We simply don't stop and take the time to deal with it now. Like the old farmer, we "plow around it." Usually we tell ourselves that we'll come back to it later. What often happens is that we never do.

Missing The Purpose

It is difficult for some people to divorce their work from their outside activities. For those who sincerely enjoy their work, that isn't necessarily bad. But it seems that stress can be materially reduced if means of relaxation can be found which offer diversion of attention from the hob.

Consider the case of the company executive who was unable to attend a concert — a presentation of Schubert's Unfinished Symphony No 8. He gave the tickets to the first employee he could find, who turned out to be the company's management consultant.

The morning following the concert, the executive asked the consultant about the concert. Instead of the usual comments which might be expected, the consultant handed the executive a memo in triplicate which stated the following:

"Report on Orchestral Performance of Schubert's Unfinished Symphony No. 8:

"(1) For considerable periods the four oboe players had nothing to do. The number should be reduced and their work spread over the whole orchestra, thus eliminating peaks of activity.

"(2) All 12 violins were playing identical notes. This seems to be an unnecessary duplication and the staff of this section should be cut drastically. If a large volume of sound is really necessary, this could be obtained through an electronic amplifier.

"(3) Much effort was absorbed in playing the quarter-notes. This seems an excessive refinement and it is recommended that all notes should be rounded out to the nearest half-notes. If this is done, it should be possible to use trainees and lower grade operators.

"(4) No useful purpose is served by repeating with the horns the passage that has already been handled by the strings. If such redundant passages were eliminated, the concert could be reduced from two hours down to 20 minutes.

"If Schubert had attended to these matters, he would probably have been able to finish the symphony instead of dying on the job."

What Happened To 'Quit'?

Following editorial is from the Granite Falls Tribune:

There was a time, not many years ago, when if a man or woman found the job they were in was too demanding for the money or other rewards, they would quit and look for a better place to work. The only limitations were their marketable skills, education, intelligence and ability in seeking economic success.

That situation has reversed itself as per se the Minnesota State Employees strike, the air traffic controllers strike or the thousands of other walkouts by private and public employees. The current strike seems to be directed toward upgrading the income and rewards of the job, rather than the worker looking elsewhere for a more rewarding position or field.

There are a multitude of jobs available in a great variety of fields. New jobs in new technology open up daily. The new job market should not be only for the newly-educated, but also for people seeking more rewarding work. Job stress and less than adequate pay is what should motivate people into seeking work elsewhere or even changing fields.

We remember years ago working as a hired hand for some area farmers during the harvest season. The food was great, but the financial rewards slim for long 12 hour plus days. I also remember working for John Berends as a section hand on the Great Northern Railroad, hard heavy work, 10 hours a day, six days a week. The job was demanding but at 50 cents an hour, too good to leave. Besides that, there was a certain joy in with heavy steel and ties — and adult men — it kind of proved you were grown up. Jerry Gullickson and I both clerked for Verne Saeger in the old Red Owl Store and were paid 25 cents an hour and glad to get it. A job was valuable then and the pity was reserved for the poor man or boy without a source of income.

There is nothing wrong with "quitting" your current job in search of a better one. It is a tradition and a necessity and valued by those on the ladder to success.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Diner: "I certainly don't like all these flies!"

Waiter: "Show me the ones you do like, madam, and I'll dispose of the rest."

Supply Officer: "How does your uniform fit?"

Recruit: "The jacket isn't bad, but the pants are a little loose around the armpits."

Interesting Opinions:

"We know next to nothing about virtually everything. It is not necessary to know the origin of the universe; it is necessary to want to know. Civilization depends not on any particular knowledge, but on the disposition to crave knowledge."

State Farm Land Values Top Inflation

It's no secret that farmland values are going up — so is the price of almost everything nowadays.

The real issue, however, is how the price of farmland is doing compared to the rate of inflation. At the U.S. level, inflation is this year's winner.

An acre of U.S. farmland had an average value of $796 for the year ending Feb. 1, 1981, up 9 per cent from last year. That's the "nominal" value. When the past year's inflation rate of 11 per cent is figured in, "real" farmland values fell.

But that's not the case in Minnesota. The average value per acre of state farmland gained 16 per cent from last year, clearly outdistancing the rate of inflation. In fact, the value of Minnesota farmland has been growing steadily higher than the national average over the past decade.

Minnesota average farmland values have increased more than fivefold since 1971. That's the "nominal" value. When an inflation rate of 8.2 per cent over the last decade is figured in, state farmland values more than doubled — increasing more than any state.

The U.S. farmland market is expected to be slow this year because of high interest rates and a smaller-than-expected increase in farm income. For February of 1981 to February of 1982, nominal values should increase seven to 11 per cent. Inflation is expected to be eight to 10 per cent, so real values could rise or fall by about two per cent.

New Treatment Effective For Virus Infection

A new anti-viral drug appears to be an effective treatment in patients who experience a sometimes fatal virus infection after organ transplantation, a University of Minnesota scientist has reported.

Dr. Henry Balfour, director of the division of clinical virology at University hospitals, said he is encouraged by the results of a recent study of threatment of cytomegalovirus (CMV) in kidney transplant patients with acyclouir.

CMV is the most common disease to strike kidney transplant patients in the first six months after surgery. The virus attacks approximately 60 per cent of these patients and is believed to be a major cause of post-transplant fever, hepatitis and even death. Mortality from CMV ranges from 10 to 20 per cent.

Patients stricken with CMV experience typhoid-fever-like symptons—chills and severe headaches. But CMV can be much worse if the infection invades the lungs, central nervous system, gastrointestinal tract or liver.

After years of searching for an effective drug, there is finally cause for optimism, Balfour said "Now, for the first time, we have information that a viral drug may be effective treatment for CMV disease in transplant patients," said Balfour, a professor of laboratory medicine and pathology, and pediatrics at university medical school.

Balfour and his colleagues in the virology laboratory, Drs. Bonnie Bean and Charles D. Mitchell, and Dr. James R. Boen, professor of biometry in the school of public health, presented the results of their 18-month study at a National Institutes of Health conference in Washington last month.

In the Minnesota study, acyclovir was given to nine patients while seven others received a placebo (dummy pill). "These were all fairly sick patients with diverse symptoms such as pneumonia, intestinal bleeding and encephalitis," Balfour said.

When the acyclovir patients were compared with the placebo group, scientists observed a "statistically significant shortening" of the period to clinical improvement. Acyclovir patients also experienced significantly shorter periods of fever and there were fewer deaths. Two patients in the acyclovir group died; four persons in the placebo group died.

"I think this information is dynamite because everyone has been very gloomy about CMV," Balfour said. While Balfour acknowledged "there is justified reason for optimism" regarding acyclovir, he called for a more extensive follow-up study before the drug is made available to large numbers of patients.

"Our results are encouraging," Balfour said. "However, more patients need to be studied and other centers must confirm our results before the FDA (Food and Drug Administration) licenses the drug."

Scientists believe that CMV remains latent in the body until a patient's natural defense system has been suppressed by drugs necessary to prevent rejection of organ transplants. "When that happens, the virus surfaces and disseminates in the blood," Balfour explained. "CMV may then invade the lung, central nervous system, gastrointestinal tract and liver."

Scientists have been studying CMV for more than a decade. "There's a tremendous amount of interest here in CMV," Balfour said, noting that University Hospitals has one of the largest transplant programs in the world. "It's a disease that needs to be prevented or treated if survival rates of transplant patients are to improve."

CMV is also a major complication in patients undergoing bone marrow and heart transplants.

Balfour stressed that the CMV study dealt only with transplant patients and did not include patients with congenital CMV which can strike pregnant women.

The virology expert is continuing to use acyclovir in a related study of varicella zoster, commonly known as "shingles." Patients who have had shingles blisters for three days or less are being enrolled in this study.

While there are no results yet from the Minnesota shingles study, Balfour said he is encouraged by the preliminary findings of scientists in Denmank. In a study of 56 shingles patients, the Danish researchers found acyclovir was "apparently effective and safe," Balfour said.

To enroll in the shingles study, patients should call 373-8898.

ALCW Met

Oak Ridge ALCW met Thursday afternoon at the church with Florence Knutson and Evelyn Swanson as hostesses. Pearl Helgenset gave devotions and the scope lesson was led by Pastor Moberg. Anyone having information on the Lanstad church or who would be willing to work on the 100-yr. anniversary for Lanstad, are asked to contact the Pastor. There was much discussion on the bazaar Sept. 26, and as in the past, each family will be asked to donate bars, donuts or cookies toward the day-long lunch sales. The Harvest Festival dinner was set for October 25, at which time the worship service schedule will be switched with Viking. A free-will offering will be taken downstairs for those coming for the dinner only, and all proceeds of the day will go toward the Parsonage Fund. Election of officers was held as follows: President, LuAnn Lewis (1 year only); Treasurer, Anita Hible; and Secretary of Education, Alfreda Bach (re-elected). Attending were Pastor Moberg, Ardith Olson, Pearl Helgenset, Dess Anderson, Effie Pederson, Nancy Pederson, Anita Hible, Janice Olson, Pauline Vatsaas, Jean Bach, Jeannie Lane, Lillie Mae Hible, Ann Dyrdal and LuAnn Lewis.

Activities were also planned for the next several months. Young people in grades 7 through 12 are automatically included in the League, and Pastor Moberg urges good participation at all the meetings.

Call From Kathy

The Don Dyrdal family was pleasantly surprised to get a long-distance phone call from daughter Kathy in Sala, Sweden, last Wednesday. Things are going well even though she did not have the expected two-week crash course in the Swedish language. School began August 24, to which she bicycles 7 miles each day. Temperatures are cooler than she expected. She has been attending student parties and get togethers, visiting a toy museum, watched wool being dyed and spun, and is taking in as much of the culture as time permits. Her one complaint was the outrageous prices on necessities such as shampoo, toothpaste, deodorant, etc. She appreciates mail, and especially pictures, from home, and sends greetings to all here.

Swimming May Be Dropped By MSHSL

A resolution that would drop swimming as a Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) sponsored activity will be voted on by the MSHSL board of directors at their 1982 fall meeting.

The problem is friction between the MSHSL and the United States Swimming (USS) organization, formerly the Amateur Athletic Association (AAU) swimming program. The two groups have been at odds for years, with the differences resulting in costly legal battles.

Biggest stumbling block at this time is an MSHSL rule that prohibits its coaches from coaching the sport during the "off-season." In other words, Lincoln high school swimming coach John Hustad is not allowed, under MSHSL rules, to coach the Thief River Falls summer USS swim club, although he did exactly that in the past with a special MSHSL waiver.

The strong USS programs centered in the metropolitan areas of Minneapolis and St. Paul are ready to challenge the MSHSL coaching restrictions, and the MSHSL is apparently ready to give in rather than getting involved in another costly court case.

While the apparent victory would be a boon to the USS programs in the larger cities, where they'll have a qualified coach for year-round competition, the elimination of MSHSL sponsorship would effectively kill the sport of swimming in places like Thief River Falls, according to Hustad.

"It would definitely hurt us," confirmed Hustad, who this year will be coaching both the Lincoln girls and boys teams. His duties with the girls team that he's handled since the sport's inception here in the mid-1970's have been expanded to include the boys' program following the resignation of John Kopari as coach of the Lincoln boys.

"It would ruin our program," said Hustad of the proposed MSHSL plan to drop swimming. "If we don't have a school sponsoring us, I don't see how we can continue to do the things we've been doing in swimming. They would successfully destroy the swimming program in Thief River Falls."

Thief River Falls' summer USS or AAU swimming has not been an active, strenuous program for high school-age swimmers, pointed out Hustad. They have not used the program to become the year-round type swimmers produced in the larger communities that have monopolized MSHSL swimming honors in the past. Instead, the local program has attracted the younger swimmers, giving them an introduction to the sport.

If the Minnesota State High School League goes ahead with its plan to drop its swimming program, Hustad expects Thief River Falls to try to field a USS program. But without school backing and faced with a lack of area competition, he isn't so sure it will work.

Miscellaneous

Crookston officials are still trying to come up with a plan to salvage its financially-troubled arena, which is some $225,000 in debt and more than $1000,000 short of being complete so that it can be used as a year-round facility. The Crookston city council was told that one of the two banks in town which holds half of the approximately $225,000 in notes on the arena, has served notice that if something isn't done about its part of the note by Sept. 21 the bank will have to take some action to get either its money or its property. Park Board member Chuck Rongen said the board has a motion pending to shut down the facility, lock it up and forget this year's hockey program unless something is done to secure the completion of the building. Polk County Bank president Clifford Zaffke says the banks are among the biggest supporters of the arena project, but added, "We obviously can't carry a delinquent loan forever." A stop-gap measure proposed by the city would produce $30,000 a year from rental fees that would go directly to the bank. That would increase the Crookston public school arena rental fee from last year's $11,000 to about $18,000 and would increase rental fees paid by the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) from $8,698 to some $14,000. But neither the public schools or UMC have committed themselves to those figures or to long-term agreements. A rerendum vote sometime this fall might be held to see if Crookston taxpayers would be willing to see their taxes increased to pay off the building.

Multi-sprots star Scott McKeever of Middle River is attending Fergus Falls community college, reports the Middle River Record. The Record had earlier reported McKeever headed for Golden Valley Lutheran.

Steve Johnson, the 1981 Crookston high school graduate, was awarded additional athletic honors recently when Pirates track coach Murray Warren announced that he had received word that Johnson was selected as a member of the Class AA Minnesota state track coaches association all-state track and field team for the 1981 season. Johnson, who was an all-stater in football where he led the Pirates to the 1980 Class A state title and was also a standout in hockey, will be playing college hockey this winter at RPI. "Steve was one of the best athletes ever produced by this school," Warren said in presenting Johnson with his all-state track certificate.

AIDED BY A BLOCK thrown by fullback Jim Dillon that sealed off Grand Rapids defense end Ron Renner, Thief River Falls halfback Tom Ose picked up seven yards around the left end in the third quarter of Friday's high school football game played on the Thief River Falls athletic field. Quarterback Brent Schmitz was also involved in the play as he tried to block the Indians' Tom Rubado after pitching the ball to his runningback. Ose was the game's leading rusher, carrying 17 times for 86 yards and a touchdown. Sixteen of those carries and 82 of those yards came in the second half, and most of those were during a furious fourth quarter rally by the Prowlers that put them in position to upset the highly regarded Indians. But two Tony Kellin touchdown passes to Renner in the space of 48 seconds late in the first half, along with a game-saving interception by Renner in the final minutes of the game saved a 13-6 Grand Rapids victory.

Underdog Prowlers Out-Play Grand Rapids In Second Half . . .

Indians Avoid TRF Upset Bid, 13-6

John Schmitz might have had a hard time trying to decide whether to laugh or cry Friday night. Yes, his winless Lincoln high school football team lost its third straight season-opening decision, but it was an inspired performance by the underdog Prowlers who came tantalizingly close to upsetting highly regarded Grand Rapids. The Indians, ranked No. 2 in the first Associated Press Class AA poll of the year and tabbed No. 5 coming into the game, escaped with a hard-earned 13-6 victory.

"Mostly crying," answered Schmitz in response to the opening question. "The kids played hard. It's a shame they had to lose. We could have won the ball game. Just a couple of things kept us from winning it."

Those "couple of things" could have been quarterback Tony Kellin and wide receiver Ron Renner. They teammed up for back-to-back touchdown passes spaced just 48 seconds apart late in the first half for the victory. The rest of the night belonged to the Thief River Falls defense, and at the end the Prowlers' much-maligned offense got its share of glory, too.

"They're a good football team," said Grand Rapids coach Bill Soltys, who was very much impressed with the Prowlers' performance. "They played very well. They played super defense, and they marched the ball on us in the fourth quarter."

But it was those sudden scoring strikes near the end of the first half that decided the issue.

Beginning from their own 35 following a punt, the Indians covered 65 yards in 14 plays to snap a scoreless deadlock. A four-yard burst up the middle by Greg Chandler on a fourth-and-one from the Thief River Falls 11 kept the drive alive and four plays later (including a 15-yard penalty for illegal use of the hands that sent them back to the 20) the Indians scored when Kellin rolled to his right from the 14 and hit Renner in the back right-hand corner of the end zone. Jim Altobell added the conversion kick for a 7-0 game with 2:14 left in the first half.

Disaster suddenly struck the Prowlers, who fumbled away the hand-off on their first play from scrimmage after the Grand Rapids touchdown. Renner, who also excels as a defensive end, came up with the ball at the 17.

Using the same play that netted the first touchdown, Kellin again rolled to his right and found Kenner in the end zone on first down. Altobell's kick floated off wide to the left, but it waas 13-0 with 1:26 showing on the clock.

Kellin finished 9-for-16 in the passing department for 118 yards, with most of it coming in the first half. Renner, a 6-3, 207-pound senior, caught six of those balls for 72 yards.

"We throw the ball well," confirmed Soltys, who couldn't say the same for his running game that netted the Indians just 58 yards against the Prowlers' aggressive 4-4 defense. It marked the third straight week the Prowlers have held the opposition under the 100-yard mark on the ground. Grand Rapids managed just two first downs in the second half when the Indians netted a mere three yards rushing and just 48 yards total offense.

"We out-played them in the second half," said Schmitz, who had the statistics to back him up.

Limited to just two first downs themselves for nearly three full quarters of football, the Prowlers finally got going offensively in the fourth quarter when Tom Ose, playing in his first game, led a yardage-gobbling ground game that had the touted Indians' defense reeling.

It started on the last play of the third quarter when Ose ripped off a 22-yard burst through the middle. The speedy senior carried the ball 11 times during a 14-play, 76-yard Thief River Falls drive that featured nothing but inside running plays by the halfbacks. But after getting a first-and-goal at the Grand Rapids 6-yard line, the Prowlers blew their finest offensive showing of the season when Jeff Imgrund was stacked up in the middle at the three and funbled the ball, with the Indians' Marty Pirjevec recovering the ball at the four.

That was with 7:06 remaining. It proved to be a temporary reprieve for the Indians, who wound up giving the ball back at their six when Kellin, the punter, was swarmed under a host of defenders after fielding a low punt snap.

Thief River Falls took over with 4:26 on the clock and scored in three plays as Ose squirted underneath the Imdians from the two. Quarterback Brent Schmitz was stopped on the option run for the two-point conversion, but the Prowlers were ecstatic to be on the board against the much-publicized Indians.

And they weren't done yet. An onside kick by Mark Harder was anticipated and Grand Rapids flooded the front wall with ball handlers instead of blockers — including Kellin, who was a last moment insertion. But the kick caromed off Kellin's leg and Steve Olson, another senior making his first appearance of the season, recovered the ball at the Grand Rapids 49 with three minutes left.

Thief River Falls' ground game continued to rip Grand Rapids apart inside, producing a first down at the Indians' 37 with 1:13 still left. But just as the Prowlers were knocking at the door, Renner slammed it shut with a pass interception. Trying his first pass attempt of the second half, Schmitz was going to throw to an open receiver out of the backfield near the right sidelines. But Renner, who was limited to just one pass reception on offense in the second half, suddenly appeared out of nowhere, reached out and tipped the pass in the air at the line of

Middle River Is 14-6 Winner At Gonvick Friday

Stymied in the first half, Middle River came up with a pair of second half touchdowns Friday afternoon to edge Gonvick-Trail 14-6 in a match-up of unbeaten North Tri County Conference football contenders.

The victory raised the Skippers' record to 3-0 and gave them three wins over teams most observers expected would give them their biggest North Tri County Conference challenge this fall — Oklee, Clearbrook and Gonvick-Trail.

But this one wasn't easy. The host Bulldogs scored on the final play of the first half when Chad Bergerson hauled in a nine-yard touchdown pass from Dean Birkland.

Middle River tied it 6-6 in the third quarter on a 42-yard sprint by Mike Peterson, then won it in the final minute when Steve Bengtson reached the end zone from the nine-yard line. Peterson, who hit Jon Neumann with a long pass that carried to the none to set up the winning score after a Kevin McKeever fumble recovery at the 35, capped it off with the two-point converson with 45 seconds remaining.

"I wasn't really pleased with our performance in the first half," pointed out Middle River coach Eldon Sparby. "We moved the ball, but mental errors caused us problems. But overall, we had a good day; we just couldn't get the ball in the end zone."

Middle River rushed for 250 yards, with Bengtson carrying 22 times for 102 yards and Peterson rushing 14 times for 96 yards.

Middle River visits Goodridge Friday.

Fun Run Has 276 Runners On Thursday

Second annual elementary school fun run, designed by Lincoln high school cross country coach Lynn Dyer to introduce youngsters to the sport of cross country running, drew a field of 276 participants Thursday for the half-mile and three-fourths mile races behind the Franklin middle school building.

The entries increased from last year's 165 participants. Over 200 people were served during a chili feed held Monday before the meet that was used as a fund-raiser in an effort to cover meet costs of ribbons for all runners and T-shirts for the individual winners.

Dyer expressed his gratitude to all those who attended the chili feed, helped run the meet and to those who took part in the event.

Fosston Rally Stops LHS Volleyball Team

Janice Woods the basketball standout became Janice Woods the volleyball star Thursday as the six-foot Fosston senior led the Greyhounds to a come-from-behind 2-1 victory over Thief River Falls.

The host Prowlers started with a bang, running up a 17-4 first game lead over the Greyhounds, who always rank among the best teams in northwestern Minnesota, winning Region 8A titles in 1975, 1977 and 1980. But Fosston staged a furious rally that extended Thief River Falls into overtime before the Prowlers could lay claim to a 19-17 win. And the Greyhounds maintained that momentum the rest of the way in winning 18-8, 18-11 games to close out the one-hour, 17-minute match.

"It was a closely matched game," noted Thief River Falls coach Sharon Stauss. "We made the mistakes at the end."

Stauss conceded that Woods, who has a powerful shot at the net, was a major factor in the outcome.

"No defense in the world can cover every spot on the floor," she explained, "and if Janice hits it hard you have to be in that exact spot or you won't get to the ball."

As good as Woods is on the volleyball court, she's even more impressive as a sophomore.

But Woods wasn't a factor at the beginning when the Prowlers stunned the slow-starting Greyhounds. It was a 3-3 game when Thief River Falls' Susie Waale took the service. She kept popping balls over the net and her teammates kept making the plays until it was 17-4.

However, Thief River Falls then went through five serves without scoring and Fosston ran a string of 13 straight points for a 17-17 tie.

Next two points went to Thief River Falls, though, with a Wendy Erickson serve returned wide to make it 18-17 for the Prowlers. Fosston regained the service, but lost it immediately as Pam Finney of the Prowlers put a two-hand tap over the net. Finney then served the final point when the match, which featured terrific plays on both sides, came to an unglorious end on a double-hit foul called against the Greyhounds.

"I don't know what happened to us in that first game," confessed Stauss. "Susie got us those 14 service points, and then we let up; we had that lapse again."

Rest of the night was pretty much the Janice Woods show. And she didn't do it all at the net, either, as she served the Greyhounds from a 3-3 second game tie to an 11-3 edge they never lost. Joleen Gibson came off the bench and her soft, floating serves brought Thief River Falls to within 11-8, but Ann Hermodson and Linda Roue of Fosston served out the game.

Thief River Falls came back to challenge Fosston in the third game. Back-to-back spikes by Karmon Epse put the Prowlers up 4-2 at the start, but they didn't score again until it was 7-4 Fosston.

With Woods tucked away in her back-row rotation, Thief River Falls rallied to tie it 10-10, but lost two serves and fell behind 13-10 before LeAnn Paetznick drilled a spike between two defenders to make it 13-11.

Woods then served Fosston to a 15-11 lead, and at that point Thief River Falls went through four serves without scoring. Appropriately, consecutive blocks at the net by Woods closed out the 18-11 game.

Some four hours worth of volleyball started at 5:30 p.m. when Fosston triumphed 18-12, 13-18, 18-12 in the freshman match, followed by an 8-18, 18-4, 18-1 junior varsity triumph. Thief River Falls is now 1-2 at both levels.

Lincoln varsity, beaten for the first time in three starts, will close out a four-game season-opening homestand Tuesday by hosting East Grand Forks. The Prowlers visit Moorhead Thursday and play in the Roseau invitational Saturday.

A SET BY Susie Waale put a Thief River Falls teammate in position for a shot at the net during Thursday's high school volleyball match against Fosston in the Lincoln gym. LeAnn Paetznick of the Prowlers looked on. Waale served 14 straight points in the Prowlers' 19-17 first game triumph, but the Greyhounds came back to win the match 2-1 with 18-8, 18-11 wins. Thief River Falls hosts East Grand Forks Tuesday.

LEAPING OVER THE top in an effort to reach the end zone from the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) two-year line, Northland community college fullback John Dillon came up a yard short in the fourth quarter of Saturday's MJCAA Northern Division football game played in Crookston. Kevin Kundert (68) and Rick Gobell (65) tried to clear a path for Dillon, but Perry Ochsner (33) and Chad Nikkari (19) came up to push him back. Northland's Mike Busse scored on the very next play to break a 13-13 tie. The Northmen beat the rival Trojans 26-13 with a 20-point fourth quarter explosion.

Plummer Beats Mentor 14-12

Plummer upped its North Tri County Conference football record to 2-1 Friday with a 14-12 win at Mentor.

The Cardinals built a 14-0 first half lead then held on for the victory.

Scoring started with Dean Sletten breaking off a 25-yard touchdown run in the first quarter. The junior runningback finished the game with 107 yards on 24 carries, with the Cardinals totaling 171 yards on the ground.

Defensive tackle Gary Torkelson, an eighth grader, scored in the second quarter when he came up with a pass interception and returned it 14 yards for a touchdown. Sletten went into the end zone on the two-point conversion run, providing what proved to be the game's winning points.

Mentor wasted little time getting back into the game in the second half as Gary Kolb returned the opening kickoff 61 yards for a touchdown. Kolb added a three-yard touchdown run two plays into the fourth quarter following a blocked punt. But the Trojans failed to come up with the conversion points after either touchdown.

Plummer coach Gary Brantl praised the defensive play of Torkelson, who was credited with six unassisted tackles and had a fumble recovery in addition to his interception, and junior Kyle Gustafson, who had eight tackles and a fumble recovery.

Gustafson was also pressed into duty as quarterback following the loss of regular signal caller Tim Gagner, who suffered a broken finger in practice Thursday. "Kyle did a real fine job stepping in like that," said Brantl, who also cited sophomore Tim Peters who got off punts that covered 52 and 45 yards to take the Cardinals out of trouble on a couple of occasions.

After Mentor had narrowed the gap to 14-12, Plummer marched the ball downfield before running out of downs inside the Trojans' one-yard line. Moments later defensive back Russ Fisher came up with an interception and the Cardinals killed off the rest of the clock.

Plummer hosts McIntosh-Winger Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Mike Busse, Ken Crouch Spark Northland . . .

Fourth Quarter Rally Carries Northmen Past Trojans 26-13

University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) coach Jim Sims said his club gave it away. Northland community college coach John Helley, on the other hand, would prefer that his defense set a little bit of the credit Saturday as the Northmen staged a furious fourth quarter rally that produced a come-from-behind 26-13 MJCAA Northern Division football victory over the rival Trojans.

"Pathetic. Absolutely lethargic," snapped Sims as he hurried off the newly-completed UMC athletic field that was being dedicated during the day-long activities. "I don't want to take anything away from them (Northland), but when you just give it to them. . ."

What upset Sims was six turnovers by the Trojans, who lost four fumbles and had two passes picked off. And four of those came in the final 15 minutes when Northland rallied from a 13-6 deficit with a 20-point burst, thanks to its defense. Freshman defensive back Thaddous Forman of Oak Park, Mich., came up with two interceptions and a fumble recovery, but it was the work of sophomore Mike Busse of Mahnomen that caused quite a stir. Busse had himself an extraordinary fourth quarter when he had two fumble recoveries as a linebacker and followed up both of them with touchdown runs as a fullback.

"You got to give a lot of credit to Busse," acknowledged Helley. "He had a heckuva game."

Sharing the spotlight with Busse was sophomore wide receiver Ken Crouch of Inkster, Mich., who caught eight passes for 156 yards, mostly on simple quick tosses on the line of scrimmage that he turned into long gains.

"Crouch made the difference," confirmed Helley. "He really opened up the game."

Crookston was the early leader, with Brook Buchholz capping a seven-play, 47-yard drive by reaching the end zone from the Northland four with 6:40 remaining in the first quarter. Dave Anderson added the conversion kick.

Northland scored on a lengthy 17-play, 65-yard drive over the latter stages of the first quarter and early in the second period, with freshman Darcy Harbott of Thief River Falls diving into the end zone from the two with 11:30 left in the half. Don Hudec's kick was blocked by Brent Wagner, leaving it 7-6, Crookston.

The Trojans went ahead after defensive end Rusty Mertens pounced on a poor Northland pitch-out at the Northland five-yard line. Three plays later a one-yard quarterback sneak by Jim Harris made it 13-6; with Anderson's kick floating off to the right.

But that was the extent of the Crookston offense. The Northmen, who have made a habit of fielding outstanding defensive teams, strangled the Crookston attack the rest of the bright, sinny afternoon. The Trojans netted just 43 yards on the ground for the game and collected only six first downs.

Northland, after struggling offensively in a season-opening 19-7 loss to defending Northern Division champion Golden Valley Lutheran in the 1981 season opener the week before and shut down at the start Saturday, came on strong, finishing with 17 first downs and building a 283-125 edge in total yards against a Crookston team that prided itself on defense in a 7-3 season-opening victory over Itasca.

"They didn't quit when they fell behind," explained Helley. "We made a lot of mistakes in the first half, but this team has a lot of team spirit; a lot of unity. They hung in there and got the job done."

Northland still trailed 13-6 when Forman intercepted a long pass over the middle thrown by Harris. Tagged with an immediate 15-yard personal foul, the Northmen started first-and-20 from their own 10. But they covered ground in a hurry to tie the game 13-13 as John Dillon and Busse ripped off back-to-back 14 and 15-yard runs, respectively, before quarterback Scott Wiebolt tossed the short pass to Crouch on the left side. He read his blocks and scooted down the sidelines to complete a 50-yard scoring play.

Hudek's kick tied it with 10:10 remaing.

First Crookston play from scrimmage after the touchdown found Busse recovering a fumbled snap at the Trojans' 22. Seven plays later Busse, going off right tackle, stretched the ball into the end zone from the one for the go-ahead touchdown. Hudek made it 20-13 with 6:20 left.

In an instant replay, Crookston once again fumbled away its first snap after the Northland touchdown and Busse once again came up with the ball, this time at the 26. Then on the very next play Busse broke into the clear off the right side and put the game out of reach, 26-13, with 5:59 to go.

Busse's defensive work wasn't as surprising as his offensive production — 71 yards on eight carries, an 8.9-yard average. He was a defensive standout with the Northmen as a freshman, but he didn't play offense. This year his regular duty as a linebacker is being complemented with spot duty in the offensive backfield.

"Last year we had some pretty good backs," pointed out Helley. "This year we're short on numbers, and some people like Busse have to play some both ways for us."

Helley was quick to praise the blocking of offensive right guard Ken Demarais, a six-foot, 240-pound freshman from Fisher who opened many of the holes for Busse and Dillon, the game's leading ground gainer with 81 yards on a busy 21-carry day. "Ken really opened some holes for those guys," said Helley.

Northland ran off 60 rushing plays, netting 119 yards after 68 yards worth of quarterback sacks on Wiebolt were subtracted from the ground figure. Despite the hard Crookston pass rush that presented problems, Wiebolt still hit seven of 13 pass attempts for 151 yards. And his scrambling produced several offensive opportunities for the Northmen.

It was Northland's second win in the last three years over Crookston, with a sure victory a year ago slipping away when a penalty wiped out a go-ahead touchdown in the final seconds of a 19-14 loss. Crookston still holds a 4-2 series edge.

Northland plays Mesabi Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at Virginia. Crookston hosts the Mayville State junior varsity Thursday afternoon.

SCORING THE WINNING touchdown, Northland community college runningback Mike Busse bowled over a University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) defender to reach the end zone from the one-yard line in the fourth quarter of Saturday's football game played at Crookston. Busse, a sophomore from Mahnomen, came up with two fumble recoveries as a linebacker and scored two touchdowns as a fullback-all in the fourth quarter — to spark a come-from-behind 26-13 Northland victory that spoiled the Trojans' dedication of their new athletic facilities.

Scots' Fast Start Nets 48-22 Win Over Huskies

McIntosh-Winger jumped out to a 21-0 first quarter lead and went on to defeat Goodridge 48-22 Friday in a North Tri County Conference high school football game played at Goodridge.

All the scoring in the first half was confined to the first quarter as the Scots' Randy Kroshuf scored on runs of seven and five yards, Russ Bly added a five-yard touchdown run and Bob Bursheim was 3-for-3 in the extra point kicking department.

"Take away the first quarter and we played them even," explained Goodridge coach Rick Nelson. "But they came out ready to play ball and we didn't."

Goodridge battled back to within 27-14 in the third quarter in touchdown runs of nine and eight yards by Ken Frazer and a two-point conversion by John Cullen.

But the Huskies' lost a fumble in the end zone and Craig Carver of McIntosh-Winger grabbed the ball for a touchdown that put the game out of reach at 33-14, with Carver adding a three-yard touchdown run to close out the quarter 40-14.

Third Goodridge touchdown came on a one-yard Darell Wiskow run in the fourth quarter.

"We were happy with the way everybody played after the first quarter," noted Nelson. "They didn't give up."

He had special praise for Cullen, who switched from his ball-carrying role to become a key blocker; Bob Miller, who shut things down on his side of the defense line; and Darrin Easthouse, who played well in the defensive secondary.

Goodridge, 1-2, will observe homecoming Friday when the Huskies host unbeaten Middle River at 7:30 p.m.

Hornets Out-Score Bobcats 58-30 Fri.

Clearbrook quarterback Dan Snobeck ran for three touchdowns, passed for another and was on the receiving end of yet another touchdown pass Friday in leading the Hornets to a high-scoring 58-30 North Tri County Conference nine-man high school football win over visiting Oklee.

First quarter ended innocently enough, with Clearbrook sitting on a 16-8 lead. Oklee had cut a 16-0 Clearbrook lead in half when Matt Radniecki caught a two-yard touchdown pass from John Cyr, with Cyr throwing to Jon Lindquist for the conversion points.

But Clearbrook broke away for a 30-8 halftime edge, with Wayne Pulford socring on a 14-yard pass interception return in the final seconds.

"We had so many mental mistakes early," pointed out Oklee coach Dale Svaren, who then watched as injuries struck the Bobcats, with Tom Dulka, Rick Dulka, Lindquist and Cyr all felled by injuries that wiped out the Bobcats' backfield.

It was 46-8 by the end of the third quarter, with Oklee getting three fourth quarter touchdowns on runs by Loring Mercil and two by Lief Fore, who shook off an injury to play.

"Our line got beat," admitted Svaren. "They were much quicker than our line."

Oklee, 1-2, tackles Gonvick-Trail Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Oklee.

LHS Freshmen Beaten 28-22 By Schroeder

Lincoln high school freshman football team put 22 points on the scoreboard in the first half, but couldn't produce any second half points in a 28-22 loss to the Grand Forks Schroeder junior high school freshmen Thursday on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

Nearly all of the scoring was done in the first half. It was an 8-8 game at the end of the first quarter, with Thief River Falls' Scott Fowler scoring on a four-yard run and Mark Bondy tossing a two-point conversion pass to Ryan Drees. Thief River Falls led 22-20 at halftime as Fowler scored on a two-yard run; Bondy passed to Dan Upham for the conversion points; and Drees scored on a three-yard run.

But only scoring of the second half — a third quarter touchdown — was done by Schroeder.

Thief River Falls, 1-1, was scheduled to visit East Grand Forks today (Monday) at 4:15 p.m. South junior high of Grand Forks will be in Thief River Falls Thursday for a 4:15 game.

RON LINDNER, publisher of a sport fishing magazine and a professional fisherman, testified Friday at a legislative subcommittee hearing at the Moose lodge in Baudette. The hearing was on a bill which would limit commercial fishing on Lake of the Woods and Rainy lake to rough fish only. Lindner told the sub-committee members that anglers are interested in catching larger size fish and that it is impossible for a lake to provide both commercial and quality sports fishing.

MAHA Meeting Here Adopts New Rules For Youth Hockey

Minnesota amateur hockey association (MAHA) at its recent annual meeting held in Thief River Falls has adopted new playing rules to abolish the red line for two line passing and to prohibit body checking in youth hockey at the Pee-Wee (ages 11-12) level.

Adoption of the rule changes, which had occured earlier this year by the amateur hockey association of the United States (AHAUS), came on a close vote amongst the 24 district directors and officers of the MAHA. Unless some new action is taken at the MAHA fall meeting October 18 in Eveleth, the rule changes will be in effect for the coming 1981-82 season.

MAHA board also approved the establishment of a new Juvenile "B" classification for youth hockey that would permit players over the age of the regular Midget classification (ages 15-16) to play organized youth hockey if they are still in high school.

MAHA officers elected for 1981-82 included president Ted Brill, Grand Rapids; vice presidents Wallace Odell, Wazxata; Peter Lindberg, Edina; William Tait, Stillwater; William McDonald, Grand Rapids; Gerry Brown, St. Louis Park; and secretary-treasurer Roger Godin, Eveleth. Donald M. Clark, Cumberland, Wisconsin is the district registrar while past president Ralph Jasinski, New Brighton, and president Ted Brill will represent the MAHA on the national AHAUS board.

DU Banquet Is Scheduled For Tuesday

Unalterably opposed to the destruction of one more acre of marsh habitat in North America, Ducks Unlimited (DU) the world's largest conservator of wetlands, plans to make $230 million available for habitat restoration during the next five years, according to DU president Robert D. Marcotte.

"At least six million acres of breeding wetlands will have to be conserved to ensure the future of our waterfowl," Marcotte said. "In our first 43 years we have reserved three million acres. As society expands its demand for land, the remaining three million acres must be set aside more quickly. DU has been growing at an annual rate of nearly 25 per cent, and the number of productive marshes grows with us."

Unfortunately, 200 to 300 thousand wetland acres are still drained each year in North America, Marcotte said. "Many people think of marshes, bottomlands, potholes and swamps as wastelands," he explained. "But they're the source of life for all our ducks, geese, swans and cranes. In addition, 40 mammal species and 224 bird species inhabit DU wetland projects. And that's not all—marshes recharge groundwater supplies, check floods, and remove pollutants from our waterways. In short, they're as important as any of our natural resources."

Persons concerned with conserving wetlands should try to attend one of the over 1,900 local DU fund-raisers being held this fall across the U.S., Marcotte suggested. The banquets will help DU earn $30 million in 1981, he said, with nearly 80 cents from each dollar raised going directly into habitat.

Locally, the Thief River Falls Ducks Unlimited Chapter will hold its fund-raising banquet Tuesday at 6 p.m. at the Best Western Inn. Tickets for the banquet, which was a sell-out a year ago, are on sale at Thune-Upham & Associates, TG Sporting Goods, Sjoberg's Cable TV and Tony Dorn, Inc.

Kellin simply fell on the ball to kill the clock.

Both coaches could be happy with the outcome, indicated Soltys. He managed to come up with a win and Schmitz had the satisfaction of out-playing a team considered one of the best in the state.

"I'd just as soon be in his place," noted Schmitz.

Marshall County Central Beaten By Argyle 28-7

Mike LaBine scored three touchdowns Saturday to lead Argyle past Marshall County Central 28-7 in a match-up of unbeaten Top of the State Conference leaders played at Newfolden. It was the first of two nine-man high school football meetings between the two schools this fall. They'll play again Wednesday, October 21, at Argyle.

"They're a good football team, no doubt about it," said Marshall County Central coach Sam Gebhart. "We didn't play very aggressively at the start. We ended up playing a lot of defense."

The Nordics' offensive was limited to the passing of quarterback Dave Kragness, who was 10-for-24 for 103 yards and a touchdown — a 7-yard second quarter toss to Jeff Dahl. Runningback Bill Johnson caught five passes. But the Nordics mustered just 53 yards on the ground while the Eagles ran for 327 yards.

"They didn't give us much on offense," admitted Gebhart.

Defensively, Dahl led the Nordics. The defensive end was in on 21 tackles, came up with an interception and had a fumble recovery. Middle linebacker Scott Anderson was credited with 20 tackles and outside linebacker Al Lindemoen had 19 tackles. "But like I say, we had a chance to play a lot of defense," noted Gebhart.

Marshall County Central will be on the road for the first time this season Friday when the Nordics visit Hallock for a Top of the State Conference game.

Advertising Minnesota

Minnesota is beautiful 12 months of the year. Advertising has proved its 'saleability' across the 50 states and around the world. People have responded to the ads by filling the state resorts, motels and hotels, while lining shorelines of everybody of water suitable for fishing. Others have taken to it like fish, swimming and boating, water skiing or whatever, depending upon the seasonal sport.

Much advertising is aimed at women and their 'family recreation' as a family unit. And it is encouraging to note that more women are getting involved; just watch the campgrounds. Today's women can pitch a tent, chop wood and build a campfire to equal her counterpart. Besides all of that, she catches her own meal and cooks it over her own fire. But then, so could her own 'grandma.

Outdoor clothing and sporting equipment is displayed by Minnesota models, many times all from the same family unit.

Advertise Minnesota by keeping it clean and free of litter all year long.

Lakes in the Emily area are especially interesting. Several years ago when 'Minnesota Outdoors' promotions director, Stu Mann, and his wife, Dee, co-produced a television program along with a panel of several sportsmen-experts, they made a film of a little lake buried deep in the woods of Emily's enchanting outdoor woodland. It was discovered to be the finest bass and bluegill fishing ever seen. This little lake didn't have a name in those days, so the television program named it after their own television station. Thus it officially became Lake WTCN.

Green Lake near Spicer provides an exciting variety of game northern pike, large and small mouthed bass, bluegills, sunfish and large bullheads abound. The early and late season fishing is something to write home about. Or, if it's boating you want, you can see many beautiful spots to capture in your camera.

Spicer is in the heart of some of the finest fishing waters in the state, and Nest Lake is one of the finest of these producing lakes. It is excellent for bass, bluegills and crappies, as well as pike and walleyes, with May, June, September and October being the best assured fishing for these game fish.

Prowlers, Lakers To Meet On Tuesday

Detroit Lakes and Thief River Falls, two teams who appear to be the leaders in North Half Region 8AA competition this spring, will meet Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. in a dual meet high school tennis match centered on the Northland community college courts.

Thief River Falls girls triumphed Thursday in their own triangular event against Bemidji and Roseau. The Prowlers finished with 9 points, the Lumberjills 4 and the Rams 2.

Coach Whitey Olson's Prowlers swept all five matches from the Rams, while winning four of five decisions from the Lumberjills. It was Thief River Falls' second triangular victory of the year, to go along with a 6-0 dual meet mark.

"I think they've been playing well," said Olson about the Prowlers' progress to date. "I've been really satisfied with their performances. At this point I couldn't ask for anything more."

Thief River Falls' junior varsity record climbed to 5-0 with a 6-1 win over Roseau Thursday.

Top Athletes Will Headline 1981 NHF Day

Four of America's top athletes — George Brett, Cindy Nelson, Roscoe Tanner and Tom Watson — have given their support to National Hunting and Fishing (NHF) Day and will serve as honorary chairmen for the tenth anniversary of NHF Day September 26. They join the six previous honorary chairmen.

"I'm glad to have the opportunity to serve as an honorary chairman of National Hunting and Fishing Day," said Brett, who was named the most valuable player in the American League last year. "Sportsmen deserve recognition for their contributions to conservation," he added.

"I've been a hunter since I was nine, and I can think of no other program which does as much to insure the future of the hunting and fishing sports or the great outdoors as National Hunting and Fishing Day," said Nelson, who has represented the U.S. in three Olympics and has been a member of the U.S. ski team for 10 years. She is the first woman ever to be named an honorary chairman of NHF Day.

Tanner, the 1981 U.S. professional indoor tennis champion, began hunting when he was 10 and says he likes to hunt quail, pheasants and doves whenever he has the opportunity. "America's hunters and fishermen are our leading conservationists," said Tanner. "Not only have they spoken out for conservation, they've provided the funds necessary for effective conservation programs. In fact, sportsmen have contributed more than $5 billion for conservation since the turn of the century."

Watson, the leading money winner on the 1980 PGA tour and four-time PGA Player of the Year, praised sportsmen for volunteering their time to organize NHF Day programs. "Because of these NHF Day programs, non-sportsmen have the opportunity to learn how to enjoy the outdoors while helping to conserve our natural resuources," said Watson, who began hunting as a youngster. "I'm proud to be a part of National Hunting and Fishing Day this year, and I hope every sportsman will join with me in celebrating NHF Day."

CHAIRMAN of the senate subcommittee hearing testimony on a bill to limit commercial fishing on Lake of the Woods to rough fish only was Sen. Collin Peterson of Detroit Lakes. The hearing was held at Baudette and Warroad.

He used slides to project statistics and charts showing comparative catches of walleyes on the lake over the past 13 years.

Former TRF Resident Pays Visit To Poland

Warmth and generosity expressed by Polish citizens are two important traits remaining in Paul Grothe's mind following a 28-day concert tour of Poland.

Grothe, 20, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Reynold Grothe, former residents of Thief River Falls who now reside in Silver Bay, and the grandson of Mrs. Olga (Sig) Grothe, resident of Valley Home in Thief River Falls.

Grothe is a member of the University Singers, a 50-voice choir and the top choral group at the University of Minnesota in Duluth (UMD).

Although the choral group knew for about two years prior to the tour about going, the entire tour was in danger of being cancelled just days before they departed, when the press began reporting on the labor unrest and possible movement of Russian troops into Poland.

Last tour the choir made to Poland was in 1978 — before the Polish citizens were eager to talk on subjects all but banned, especially politics and the economy.

UMD choir was invited to sing by Solidarity, a workers' union, to approximately 1,500 people at St. Mary's church, as well as performing in palaces and civic buildings. They stayed in the dormitories of the poly-technical schools, which were classified as hotels in Poland.

Grothe observed many differences between that country and the United States, according to a recent story on the trip appearing in a Two Harbors newspaper.

Differences included scarcity of food, which was rationed and which was extrememly expensive, the absence of toys evident in homes with children, only two television channels which were similar to American telvision in the early 1950s, and an absence of front yards or residential area as Americans know them. Majority of Poles live in apartment-style housing 10 or 15 stories high. Once a young person turns 18, he can apply for an apartment, but it can take up to 15 years to get into it.

Not only is food expensive, but food-lines were common. Poles would wait for hours until trucks arrived with food and the people would rush to meet them. Employers would often let their employees off early to stand in line to get an evening meal.

Hotels and restaurants were the first to get food that was available since they needed American dollars that tourism generated and the Poles themselves would have been humiliated visitor to their country wasn't given the best of everything. (Tourism was down about 50 per cent when the group toured Poland).

There is little high fashion in Poland, and the United States is looked at by the Polish as the land of golden opportunity. Men wear coarse wool suits (the one fabric made in Poland) and the elderly women wear kerchiefs, housedresses and heavy wool sweaters. Few Polish people can afford to own their own cars.

Grothe said the one thing he missed the most was not being able to drive down the street and see lawns, single-family homes and the mixture of colors found in suburbs.

During some of the choirs' numbers, the Poles not only clapped, but tears streamed down their cheeks. At the end of the concerts, Grothe said they would be called back for four or five encores, something he doesn't remember happening in the United States.

Nomination To Academies Is Near Deadline

Deadline of October 1 has been set for all young men and women who are applying to his office for nominations to one of the nation's three service academies, according to Congressman Arlan Stangeland.

Individuals who would like to enter the next class at West Point, Annapolis or Colorado Springs in July, 1982 must turn in their application to the Congressman's Moorhead office by October 1. The application must include two letters of recommendation, a score from the ACT or PSAT test, a high school transcript, and a letter explaining why the candidate wants to enter the service academy.

The other basic requirements are that the candidate be a citizen, between the ages of 17 and 22 and unmarried.

After the application has been received, candidates will be asked to attend screening at the Detroit Lakes Holiday Inn on October 31 or November 14. Rep. Stangeland has named a 12-member board to interview candidates on those days.

After those screenings have been completed, a principal nominee and 10 alternates for each slot will be named. Those individuals will undergo physical examinations and other tests before the service academy announces which candidate receives the appointment to the class of 1986.

Qualified individuals who are interested in applying for a nomination must send their application to the Congressman's office at the M-F Building, 403 Center Avenue, Moorhead, MN 56560.

Citizens May Comment On Long Term Care

Minnesotans will have a chance to comment on a preliminary plan for improving the "long term care" services available to the elderly and the physically disabled in this state, at a series of public meetings set for September 22. One of the meetings will be at Northland Apartments, Sixth and America, Bemidji, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The plan was drafted under a federally-funded long term care system development project. Work of the project was done by a state long term care planning advisory committee and a group of six task forces.

Members of the advisory committee and the task forces were appointed by state health commissioner George Pettersen, M.D., at the request of governor Albert Quie. The members included representatives of business, labor, various government agencies, the state legislature, professional groups, public and private organizations that provide long term care, and consumer groups like the senior federation.

Governor Quie and Dr. Pettersen are encouraging the public to attend the meetings Tuesday because they feel that community participation is of vital importance to the success of the project. Copies of the proposed plan will be available for inspection at the meetings.

The long term care plan outlines ways to improve the management of services for people unable to care for themselves, especially those over age 65. The plan includes institutional care, like that provided in nursing homes, as well as "community-based" care. Community-based care includes a variety of services available to persons still living at home, like homemaking, adult day care, special housing and transportation.

The preliminary task force recommendations include:

—Development of programs to aid family, friends and other who provide "informal" long term care;

—Development of systems for managing the services provided to an individual, and consumer complaint mechanisms, for community-based as well as institutional programs;

—Improvement of existing statewide systems for gathering information about long term care services; and —Development of a mechanism for coordinating government activity in the area of long term care.

State NFO Convention Set In St. Cloud

DeVon Woodland, national president of the National Farmers organization (NFO) will address the Minnesota National Farmers organization convention at the Sunwood Inn and convention center in St. Cloud September 26.

State NFO president Eugene Paul of Delavan will call the convention to order at 12:30 p.m. Merle Lundeen of Trail will seek election to the national NFO board at the meeting.

Afternoon's business will include the nomination of a director to serve on the national board and an alternate director.

Delegates and guests will hear reports on the progress and goals of the organization's commodity programs.

Woodland, a Blackfoot, Idaho farmer, will speak after the banquet. "With farm costs continuing to go higher, and no leveling off in sight, it is important that members of the NFO involve themselves in the convention this fall, as the organization gears up to make its programs more effective in the following year," Paul said.

Public is welcome to attend both the afternoon business session and Woodland's speech.

Hog Prices Highest Since March of 1979

Minnesota farmers averaged $49.80 per hundred weight for their hogs in August, the highest monthly price since March of 1979. Beef cattle prices also edged higher, showing a $2.80 per hundred weight gain from July. Calf prices, however, were the lowest since November 1978 while lamb and wool prices also fell.

Prices for most major Minnesota crops fell from July-August with soybeans hitting a low for the year of $6.64 per bushel. Wheat dropped below the $4 per bushel mark for the second consecutive month this year while corn prices were the lowest since last September.

For the U.S., cattle prices were lower than July and hog prices were up only 10 cents per hundred weight. All feed grain and hay prices were lower except for barley. Soybeans and flax also fell from the July level.

Farmers paid less for feed and diesel fuel during August — however farm supplies and replacement cattle and hog prices were higher than July.

'U'M President To Take Leave For 3 Months

C. Peter Magrath, president of the University of Minnesota for the past seven years, will take a three-month leave of absence next summer to study higher education issues.

Magrath's plan for a "mini-sabbatical" leave was approved unanimously by the board of regents. Under the plan, he will be gone from mid-June to mid-September 1982.

Magrath told board members he plans to "read, study and reflect" on planning issues in higher education; administration, including the work of education governing boards and government bodies; and his particular interest, international education. He said he does not plan to stay in the Twin Cities during his leave.

Kenneth Keller, vice president for academic affairs, will step in for Magrath during those months.

"Since becoming an academic administrator in 1968 at the University of Nebraska, I have never had an opportunity to spend any uninterrupted time reading and studying," Magrath wrote in a letter to the board. "A three-month leave would be consistent with our policy of faculty sabbaticals and is done from time to time for presidents of other universities."

Board chairman Wenda Moore said she has asked Magrath to organize the results of his studies when he returns "in papers that we can reflect on."

Safety is YOUR Business

Stangeland: Northern Tier Project Needed

Congressman Arlan Stangeland expressed disappointment over a recommendation by a Washington State judge which threatens the construction of the crucial Northern Tier pipeline project which would bring oil to Minnesota.

The Northern Tier project would bring crude oil from Alaska's Prudue Bay to a marine oil terminal at the mouth of Pudget Sound near Port Angeles, WA. The oil would then be shipped to the upper Midwest through a 1,491-mile pipeline ending in Clearbrook, MN. Construction was scheduled to be completed by 1985.

But now, according to news reports, a recommendation by Judge John von Reis has treatened to stop the project in its tracks. In a 486-page document distributed recently, von Reis recommended that the oil terminal and pipeline not be built.

Von Reis, acting as advisor to the Washington Energy Facility Site Evaluation Council (WEFSEC), claims that the possibility of fires at the oil terminal is too great, that possible spills from the pipeline would damage Pudget Sound, and that Washington State would not benefit greatly from the project.

If WEFSEC accepts von Reis' recommendation, it will ask Washington Gov. John Spellman to stop the project. Spellman has the power to kill the project single-handedly, even though the project will have a direct impact on the well-being of five other states.

"I am extremely disappointed by Judge von Reis' recommendation," Rep. Stangeland said. "I believe that the local interests of Washington State have been placed ahead of the energy needs of the entire nation. The fact that the judge's third-major complaint against the pipeline was that it wouldn't benefit Washington greatly is a clear sign that parochial interests are threatening a crucial program.

"The pipeline would bring badly-needed Alaskan oil to Minnesota, which is an energy desert," Rep. Stangeland continued. "It is easy for Washington State to disapprove an oil pipeline for the Midwest because they have plentiful sources of cheap hydro-electric power. But now that the federal government has built all those dams along the Columbia River, people out there think that our energy needs in the Midwest don't matter."

"This project is safe, for Washington state and for the whole upper Midwest," Rep. Stangeland said. "It was approved by President Carter's Secretary of the Interior, Cecil Andrus.

"Now, in most cases, I am a firm supporter of states' rights and local decision-making authority," the Congressman added. "But we are in the midst of an on-going energy crisis. And the energy needs of America must come before the desires of individual states.

"I hope WEFSEC will reject Judge von Reis' recommendation or that Gov. Spellman will approve the project anyway," Rep. Stangeland concluded. "But if the energy needs of this country are going to be held hostage by Washington State, then I will take action in Congress to over-ride the local veto and to bring this badly-needed project to completion."

At City Council Tuesday . . .

Complaint Heard About Food Sales Restrictions

Recent actions involving Everybody's Market, and purchase of $9,800 worth of Christmas decorations were among subjects dealt with by the Thief River Falls city council at its regular meeting Tuesday in the council chambers at the city auditorium.

Mrs. Gladys Barron complained to the council about actions taken by Rolland Sande, Thief River Falls, food inspector for the Minnesota department of agriculture, just prior to the Everybody's Market event. Ten days prior to the event, which has been going on for five or six years, participants were notified that baked goods, jellies, jams and pickles would not be allowed to be sold unless prepared in an approved kitchen. She claimed that "what we were told is not what the law says."

Stating that she was representing Trinity Lutheran church women and herself, she said that such interpretations of the law affected a lot of other groups, including scouts and 4-H as examples. Alderman Bill Penning commented he objected to "interpretations of the law by bureaucracy staff." Chamber of Commerce executive vice-president Jerry Sandstrom noted that the ruling had "caused an uproar" and a new ruling had been obtained just six days prior to the event. He said that officials of the state food inspector's office had admitted they "turned their heads" to such "technically illegal" activities.

Mayor Bob Carlson said that Mrs. Barron "had a good point, but we don't quite know how to get ahold of it." Council directed the city attorney's office to work with Mrs. Barron and Sandstrom in getting specific complaints and then contacting the State Attorney General to possibly "change the law or get a better interpretation of it."

Alderman Ambrose Wysoski brought a recommendation from the finance committee that the city purchase $9,800 worth of new Christmas lighting using liquor store funds. The old decorations have been in use for 14 years. "Why does our liquor fund always get depleted?" commented Penning. "We'll never get a new building." A comment that he was "being put in the position of voting against Christmas" brought laughs and comments referring to the fact that his position is up for reelection this year.

Mayor Carlson said he had taken a survey which indicated the majority of people on the street were willing to spend their tax money for the new decorations.

When the matter came up for a roll call vote, Penning's approval made it unanimous to go ahead with the purchase.

Discussion was held on the parking and assessment district committee's recommendations made at last Friday's meeting. Mayor Carlson

A number of other donated items were also auctioned, including a muskie fishing trip. The auction totaled about $12,000, with major items including a snowmobile and two limited edition Ducks Unlimited shotguns, one 20 gauge and one 12 gauge. The two guns contributed over $2,000 to the auction total.

School Board And Teachers Far From Pact

Discussion at the most recent negotiating session between the School District 564 board of education and the Thief River Falls Education association Monday indicated that the two groups are far from reaching an agreement on a two-year contract for 1981-82 and 1982-83 school years.

A listing provided by the teacher negotiators indicated 34 different items on which the board and faculty are not in total agreement, according to Supt. Robert Block of the Thief River Falls school system.

The association provided to the board its projection of the financial condition of the school district, Supt. Block said, "indicating some concerns regarding past projections in fund balances not being equal to the actual fund balance".

Supt. Block also said the teachers pointed out some interpretation differences of the unappropritaed balance as projectee by the superintendent at the last negotiation meeting. He said he will review their suggestions for a presentation at the next negotiating session, scheduled for September 29, at 7 p.m.

A counter-proposal was made by the faculty to the board's offer made at the prior session. It involved language areas of adult education, chief instructor and summer school principal and in total amounted to 12 hundredths of one per cent. The board felt this was insignificant, Supt. Block said, in view of the board's addition to three per cent increase at the previous meeting.

The teachers association has filed a strike notice with the district.

Organist Ruthie Mosbeck, friend of the bride, played "Wedding Provessional," as the wedding party assembled at the altar. During the ceremony, Julie Nelson, Bloomington, sister of the groom, sang "Wedding Prayer," "I'll Never Say Good-Bye," and "Because." Reader was Kim Ralston, friend of the bride.

Forming the chancel setting were two seven-branched candelabra with blue tapers and large blue bows.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a gown of white satin with an embroidered net overlay, designed and sewn by the bride and her aunt, Lois Weiss. The fitted bodice with sweetheart neckline was inlayed with chiffon and edged with gathered embroidered net. The fitted sleeves with scallops at the wrists, were of embroidered net. Gathered into the high waistline were the peplum and full skirt, each descending in back to form the train. Her headpiece was a wreath of babies' breath, stephanotis, blue baby mums, accented in back with white ribbon streamers. She carried a bouquet of white Sweetheart roses, babies' breath, blue baby mums, stephanotis and ivy from her mother's wedding bouquet.

The flower girl was Stacey Jackson, Columbus, Ohio, cousin of the bride. Their baby blue floor-length gowns with spaghetti straps tied at the shoulders were accented with white satin trim and belt. They carried white fans with flowers matching those in the bride's bouquet.

Attending the groom as best man was Keith Pierson, Roseau, a friend. Groomsmen were Dan Nemanick, Grand Forks, N.D., Duane Kleven, Appleton, friends of the groom, and Brian Noreen, a brother of the bride. They wore gray tuxedos with long tails, white shirts, striped ascots and blue baby mum boutonnieres.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Noreen was attired in a floor-length gown of a pastel blue floral print, styled with a gathered waistline and small ruffles on the sleeves and hemline. Her corsage was of blue tinted roses, stephanotis and babies' breath. A similar corsage complemented the pastel blue chiffon gown worn by the mother of the groom.

Honor guests were Johanna Krohn, Viking, grandmother of the bride; Alfred Nelson of Minneapolis and Christine Olson of Louisburg, grandparents of the groom. Special guests were Clifford Lindquist, Thief River Falls; Nora Johnson, St. Paul, and Evie Krenelka, East Grand Forks, friends of the bride.

Local WCTU Hosts Minnesota State Convention

One Hundred fourth annual convention of the Minnesota State Women's Christian Temperance Union was held in Thief River Falls from September 14-17 at Our Saviour's Lutheran church.

The theme of the convention was "Abundant Treasurers" with State President Mrs. Ray Saari of Angora presiding. The convention began with registrations, committee meetings and Praise and Prayer service led by Christian outreach chairman Mrs. Carl Bodin, Minneapolis. Mrs. Bodin was also in charge of the call to prayer for the many prayer requests received.

The official opening of the convention began with salutes to the United States, Christian and Temperance Flags, and the reading of the state resolutions, which corresponded with those given at the National convention.

At the evening session, Rev. Les Galland, pastor of the host church, led the devotions based on Rom. 1:16. Welcomes were given by Mrs. Elaine Ose, president of the local union; Mrs. Gilbert Loe of Wannaska, district president; Mayor Bob Carlson; Rodney Johnson, a representative of the local AVTI, and Glen Espe, principal of Knox and Mark Twain schools; and Dr. Charles Samuelson of the Northland Community college. Samuelson stated that it is a state law that harmful effects of alcohol and narcotics must be taught; and he also gave information on the Crock foundation, concerned with the children of alcoholics.

The keynote address was given by State President Mrs. Saari. She stated that with 17,000,000 alcoholics in the nation, which is the combined population of 17 states, alcoholism is being accepted as the American way of life. However, she said, that the trend is slowly turning. A new organization MADD (Mothers Against Drunken Drivers) begun in California, is working for more stringent laws and the enforcement of those laws. She also encouraged writing to congressmen asking for support in raising the drinking age to 21 years.

During the report from various committees, it was noted that the work by the WCTU is progressing, through speech and art contests, publications, educational bulletins, films, meetings, enlisting of new members, and the continuation of the White Ribbon recruit program, dedicating children to a life of abstinence.

At the election of officers, Mrs. Alida Brekke and Mrs. Lois McWaters were selected as promotion secretary and recording secretary, respectively. The group also went on record to retain "Christian," in the official name of the organization, Women's Christian Temperance Union; to support Brown bill 1425, placing a warning on liquor bottles; and that the advertising of alcoholic beverages should not be tax deductible. The group also objected to the use of alcohol in recipes.

Tuesday's sessions included a White Ribbon recruit service, (publicized in an earlier edition of the Times) the poster contest with Julie Wik winning the high school division; the memorial service, which included tributes to Mrs. Earle Ripley and Mrs. Hilda Wilson; who were members of the local unit.

The convention highlight was the banquet with over 150 attending. The program included introduction of officers, a concert by The Kings Men of Thief River Falls and the convention address by National Treasurer Margaret Gee of Evanston, Ill. She stated that "children must not be taught to drink moderately. You do not fight evil by permitting it to be used moderately. Evils of alcohol beverages will triumph if men and women do nothing to prevent its use. Churches, schools and homes must play an important role in teaching the harmful use of alcohol." The program concluded with the White Ribbon rally song with delegates and guests holding lighted candles. The benediction was given by Rev. Floyd Dalzell of this city.

At the closing session Wednesday morning, Mrs. Norman Sollom of Fergus Falls spoke on drug awareness in nursing homes and hospitals. The convention closed with the unbroken circle with everyone joining hands and singing "God be With You 'till we meet again."

General chairmen of the convention were Mrs. Tarkel Ose and Mrs. Valborg Hanson. Mrs. Olga Larson was in charge of registrations and convention packets, and Mrs. Marie Gustafson, housing. Mrs. Gustafson also headed the tour of the city, which included visits to the Pioneer Village, Oakland Park Nursing home, Valley Home, the first hospital on Red Lake boulevard; the junior college and vocational school, Our Saviour's academy, the old hospital on Knight and fourth street, and Northwestern hospital and clinic and Arctic Enterprises. Music at the convention was provided by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Erickson, Mrs. Ivan Gjovik, Mrs. Ray Persson and Mrs. William Goodman, and Youth Temperance campers led by Mrs. Frances (Mom) Poston of Moose Lake. Organists were Mrs. Floyd Dalzell and Mrs. Pearl Loe. Meals, including the banquet, were served by the women of Our Saviours Lutheran church.

The 1982 convention will be held at Austin.

Farmers Union Head Deplores Senate Action

"Dairy farmers in Minnesota are angry, and with good reason, over the U.S. Senate's acceptance of the Reagan administration's deplorable dairy price support program." Minnesota Farmers Union president Cy Carpenter declared today. Carpenter called the administration's proposal, introduced by Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, "the worst dairy program in 30 years."

"This proposal will mean an annual loss to each average dairy farmer of $9,000 in income," Carpenter said. "I don't think many of us would take that kind of an income cut lying down.

"In addition, this action demonstrates the inadequate representation farmers have had in Washington," he said.

Jepsen's amendment was passed as the full Senate rejected an earlier committee proposal to set the dairy price support floor at 75 per cent of parity, and allow for adjustments to be made only once per year. (Under the existing farm bill, price adjustments have been made twice each year to allow for inflation.)

In addition, discretion is given to the secretary of agriculture to skip annual adjustments altogether if the projected Commodity Credit corporation (CCC) purchases of surplus dairy products is expected to exceed $750 million over a 12-month period.

"In actuality, the discretion will mean inflation will drive price supports well below the 70 per cent of parity figure. It is likely to mean the nation's dairy farmers will not see price adjustments until October 1982," Carpenter said.

The issue is of vital importance to all Minnesotans, Carpenter pointed out, since agriculture makes up a major portion of the state's economy. Minnesota ranked fourth in dairy income in 1980, with $1.7 billion in cash receipts.

Senator Rudy Boschwitz, IR-Minn., objected to the Jepsen amendment, and offered a substitute of his own.

The Boschwitz amendment would have set price supports at a minimum of 75 per cent of parity, with authority to drop this floor to 70 per cent of parity if CCC purchases totaled more than $500 million, or if CCC purchased more than 3.52 billion pounds of dairy products.

"While we commend Senator Boschwitz for his stand against the administration on the floor of the U.S. senate, it was too little too late," Carpenter said. The dairy action has been under consideration since February.

"Dairy farmers in Minnesota are hopeful that Senator Boschwitz will assume a leadership role to create a working majority with Senators David Durenberger, IR-Minn., Robert Kasten, R-Wisc., and Mark Andrews, R-N.D., on the senate floor," he added.

While the senate has finished its work on the dairy portion of the 1981 farm bill for now, the ball is not out of the senate's court yet, Carpenter explained. The entire bill will be considered by the U.S. House of Representatives, and then referred to a conference committee.

After differences between the two bills are worked out by conferences, the senate will once again consider a final version.

"There is still hope that the senate will stand up for their constituents by rejecting the dairy portion of the bill," Carpenter said.

"I feel very strongly that the President's threat to veto the farm bill if it did not meet his rather low standards will come back to haunt him," Carpenter said. "Cutting $9,000 in income to each of the millions of dairy farmers in this country will do nothing to help the economy of the nation or the state."

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Peres

Q. Pastor Don, I am a teenager and have not been a Christian very long. I keep hearing Ministers talk about how Satan was once in heaven but was cast out. How did this happen and why?

A. At one time, Satan or the Devil as most of us know him, was god's right hand man. He was a cherubim, a spiritual being in the Heavenlies, created by God, for the highest duties in Heaven.

In Ezekial 28:14, he was called, "the annointed cherub that covereth." That is, he was the guardian or protector of the "Throne of God". He was perfect in all his ways from the day that he was created, until iniquity was found in him.

Ezekial 28:12 says that in him was the "fullness of wisdom", and the "perfection of beauty."

But it was his "beauty" that caused the pride of his being cast out of heaven. Ezekial 28:17

The cause of Satan's fall is described in Isaiah 14:12-15. Verse 12 says his name was Lucifer, which meant, son of the morning or brightness.

Satan or Lucifer began to allow pride in his heart in verse 13 & 14 and said, "I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north: I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the Most High."

Verse 15 teaches, thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit. This is where hell originated. It was made for the Devil and his fallen angels.

Satan was cast out of heaven because of his proud rebellious spirit, in thinking that he was going to conquer God's throne and rule in God's place.

Satan is now the adversary of God and man but his final destiny is the lake of fire.

Revelation 20:10 says, "And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever."

If you have any questions you would like to have answered from the Bible, please write Pastor Don Peres, Box 129, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Tax Revenues $34 Million Under Estimate

State tax collections for the first two months of the 1981-83 biennium are $34 million below estimates, acting finance commissioner Val Vikmanis told the Minnesota House tax committee recently.

Vikmanis said there's "no basis for expecting improvement" in the lagging state and national economies that have caused the lower tax collections.

If tax collection shortfalls total more than $160 million for the biennium, the state's budget could be out of balance. The $160 million "cushion" comes from a planned $90 million surplus and $65 million of additional tax revenue federal tax changes may bring.

Governor Quie has formed a task force to revise revenue estimates. If they find that tax collection shortfalls will exceed that cushion, Quie aide Robert Renner Jr. told the committee the governor would call a third special session and ask the legislature to cut the state's $8.6 billion budget to bring it back into balance.

In a joint House and Senate tax committee meeting, revenue department staff explained how the federal tax changes might affect state revenues. Although the state will collect about $140 million more in individual income taxes, it might lose $77 million in corporate taxes if the state adopts the federal accelerated depreciation schedules. House tax committee chairman Irvin Anderson (DFL, International Falls) said the state may have to decide whether it can afford to adopt those schedules, which lower corporate taxes.

Definition Of School Needs To Be Changed

Educators told the House education committee that Minnesota's definition of a school needs changing. At a September 16 meeting, committee members heard from Rep. Willis Eken (DFL-Twin Valley), chief author of H.F. 1459, which sets out minimum standards for school curriculum and requires teachers for all subjects, except religion, to receive board of teaching licenses.

"We need some clear definition of what is a school, what subjects must be covered, and what quality of instruction we should insist on," said Pius Lacher, superintendent of Mora public schools.

Commissioner of education John Feda said the bill is not directed at well-established private schools, but at the small "home schools" that have cropped up in recent years. Home schools are those that parents, some religiously motivated, start up in their own homes. Some of the teachers in these schools aren't state certified.

Current Minnesota law says that non-public school teachers must have qualifications "essentially equivalent" to those of public school teachers. Bill Wettergren, Minnesota school boards association, said school superintendents and county attorneys have a hard time interpreting this language.

Rep. Eken noted that the licensing section of the bill would provoke the most discussion.

The House education committee will meet again on October 14 to hear opponents of the bill.

State's Budget Studied By Committees

Legislative committees met September 15 and 16, and Minnesota House members faced a familiar problem, the state's budget. State department heads delivered preliminary reports to the appropriations, transportation and health and welfare committees, outlining new federal regulations, spending cuts, and program changes which affect grants and programs the state has already figured into the budget.

Changes in regulations may mean unexpected costs to state and local governments.

The governor's task force on federal reductions, which includes heads of the affected state departments, identified seven programs which won't get federal funding in 1982. Housing and urban development planning, housing rehabilitation, the Upper Great Lakes regional commission, construction grants for wastewater treatment, parks and recreation acquisition, and federal CETA funds are programs Congress eliminated.

Minnesota can expect cuts of 30 to 51 per cent in another seven of the 40 federally funded programs, according to the task force.

Arthur Noot, commissioner of public welfare, indicated that Congress didn't reduce the appropriation to all human services, but the small increases in medical assistance, AFDC, education aid for the handicapped and vocational aid won't meet the demand for services in Minnesota.

A 25 per cent cut in preventative health care block grants, and lowered eligibility requirements for AFDC and food stamps means Minnesota will either have to make up the difference for the lost funding or reduce service in many areas.

Hire Firm To Review State Investments

Charges that the state board of investment is receiving a low rate of return on investments prompted the board to hire the Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Company consulting firm to review the state's investment practices.

On September 16, the Minnesota House governmental operations committee heard from the firm on its findings, and recommendations which the company hopes would "contribute to a stronger, more responsive governance system and improved investment and administrative practices within the Minnesota state board of investment."

To date, five constitutional officers (governor, attorney general, state auditor, state treasurer and secretary of state) make up the SBI, which is responsible for approximately $5 billion in assets. This money comes from major retirement funds which include the Teachers Retirement association, Public Employee Retirement Association, Minnesota State Retirement system, the Post Retirement fund, and other state funds.

One recommendation would create a new board to invest pension fund assets. Members of the new board would include three constitutional officers, representatives from retirement funds, a retiree and two public members. The current board would continue to invest state funds.

A change in the composition of the advisory council which advises the SBI and its director is another recommendation. The council would have more responsibility for formulating investment objectives. Another recommendation would allow retirement systems to withdraw assets from the SBI.

The SBI and the legislature will continue to look at these and other recommendations and hope to take action on them in the upcoming session.

Local Realtors Attend State Convention

Three area representatives of the Thief River Falls board of realtors recently attended the 35th annual convention of the Minnesota association of realtors in Rochester.

Attending the "Prescription for Success" convention were Jan Kramer, John Eisbrener and Val Holmes.

Thief River Falls board donated five packages of wild rice grown in this area for use as prizes at the convention.

Jim DuVal, Cedar Crest, New Mexico, discussed "Residential Real Estate as an Investment for You and Your Clients," and Dr. Jack Carlson, an economist form Washington,, D.C. spoke on the "Health of Our Industry."

Government officials spoke in a panel discussion concerning measures the government can take to help solve the money crisis in America.

It was announced at the convention that St. Cloud state university will offer a degree in real estate, following efforts by Dr. George Karvel, professor and holder of the Minnesota chair in real estate.

The Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act was enacted in 1927, according to the U.S. Department of Labor's "Important Events in American Labor History.

Land O' Lakes, Midland Plan Consolidation

Boards of directors of Midland Cooperatives, Inc. and Land O'Lakes, Inc., both regional cooperatives headquartered in the Twin Cities area of Minnesota, met recently and approved in concept a draft plan for consolidating the operations of the two organizations.

Unification discussions between Midland and Land O'Lakes were first announced August 21. Since that time management and committees of both boards of directors have met to consider details of the plan for unification.

Approval of a final plan of unification will be voted upon by the two boards late in October and will also require membership approval of both cooperatives.

Midland, based in Columbia Heights, is a regional wholesale organization owned by more than 650 community cooperatives in the Upper Midwest. Sales in 1980 were $523.5 million.

Land O'Lakes, based in Arden Hills, is owned by nearly 950 local farm supply and dairy processing cooperatives and more than 10,000 farmer stockholders. Total farmer membership exceeds 250,000. Sales in 1980 were $3.3 billion, $700 million of which comes from the sale of feed, seed, fertilizers and other farm supplies. In addition to its farm supply business, Land O'Lakes is also a major marketer of packaged foods processed from milk, beef, soybeans and turkey produced by its members.

Both organizations have a similar cooperative philosophy and a common membership territory.

A group of 11 advanced photography students from the University of North Dakota (UND) are "invading" Grafton on a special class assignment by photographing lifestyles and work of the people who live there.

Among the students will be Diane Holen, Goodridge, a Thief River Falls Times staff member during the summer months.

Harley Straus, UND assistant professor of journalism, said he made the assignment "because students often have difficulty photographing people they don't know." He explained that photographers, especially for news organizations, must be able to function in unfamiliar surroundings.

Each student is required to use at least 100 feet of film, or take about 600 photographs. The group will be visiting the Grafton community on six different Saturdays. Straus is accompanying the students.

LEGISLATIVE REPORT

by LeRoy Stumpf

STATE REPRESENTATIVE
DISTRICT 1B

The budgeting process this year was one of the most difficult ones in state history. Our programs and services came face to face with two serious obstacles . . . first, dwindling resources due to the economic downturn, and second, two years of financial instability that can be traced to the income tax indexing program which cost millions of dollars more than anticipated. This, in part, was why the $300 million surplus of just two years ago turned into a half-billion dollar deficit.

The Governor asked us to cut some services and we did. Then he proposed a tax hike which we passed reluctantly. It is not easy to vote for a tax increase, but the responsibility for funding falls to the Legislature and we had to face up to that responsibility in order to resolve this year's deficit and balance the budget for the next two years.

Following are some of the major items in the $578 million Omnibus Tax Bill passed by the 1981 Legislature:

—$25 million in property tax relief

—An increase in the sales tax from four per cent to five per cent, except on new and used farm machinery which will remain at four per cent.

—An eight per cent limit on local tax levy increases, except for some special levies.

—An increase in local government aids of $22.8 million for 1983.

—An adjustment in income tax indexing.

—A reduction in the medical deductions allowed on state income taxes to bring them into conformity with federal deductions.

A change in the school agricultural credit from 17 to 18 mills on the first 320 acres of homestead property, 10 mills on 320 to 640 homestead acres, and 8 mills on homestead property over 640 acres.

—A provision for valuating agricultural land at the lesser of its market value or free market rental rate capitalized at 5.8 per cent for taxes payable in 1984.

—A tax credit for homeowners whose property taxes increase over 20 per cent; the credit will be 75 per cent of the increase up to $200.

In addition to the Tax Bill we also passed the "Bonus Bill" which will provide $78 million to fund education and nursing home programs that were trimmed by earlier budget cuts.

The administration was authorized to end fiscal year 1982 in the red, as it requested. It also asked for increased short-term borrowing authorization, which the Legislature also reluctantly granted . . . increasing the maximum from $100 million to $360 million. But we did require that a plan be submitted to the Legislature next session recommending how to decrease or eliminate the need for short-term borrowing.

With these measures passed, the 1981 Legislature ended both its regular session and two special sessions. But since that time in early July we have received news of more budget shortfalls at the state level, and also of severe cutbacks in federal aids.

Both those issues were under discussion when House Committees met for a two-day mini-session last week. So far there are no answers to these latest financial difficulties, but they are being studied and solutions are under investigation.

I will keep you informed about the state's financial status. In the meantime, please write me with any special questions or concerns you may have. My address during the interim months is Route 1, Box 47, Plummer, 56748, or phone 465-4274.

Acidophilus (ase' dafeles) milk is made by adding a bacteria culture known as Lactobacillus acidophilus to fresh fluid milk, usually made with lowfat of skim milk. It does not change the flavor of the milk.

WCTU MESSAGE

In the fourth special report to the U.S. Congress on Alcohol and Health from the secretary of Health and Human Services, January 1981, Surgeon General and Assistant Secretary for Health, Julius B. Richmond, M. D., wrote:

"Among the many problems that diminish the strength and well-being of the American people, alochol-related problems are most salient. With significant linkages to suicide, homicide, accidental death and injury, chronic disease, family distress, and lowered productivity, alcoholism and problem drinking invade virtually every important aspect of reality. Personal tragedy, human suffering and social burden follow in wake of these problems with alarming consistency . . . . Prevention programs addressed to alcohol-related problems have been conceived, designed and started. In laboratories throughout the Nation, distinguished scientists are turning their attention to the biological, psychological and sociocultural factors that contribute to alcoholism and problem drinking. In the work place and on the nation's highways, important programs that increase the likelihood of early identification and intervention are now in place. New knowledge concerning the relationship between alcohol and health challenges some previously held beliefs about alcohol-related problems, substantiates others, and encouraged searching for further insights and understandings."

SEPTEMBER may seem a little early for trimming the tree, but not for Mrs. Marland (Roberta) Kloety. She's been doing it at least once a month since last Christmas. "I was just too lazy to take it down," she joked. The decorations here, included 44 candles and cards and gifts received for her birthday Friday, September 18. Other decorations have included firecrackers on the Fourth and pencils before school started. "With five kids and two grandchildren," she said, "I won't run out of birthdays. There's something every month."

2 From TRF Student Teach Fall Quarter

Two Bemidji state university students from Thief River Falls will be student teaching during fall quarter, according to Dr. Gordon Oberg, director of Bemidji state university student teaching.

Jodi L. Ranum, will be student teaching at Knox elementary school and Franklin Middle school in Thief River Falls and Kathryn Dahlstrom will be student teaching at Stonebridge elementary at Stillwater.

Student teaching is required of all students seeking the Bachelor of Science degree in education and Minnesota certification for teaching. Students placed in area schools by BSU are supervised by a teacher from the school district, as well as a supervisor from the division of education at BSU.

While serving in the school systems, student teachers observe daily classroom techniques and routines, serve on occasion as the teacher of the class, and assist their supervising teacher in preparation and presentation of class materials.

Student teaching experience is usually the culmination of a student's preparation for the teaching profession and is viewed by many students as the most valuable requirement of their teacher education.

House Reviews Issues During Mini-Session

Minnesota's financial condition dominated committee agendas when the House of Representatives met in mini-session on September 15 and 16. The full House doesn't meet during the informal session, but committees hold hearings to review how new laws are working, plan for the upcoming session, and do in-depth studies on issues.

Taxes and appropriations committees looked at new financial projections and how federal cutbacks could affect Minnesota, continuing the task of balancing the state budget. Other committees discussed what funding cuts will do to highway maintenance and upkeep, welfare program aid, state institutions, energy programs and education.

Two legislative reapportionment plans were before the House reapportionment and elections committee. Rep. Paul McCarron, DFL-Spring Lake Park, committee chairman, is sponsoring one plan. The other comes from Rep. Gerald Knickerbocker, IR-Hopkins. Both reduce the number of legislators representing Minneapolis and St. Paul, whereas, suburban areas would gain seats because of population shifts.

Committees also studied issues concerning copper-nickel exploration, agricultural land preservation, creating an intermediate court of appeals, home mortgages, law enforcement, grain inspector lay-offs and the dram shop act.

Future mini-sessions will be October 13 and 14, and November 17 and 18.

Ditching Helps in Mosquito Control

by Lawrence Howe
Smithsonian News Service

It has long been the bane of outdoor enthusiasts everywhere.

Michigan residents jokingly spot tee-shirts referring to it as their "state bird." But it is really no laughing matter.

"It" is the pesky mosquito and it's been a nemesis of man for thousands of years. Since earliest times, an arsenal of techniques—most recently, chemicals— has been used with varying degrees of success to battle this hypodermic nuisance and health hazard.

Consider the case of malaria, which is transmitted by the Anopheles mosquito. Malaria once afflicted thousands of people yearly in the United States. Scientist virtually eliminated the disease in North America in the early 1950s through public education programs, large-scale drainage projects and widespread use of DDT. Today, however, malaria is on the upswing in many other parts of the world.

Unfortunately, DDT turned out to be a mixed blessing. Alarming levels of the chemical persisted in the environment for many years after its application, and it gradually accumulated in the tissues of many creatures. Particularly upsetting was the widely publicized thinning of bird eggshells. DDT was banned in the early 1970s as other "safer" pesticides came into use, and then, ironically, developed their own problems.

Now, one of the earliest methods used in the United States to control the mosquito is getting a new tryout in Maryland marshes.

Instead of using chemicals, researchers have been trying literally to "ditch" mosquitoes by cutting channels in the marshes. This destroys mosquito breeding areas by providing habitats for mosquito-eating fish and altering water levels, thereby preventing development of larvae.

Initial results from the first three years of a long-range study on the effects of mosquito ditching are extremely promising, according to entomologist Cyrus Lesser of the Maryland department of agriculture, Salisbury.

"Ditching has reduced mosquito populations by almost 100 per cent on our test sites," he says. "It's not only eliminated the need to apply insecticides at the sites, but has had beneficial effects on the environment. On some of the sites, the ditches have created new areas for fish and their populations have increased, and small ponds created by our ditching method also provide new habitat for shorebirds and waterfowl."

The use of ditching to reduce mosquito populations is by no means new. New Jersey controlled mosquitoes through a method known as "parallel ditching" as early as 1906. The technique involved cutting parallel ditches approximately 150 to 200 feet apart throughout the marshes. Soon, parallel ditching became the principal means of controlling salt marsh mosquitoes.

During the Depression years, state and federal agencies employed thousands of people to dig ditches in tidewater marshes from Virginia to Maine. However, by 1938, studies indicated that parallel ditching was adversely affecting some of the plants and animals in the marshes.

Despite these earlier problems, scientists decided to take a new look at ditching because of the growing resistance of mosquitoes to insecticides, as well as the cost of repeated pesticide applications.

A joint project was begun in September 1978 by Lesser and Dr. Dennis Whigham, botanist at the Smithsonian's Chesapeake Bay center for environmental studies in edgewater, Md., to examine a non-parallel ditching method known as "open marsh water management" as a control technique on mosquito breeding marshes.

As their test site, the researchers chose Davis Island, located within the 10,000-acre Deal Island wildlife management area on the eastern shore of Maryland's Chesapeake bay. The area supports a large population of the salt marsh mosquito, Aedes sollicitans, and also contains many small water holes which the insects use as their breeding sites.

THE MESSAGE In Melody, a program of sacred music, will be presented at the Viking Covenant church 7:30 p.m. Friday by the Fred Libengood family. Fred, Marlys, Barry, Brent and Pam have sung family concert style through 40 states and four provinces of Canada. Libengood also has made regular appearances on various radio and television shows as a soloist.

A vicious biter, Aedes sollicitans is the most aggressive and migratory of the five species of salt marsh mosquitoes in Maryland. Capable of being carried by the wind up to 15 or more miles per day, the pest is common throughout coastal regions from Texas to New Brunswick, Canada, and as far inland as brackish waters and salt pools extend, even as far as Kentucky and Ohio.

During the peak season in August and September, as many as five million per acre infest Maryland's eastern shore. Their abundance is more than just a nuisance—the mosquito transmits dog heartworm and eastern equine encephalitis, a sometimes deadly disease, which not only afflicts horses and mules but also may be transmitted to man.

The Davis Island project involved cutting ditches approximately three feet wide and from two to three feet deep throughout the marsh to interconnect mosquito breeding sites. This allowed predatory fish to reach and devour mosquito larvae and, at the same time, removed stagnant water. The key to the procedure was connecting all of the potential mosquito breeding sites, something that wasn't done when parallel ditching was in vogue.

The scientists studied four areas having similar vegetation and drainage. Three of the sites were ditched and the fourth served as a control. In the hope of providing additional habitat for wildlife, they also created small shallow ponds coupled to the ditching network in each of the sites.

"In all three of the ditched sites," Lesser says, "mosquitoes have virtually disappeared. Ditching is effective largely because of the tremendous increase in the population of fish, which are the best biological control agents of mosquitoes."

Lesser and Whigham also have been monitoring the ecological impact of extensive ditching. Whigham has been looking at changes in the nutrient status of marsh vegetation and water, as well as the diversity and abundance of plants within the test sites.

"Changes have occurred at all sites," he acknowledges, "probably due to the altered water levels. In the driest areas, for example, some salt marsh grasses have been replaced by coarse marsh shrubs.

"But," he adds, "these unwanted changes can be avoided by controlling water table levels. And other than these adverse vegetation changes at one site, the management method has not led to any problems with either the vegetation or water quality in the adjacent estuary."

In addition to eliminating the need for repeated, costly applications of insecticides, the non-parallel ditching method has pleased conservationists. "The new ditching technique is especially beneficial to waterfowl," Dr. Vagn Flyger, a wildlife biologist with the University of Maryland, says, "It provides them with access to food, and the small ponds created throughout the marshes are ideal resting spots for migratory birds."

Researchers are hopeful that the results of the Davis Island study can be applied in Maryland and other areas to promote and improve open-marsh water management. In addition to Maryland, New Jersey and Delaware have initiated such programs.

Still, even if ditching is proven to be safe and effective, scientists admit that they have a long way to go before we can bid good riddance to this ubiquitous pest. Ditching may take care of the five species of salt marsh mosquitoes, but there are 163 additional species living and breeding in North America.

Engineer Corps to Reduce Its Workers By 38

Colonel William W. Badger, district engineer for the Corps of Engineers' St. Paul district, has announced manpower reductions within the St. Paul district's area of responsibility.

The district is responsible for water resources development which include the Souris and Red River basins, and the Upper Mississippi river from the headwaters to Lock and Dam no. 10. It is part of the North Central division which encompasses all or parts of 12 states in the Upper Midwest including the Great Lakes and Upper Mississippi river regions.

Other districts within the North Central division, which will also be affected by manpower reductions, are located at (Buffalo, N.Y.; Chicago, Ill.; Detroit, Mich.; and Rock Island, Ill. The North Central division headquarters is located in Chicago.

St. Paul district office will be reduced from a September 1981 authorized strength of 576 to a September 1982 level of 538. This reduction of 38 positions is consistent with cuts at other corps offices nation-wide in accordance with office of management and budget goals to reduce the size of the federal work force. Positions to be cut in the St. Paul district are located in the district office and field offices.

Col. Badger said that, "Every attempt will be made to achieve some of the required reductions through normal attrition, thereby minimizing adverse effects on employees. Although the manpower reductions will affect some of our work force, every effort will be made to assist displaced employees in finding other acceptable employment through reassignment, transfer or placement in other federal agencies. The manpower reduction will not affect St. Paul district's ability to provide its normal range of services to the public but it may require additional contracting for planning and design of water resources projects."

The reduction in St. Paul district will result in an annual savings of $850,000, Col. Badger said.

The realignment decision and manpower reductions are based on a study conducted in the North Central division as part of a nation-wide effort of the chief of engineers to reduce the number of federal employees while maintaining the most efficient and effective posture of the corps of engineers in accomplishing its mission.

Guide Teaches How To Reduce Tax Burden

Though the average taxpayer has put the Internal Revenue service (IRS) out of his mind for this year, he would be wrong to think the IRS has forgotten about him. Taxes are a year-round business, not only for the IRS, but also for the taxpayer--and what he does (or does not do) now will be reflected in next April's tax return.

Tax information center, an Ohio firm specializing in year-round tax planning, has just published "99 Legal Ways To Slash Your Income Taxes." This guide, which is available without charg from tax information center in New Concord, Ohio, is an effort to help American taxpayers realize they can reduce their tax burden month by month throughout the year.

According to the guide, the Internal Revenue code allows many tax-saving techniques that most taxpayers aren't aware of. For instance, a trust created for one's children can significantly reduce the family income tax bite because the parents can loan (for 10 years and one day) some for their income-producing assets to a low-cost trust for the childrens benefit. Income generated within the trust stays within the family, but is taxed at the childrens' and the trust's relatively lower rates. This also allows the trust creator to take advantage of unused exemptions belonging to the trust and the children.

Another point from "99 Legal Ways to Slash Your Income Taxes:' if the taxpayer mentioned above owns income-producing rental property, he can sell the land to the trust. The trust can then charge him ground rent for the land under the building. That ground rent will be tax-deductible to him and taxable to the children's trust at a lower rate.

For many business or professional people, the establishment of a corporation can open up a floodgate of deduction. For instance, annual company contributions to an IRS-approved corporate pension plan or profit-sharing plan are fully tax deductible (employee' voluntary contributions out of their own pay are not deductible to either the corporation or the employees, but grow tax-free). The company and employee contributions grow completely free of current income taxes on interest income, dividends, capital gains, etc., while assets are growing during the pre-retirement period.

Those planning to wed at year's end might be wise to consider the tax consequences. In many cases, a married working couple will pay more in taxes than the combined total tax liability of two single individuals. By postponing marriage vows from December until January, the couple will circumvent the "marriage tax" for at least one year.

To obtain a free copy of the tax guide, send a stamped, self-addressed business size envelope to Tax Information Center, 68210 Boden Road, New Concord, Ohio, 43762.

When you have a class reunion it usually takes weeks of planning but the Gully high school class of 1931 didn't take very long. As soon as Esther Rutkowski found out Esther Ellesson was here from Sarasota, Fla. she called Emma Nyland to tell her we should get together. Emma said fine so Esther Elleson, Emma Nyland and Esther Rutkowski got together at Emma Nylands. You can see there were only 3 in the class and only girls so it didn't take much planning. I think we have the distinction of being the smallest class and only girls but the three of us sure did a lot or reminiscing and we hope to get together next year again.

TAX EXEMPT
ALL SAVERS
CERTIFICATES*
OCTOBER 1, 1981

What is the Tax-Exempt All-Savers Certificate?

The Tax-Exempt All-Savers Certificate is a one-year certificate, issued between October 1, 1981 and December 31, 1982 with a yield equal to 70% of the average yield on 52-week Treasury Bills.

What is the certificate rate of interest based on?

The certificate must have a yield equal to 70% of the average yield on 52-week Treasury Bills.

The rate will be based on the most recent auction (before the week in which the certificate is issued).

The rate of interest, at the time you are issued your All-Savers Certificate, remains the same for the life of the certificate.

What is tax-exempt under these new savings certificate regulations?

The interest is tax-exempt up to certain maximums. The amount that anyone may exempt from income taxes under the new provision is limited to a lifetime exclusion of $1000 ($2000 in the case of a joint return).

If, for example, you as an individual receive $800 of All-Savers interest in 1982 and $500 in 1983, only the first $1000 of interest income is tax-exempt.

In the case of a joint return, if both parties receive $1600 of All-Savers interest in 1982 and $1000 in 1983, only the first $2000 of interest income is tax-exempt.

What is the minimum deposit in an All-Savers Certificate?

The minimum deposit in an All-Savers Certificate is $500.

How long will I be able to earn this tax-exempt exclusion?

First of all, you must make your deposit in an All-Savers Certificate between October 1, 1981 and December 31, 1982.

Although no further All-Savers Certificates will be issued after December 31, 1982, the interest paid on such certificates properly issued through December 31, 1982 will be entitled to the exemption.

This means that all of the interest tax-exempt under this certificate will be earned by December 31, 1983.

What is the maturity period of these All-Savers Certificates?

The maturity period of these All-Savers Certificates is one year.

Can I take my corporate funds and qualify for one of these Tax-Exempt All-Savers Certificates?

No. Any such amounts paid to corporations (including real estate investment trusts, sub-chapter S corporations and regulated investment companies) will be fully taxable.

The interest paid on an All-Savers Certificate is tax-exempt only when earned by an individual or an estate which acquires that certificate by reason of the death of the individual.

Can I use this certificate as collateral or security for a loan?

If you do, then the interest on the certificate loses its tax-exempt status and you will have to pay tax on the interest earned.

If I have to cash in my certificate prior to maturity, can I do so?

Yes, you can. However, you will lose the tax-exempt status on the interest on the certificate and all the interest earned will be subject to income tax.

Prowlers Need Football Wins

Best 0-3 team in the state. That's the way some of the Lincoln high school football team fans are describing the Prowlers. They've lost their first three games this fall, but could very easily be 2-1 at this point. Grand Forks Red River beat Thief River Falls 29-0 when the Prowlers handed the Roughriders the victory by blowing six punts in their 1981 season opener. The last two weeks they've dropped 13-8 and 13-6 decisions to Detroit Lakes and Grand Rapids, the latter being the No. 5 ranked team in Class AA football.

Maybe they aren't the best 0-3 team in the state, but defensively the Prowlers don't have to take a back seat to anybody. They held all three opponents under 100 yards on the ground, with Red River netting just 38 yards rushing, Detroit Lakes 78 and Grand Rapids 58. They have, however, been vulnerable to the pass, giving up a 69-yard touchdown pass to the Roughriders; allowing the Lakers 182 yards in the air; and giving up 118 yards and two touchdowns to the Indians' passing attack. But it's unlikely Thief River Falls will see the caliber of quarterbacks like the Lakers' Dan Douglas or the Indians' Tony Kellin the rest of the year. And in Detroit Lakes' Todd Jorgenson and Grand Rapids' Ron Renner the Prowlers have already seen the best wide receivers they'll face.

While the defense has been receiving rave reviews from the very start, the Thief River Falls offense suddenly silenced its critics with a stirring second half performance against Grand Rapids Friday when the Prowlers literally ran the ball down the Indians' throats in pulling within striking distance at 13-6 in the fourth quarter. Only a late game interception by Renner kept the Prowlers from being in position to pull off a shocking upset.

Despite the 0-3 start, Thief River Falls hasn't given up its hopes of earning a post-season playoff berth as a Class A independent. But the Prowlers will have to win five of their last six games to reach their goal.

A telephone conversation with Larry Larson of the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) this week cleared up some uncertainty on the playoff format to be used for the area Class A independents Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks and Crookston. Larson confessed to a wrong interpretation of the information when he issued a recent news release that said a Class A state playoff berth would be available to either the Prowlers, Green Wave or Pirates, based upon the best overall regular season record among the three. A tie, he reported, would be broken by using the results among the three schools.

However, just the opposite format will be used. One of those three area teams will be eligible for a playoff berth, based first on the results between the teams, with the overall won-lost record used as a tie-breaking system.

"It was something I had not reviewed," said Larson about his earlier mix-up.

There's one catch, though. And at this point it's a big question. Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks and Crookston will be eligible for a Class A playoff spot only if their record is better than .500. Right now the Prowlers are 0-3 while the Green Wave and Pirates are both 1-2.

Best possible Thief River Falls finish is 6-3, and that means sweeping, in succession, Staples, Moorhead, Bemidji, Fergus Falls, East Grand Forks and Crookston. The Prowlers could go 5-4 and still make it as long as they beat the Green Wave and Pirates along the way.

East Grand Forks, meanwhile, has games left against Langdon, Breckenridge, Crookston, Devils Lake, Thief River Falls and Fergus Falls. Crookston has Fergus Falls, Hillsboro, East Grand Forks, Barnesville and Thief River Falls. The Pirates have an open date before playing the Prowlers. Crookston must finish at least 5-3, though, since the MSHSL guidelines says it must be a better than .500 record to make the playoffs.

Miscellaneous

+Hibbing and International Falls high school hockey teams have been placed on three-year's probation by the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) as an aftermath of their brawl last winter that resulted in the suspension of the game after two periods. MSHSL directed the administrators of the two schools to issue verbal and written reprimands to the coaches for their failure to maintain control over their teams — Larry Ross of International Falls and George Perpich of Hibbing. The fight broke out as the two teams headed to the locker rooms after the second period of a 3-3 game. Hibbing coaches requested that the game be halted at that point and it was called by referee Bob Tok.

+If Crookston petitions the Minnesota State High School League to be dropped from Class AA into Class A as reported here recently, Jim Carrington of the Bemidji Pioneer says Brainerd would likely be switched from the South Half to the North Half in Region 8AA, with Albany expected to be moved from Region 8A to Region 8AA status — in the South Half. Crookston is currently the smallest Region 8AA school with an enrollment of 532 students in its top three grades.

Swim Team Is Beaten 102-70 By Lumberjills

Youthful Lincoln high school swimming team, featuring just one senior in the line-up, dropped its third straight dual meet decision Tuesday, this one a 102-70 defeat at the hands of Bemidji in the Franklin middle school pool.

Bemidji, coached by former Lincoln high school and Bemidji State University swimming standout Mark Storhaug, won eight of the 11 events, including a double triumph by Peggy Schmidt, who won the 200-yard freestyle in 2:11.65 and took the 100-yard backstroke in 1:06.4.

Thief River Falls winners were junior Sarah Green, 2:36.77 in the 200-yard individual medley; junior Shari McGann, 28.3 in the 50-yard freestyle; and freshman Shelley McGann, 1:12.19 in the 100-yard butterfly.

Despite the setback, Thief River Falls coach John Hustad was more than happy with the Prowlers' performance.

"They are young kids with no experience for the most part," pointed out Hustad. "But they are enthusiastic. I was very satisfied. I've been really pleased with what the kids are doing."

And the few experienced swimmers on the team are carrying their load, too, added Hustad. "The few older kids we have came through like troopers," he said. "They provided great leadership for our younger swimmers."

The Prowlers, who lost a 99-73 dual meet decision to Grand Rapids Saturday in the Franklin pool, will travel to Fargo North Saturday for a 12 noon start against both Fargo North and Fargo South.

A SPIKE BY Thief River Falls' Karmon Espe (4) went through the block attempt by East Grand Forks' Denise Swanberg for a first-game point in Tuesday's volleyball match played in the Lincoln high school gym. The Prowlers improved their record to 3-1 with an 18-11, 18-12 sweep over the Green Wave.

Lincoln Volleyball Team Beats EGF 18-11, 18-12

A new wrinkle was added to the Lincoln high school volleyball team attack Tuesday, and while it produced an 18-11, 18-12 victory over East Grand Forks, it still has to be ironed out, according to Thief River Falls coach Sharon Stauss.

With three hitters playing in front, the Prowlers new line-up, a little more sophisticated than their old set, was designed to give them more attacking power at the net, plus provide another front-row blocker.

"We won, so I guess I should be satisfied with the way it worked out," said Stauss afterwards, "but I would have liked to have seen more offense."

However, she was happy with the performances turned in by senior Joleen Gibson and junior Collette Thune. They made their first starts and both played well, she said. While their new attack gives them power and defense at the new, it also makes the Prowlers vunerable in the back row where their blockers are reduced. But that's where Gibson and Thune came into play. "We need people in the back row who can receive those hard spikes," pointed out Stauss, "and they (Gibson, Thune) did. They played really well."

Junior Lynette Huot served Thief River Falls to an 11-2 first game lead and the Prowlers never trailed. East Grand Forks did get within 14-11, but the rotation brought Huot back to the serving line and she finished off the 18-11 first game victory.

Starting with an ace spike by Gibson, Huot served the Prowlers to a 4-0 second game start. The Green Wave tied it 4-4, but senior co-captain LeAnn Paetznick of the Prowlers broke East Grand Forks service with a ace spike and Thief River Falls then took command.

It became 13-5 before East Grand Forks got going again. They managed to narrow it to 15-12, but Paetznick put a tap side the line to break service, then served out the 18-12 win.

Thief River Falls, 3-1 for the year, visits Moorhead Thursday.

East Grand Forks was a winner in Tuesday's earlier matches. In the freshman C squad match to start things, East Grand Forks rallied for a narrow 16-18, 19-17, 18-15 win. Same held true in the junior varsity match, with East Grand Forks coming from behind for a 7-18, 18-13, 18-8 decision. The losses dropped both Thief River Falls teams to 1-3 for the year.

TWO NEW STARTERS in the Lincoln high school volleyball line-up Tuesday against East Grand Forks were Joleen Gibson and Collette Thune, and both played a big role in the Prowlers' 18-11, 18-12 victory over the Green Wave. Thune watched as Gibson came up with a bump in this first game action.

Prowlers' Tennis Win Streak Ends

Unbeaten status of the Lincoln high school tennis team came to an abrupt end Tuesday when North Half Regin 8AA favorite Detroit Lakes blanked the Prowlers 5-0 on the Northland community college and Lincoln courts.

Everything went in straight sets for the Lakers, who snapped the Prowlers' seven-match winning streak.

"Detroit Lakes, as we knew, has an excellent tennis team," explained Thief River Falls coach Whitey Olson. "They played very well, and we played scared."

The Prowlers, who won by a 5-0 margin at East Grand Forks Monday, visit Moorhead Thursday and travel to Mahnomen Monday for 3:30 p.m. matches. The 1981 Northwest Athletic Conference tennis meet will be held Tuesday beginning at 9 a.m. at East Grand Forks.

Prowlers Play Staples Friday

Buoyed by a strong performance in a 13-6 loss to Class AA power Grand Rapids last week, the Lincoln high school football team will try to carry over some of that success Friday when the Prowlers, still looking for their first win after three season-opening losses, visit Staples for a 7:30 p.m. game.

Although the Cardinals fall between Grand Rapids and Moorhead on the Thief River Falls schedule, they should not be overlooked. They're expected to be strong contenders in the mid-State Conference this fall, despite an up-and-down non-conference start that has seen them lose to St. Cloud Cathedral 6-2, hammer Perham 39-7 and then drop a surprising 20-14 game to Frazee-Vergas last week.

Staples lost four all-conference players off the 1980 team that finished 5-4, including a 29-7 loss to Thief River Falls. However, the Cardinals' program featured an unbeaten 1980 freshman team that averaged about 40 points per game, with Troy Marden and Ken Rach stepping right into the varsity starting line-up this year as sophomores.

Marden, a 160-pound runningback, rushed for 147 yards against Perham, scoring twice. A tackle, Rach at 6-2, 190 pounds is the biggest player in Staples' offensive line. Those two are also the fastest players on the team, each clocked at 4.7 for the 40.

Fullback Joe Finn, a 205-pounder with good speed, rushed for 109 yards against Perham as the Staples' wishbone attack netted 316 yards. Quarterback Randy Card ran for one touchdown and passed for another against the Yellowjackets.

Thief River Falls coach John Schmitz doesn't think the Prowlers will be looking past Staples. "You don't have to be very smart to realize you can't overlook somebody when you're 0-3," he said. "We know they'll have a good football team."

There are no major changes planned in the Prowlers' line-up, according to Schmitz, although senior Tom Ose might start at a halfback after an outstanding second half against Grand Rapids when he carried the ball 16 times for 82 yards. It was his first appearance of the year, and it started with just one carry for four yards in the first half.

Another senior runningback — Dan Odegaard — has joined the team this week after sitting out the first three games because of a Minnesota State High School League rules violation.

Injuries have slowed linemen Jon Ness and Eric Bondy, who missed the Grand Rapids game, and their availability for Friday isn't certain at this point.

Homecoming Is Slated Friday At Goodridge

It'll be homecoming this week at Goodridge high school, with the Huskies taking on unbeaten North Tri County Conference leader Middle River Friday in the feature 7:30 p.m. football game.

Elsewhere, Plummer hosts McIntosh-Winger, Oklee entertains Gonvick-Trail, Grygla-Gatzke is at home against Clearbrook and Mentor visits Erskine.

Last week Middle River got by Gonvick-Trail 14-6, McIntosh-Winger defeated Goodridge 48-22, Plummer edged Mentor 14-12, Erskine shut out Grygla-Gatzke 28-0 and Clearbrook outlasted Oklee 58-30.

Meanwhile in Top of the State Conference nine-man play, unbeaten co-leaders Stephen and Argyle clash Friday at Argyle, Marshall County Central visits Hallock and Greenbush is at Tri-County.

Argyle handed Marshall County Central its first loss Saturday, 28-7. On Friday Hallock ripped Greenbush 47-0 and Stephen downed Tri-County 28-14.

Northmen Visit Mesabi In Third MJCAA Start

Backers of the Northland community college football team feel the Northmen are for real after watching them lose a close 19-7 season-opener to perennial MJCAA power Golden Valley Lutheran, then staging a come-from-behind 20-13 victory over a University of Minnesota-Crookston team that figured to be a Northern Division challenger this fall.

However, there are still skeptics. Those are the people who say the Northmen are lucky to stay with a Golden Valley Lutheran team that didn't take them seriously after a string of one-sided games in the series, and those same people figure Crookston's six turnovers — four fumbles and two interceptions — made it easy for Northland Saturday.

For Northmen, there's only one way to silence those critics — continue to either beat, or at least play on even terms with the rest of the nine teams in the Northern Division. They've never been a real factor in the race before. Now they are.

Northland will be on the road Saturday when the Northmen play Mesabi at 1:30 p.m. in Virginia. Those Iron Range trips for Minnesota junior college athletic association rivals are always eye-openers, and the Northmen have 22 freshmen on their 35-man roster who are going to experience the sometimes unique football played there.

Elsewhere Saturday, Golden Valley Lutheran is at Brainerd, Hibbing at Fergus Falls and Vermilion at Itasca. University of Minnesota-Crookston hosts the Mayville State junior varsity Thursday afternoon.

Mesabi is winless in two starts, dropping a 35-0 season-opening decision to Northern Division favorite Fergus Falls and last week losing a 20-6 game to Itasca when the Vikings' offensive line controlled the Norsemen. Itasca rushed for nearly 300 yards, with John Stifer carrying 29 times for 165 yards and Dick Doyle netting 109 yards on just seven carries.

Rest of last week's Northern Division scores found Fergus Falls beating Vermilion 21-0, Brainerd knocked off Hibbing 17-7 and Golden Valley Lutheran edged the Gustavus Adolphus junior varsity 23-30.

"I think we are," said Northland coach John Helley when asked if his team was, indeed, for real. "But we're not cocky. We know we have a lot of places where we can improve."

Helley expects Northland Mesabi to match up well. "I feel we're equal or better than they are," he said. But he tempered his confidence with caution when he referred to veteran Mesabi coach Pepper Lysaker. "You always have to respect Pepper. He's one of the best coaches in the league. I'm sure he'll have his team ready for us."

Northland has been hit by the injury bug this week, with sophomore fullback John Dillon (TRF) hobbled by a knee injury; freshman offensive guard Ken Demarais (Fisher) nursing sore ribs; sophomore nose guard Mark Stock (Mahnomen) slowed by a shoulder injury; and freshman offensive tackle Greg Harder is incurring a problem with his elbow. They're all listed as questionable.

Jacks Edge Prowlers For Cross Country Title

Anticipated highly competitive cross country battle between Thief River Falls and Bemidji was a good one Tuesday, with the Lumberjacks posting a narrow three-point victory over the Prowlers for championship honors in the boy's portion of the Bagley invitational.

Bemidji won it with 38 points, followed by Thief River Falls with 41, East Grand Forks 68, Park Rapids 104, Crookston 162, Walker 172 and Roseau 175, with host Bagley fielding an incomplete team.

Ted Sundin of East Grand Forks won the three-mile race in 15:32, followed by Mark Lingle of Park Rapids with a 15:39 and Jon Cameron of Bemidji with a 15:49. Next three places went to the Prowlers, with senior Bruce Johnson running at 15:59, junior Lon Aune 16:10 and junior Steve Kruta 16:27. Bemidji teammates Steve Lumbar, Paul Lyle and Bob Soular finished 7-9-8 behind the Prowlers' trio.

Both Thief River Falls and Bemidji said in preseason talks they had their sights set on the Northwest Athletic Conference meet title and a finish among the top two teams in the Region 8AA meet.

"Even though Bemidji did beat us, we are close," noted Thief River Falls coach Lynn Dyer. "Our boys are definitely going to give Bemidji all the competition they can handle. I'm happy to see that we proved our team can run with a top-notch school like Bemidji. Now we know our goals are within our reach."

Bagley edged Bemidji 51-52 to win the girl's varsity race yesterday, followed by Thief River Falls with 66 points and Park Rapids 82. Incomplete teams were fielded by Roseau, East Grand Forks, Crookston and Walker.

Dana Fahrlander of Bemidji won the two-mile race in 12:18, with Lily Dickinson of Bemidji running in 12:25. Thief River Falls seniors Sue Hanna and Kristy Forsberg finished 3-4 in 12:33 and 12:35, respectively.

"Our girls have their work cut out for them," acknowledged Dyer, who had hoped the Prowlers could challenge the Lumberjills for NWAC honors, "but they think we can catch Bemidji by conference time."

In the other races, Bemidji took the boy's junior varsity title with 27 points, followed by Thief River Falls 33, East Grand Forks 133 and Roseau 138; Bemidji won the boy's freshman race with a 34-36 victory over Thief River Falls; and Thief River Falls claimed the boy's seventh-eighth grade junior high event with 34 points, followed by Roseau 91 and Crookston 96.

"Overall, this was probably one of our best days as a team," reported Dyer. "Both the boys and girls varsity, junior varsity and junior high ran some very good races. Our times are showing we must be doing the right things in practice because they are beginning to fall. Our goal is to peak at conference Oct. 20."

Sophomores Rally, But Lose To EGF 22-20

Thief River Falls, after scoring with just 28 seconds remaining in the game to pull within 22-20, had its try for a tying two-point conversion run come up a foot short of the goal line Monday in a sophomore football game played at East Grand Forks.

It was the second loss of the year for the Lincoln high school sophomores, but both setbacks have been by less than a touchdown. They lost their 1981 season opener to Grand Forks Red River 24-19.

East Grand Forks led 8-6 at the end of the first quarter Monday, carried a 14-6 edge into halftime and made it 22-6 at the end of the third quarter before Thief River Falls rallied.

A 65-yard Mtich Semanko-to-Steve Wiskow pass play produced Thief River Falls' first quarter touchdown.

Fourth quarter scores came on a five-yard run by Doug Odegaard, followed by a Tim Bottem two-point conversion run, and a two-yard run by Scott Jorstad, with the conversion coming up short.

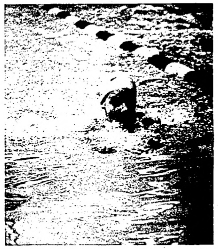
Thief River Falls sophomores will wait until Thursday, October 1, to host Grand Forks Central at 7 p.m. in their home opener. The Lincoln junior varsity, meanwhile, will entertain Crookston Monday at 7 p.m. The Lincoln JV is 0-1 for the year.

EGF Freshmen 20-12 Winners Over Lincoln

East Grand Forks defeated Thief River Falls 20-12 Monday in a freshman high school football game played at East Grand Forks.

Thief River Falls, trailing 6-0 at halftime and down 12-6 after three quarters, got two touchdowns from Ryan Drees on runs of 55 and 25 yards.

Lincoln high school freshmen, 1-2, host South junior high of Grand Forks Thursday at 4:15 p.m.



BREASTSTROKE LEG of Thief River Falls' 200-yard medley relay team was handled by junior Mary Ness during Tuesday's dual swimming meet against Bemidji. Karen Dillon (backstroke), Ness, Shelley McGann (butterfly) and Karla Lokken (freestyle) teammed up for a third place 2:11.62 in the meet-opening event. The Lumberjills started with a 1-2 finish in the event and went on to win the meet 102-70.

Hunting, Fishing Day Is Observed

Governor Albert H. Quie has proclaimed Saturday, September 26, as hunting and fishing day in Minnesota in recognition of the "contributions toward protecting and enhancing our natural resources" made by hunters and fishermen.

"These men and women were among the first environmentalists, having traditionally held strong opinions about clean air, good water and a livable habitat for wildlife, and have been in the forefront of efforts to use our resources wisely, so that future generations also might enjoy and benefit from them," said Quie.

Through their purchase of hunting and fishing licenses, sportsmen provided the state's fish and game department with $16,497,151 for conservation last year. And the 1,948,054 licensed hunters and fishermen in Minnesota entitled the state to more than $5,000,000 in federal funds for fish and wildlife restoration and hunter safety training programs. Those funds are derived from the excise taxes sportsmen pay on their sporting arms and ammunition, archery equipment and fishing tackle.

Hunting and fishing day in Minnesota is part of a nationwide observance of national hunting and fishing day. The president has designated September 26, 1981, as national hunting and fishing day in recognition of sportsmen's contributions to conservation.

With more than 14 million people participating in NHF Day events last year, NHF Day has become one of the most widely observed and effective means of promoting conservation.

DNR NEWS

Hunting is generally allowed on recreational trail corridors administered by the Department of Natural Resources. However, there are some exceptions, according to Donald M. Carlson, special assistant to the DNR commissioner and director of the trails and waterways unit.

For example, said Carlson, trails in state parks are generally closed to hunting because state parks are designated game refuges. Occasionally, state parks are open to deer hunting under special rules as listed in the big game regulations. When a park is listed as open, the park manager should be contacted for details.

"State Corridor Trails" are usually open to hunting, Carlson said, subject to any local ordinances. Where hunting is allowed, it is regulated under a DNR rule which provides:

"No firearm or bow and arrow shall be discharged within the trail at any time, except for the purpose of lawful hunting during the period from Sept. 15 to March 30 only. No rifle, shotgun with slug, or bow and arrow shall be discharged upon, over, or across the trail treadway (path) at any time." Where state corridor trails pass through other DNR management units the rules applicable to hunting in the Unit prevails.

Carlson said trails in state forests are open to hunting except within state game refuges and near public camping areas.

He also urged hunters to become familiar with the Minnesota trespass law, which is printed in the synopsis of the hunting regulations and available from license agents and DNR offices.

Where state corridor trails cross private lands, said Carlson, hunting on the trail is generally allowed, however, the permission of the adjacent landowner is required if the hunter leaves the trail to go on private agricultural land or where the land is posted.

He cautioned that complaints from adjacent landowners about trespassing by hunters using a state trail could lead to the trail being closed to hunting.

Therefore, he said, hunters should observe the rules of good sportsmanship and respect the rights of landowners and other trail users.

He also emphasized that local ordinances regarding firearm use apply to state trails. The trails are open to non-motorized use only except where snowmobiles are allowed.

Carlson said the above information is only a summary of the laws and regulations relating to the use of trails by hunters and that more specific questions should be referred to local conservation officers.

Poachers Are Caught Under DNR Program

A new program to combat illegal wildlife killing, activated by the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources September 1 has already resulted in some arrests, it was reported.

Called TIP (Turn In Poachers), the program is carried out by the DNR in cooperation with TIP Inc., a private non-profit corporation.

Cash rewards are paid to citizens who supply the DNR with the names of persons they know have committed gross and flagrant violations of state game and fish laws, where such information results in an arrest.

Those reporting the offenses may reamin anonymous, even to the DNR, through the use of a code number that is assigned to the informant.

Reward payments, varying from $100 to $1,000, are made in cash under a method that protects the informant's identity.

Officials said that an average of 10 to 20 calls a day are being received from persons who wish to report violations.

More than two-thirds of the callers say they are not interested in a reward but want to put a stop to the illegal activities of the people they are reporting.

DNR has established a toll free telephone number (1-800-652-9093) for those calling from outside the Twin Cities to report violations.

Fishing News

Lake of the Woods report — Donna Hamre of Baudette reports that fishing has been picking up.

Wind hamered the efforts of the fishermen this past week. In closer to shore they were having to work harder for their fish.

The rocks were still the best place to fish, with Arheson's reef producing the most fish. Greg Burgess of Montevideo picked up a 12-5 walleye on a leach and lindy rig.

Weather was good for northern activity, with Dale Brooks of East Grand Forks catching a 27-pound northern off 12-mile reef.

Cooler mornings and evenings should bring the fish back to the flats, but with calm weather, I foresee a few more big ones off the reefs.

Big ones weighed in last week: 6-14½ walleye, Carl Brassfield, Baudette; 16-8 northern, Mike Sitrit Kirksville, Mo.; 8-8 walleye, Ross Olson, Annadale; 7-5 walleye, Toby Olson, Willmar; 27-0 northern, Dale Brooks, East Grand Forks; 12-5 walleye, Greg Burgess, Montevideo; 14-13 northern, Laura Solian, Grand Forks.

Park Rapids

Often called "The Nation's Vacation Region," Park Rapids is a year-round fishing paradise. Fuller's Tackle Shop is the scene of happy fishermen from all 50 states and around the world. It truly is an exciting area. Consider the Itasca state park, Mantrap Valley and the Crow Wing Region.

Fall colors come ablaze bringing tourists to the area from hundreds of miles. Fall fishing and the opening of duck season is just around the corner, with many families planning a combination of fishing and duck season opening weekend in Park Rapids. We used to spend the first week of October here for the hunting and fishing combination with our "Operation October Fall Party" guests.

If you don't care for either hunting or fishing, you will love camera hikes to capture the spectacular forest colors, or visit the local museum and other historical sites nearby. It is also a wonderful shopping area for gifts, clothing.

Remembering 'Forgotten' Greats In Black Leagues

by Clarissa Myrick
Smithsonian News Service

Oscar Charleston was his name. He starred at about every position on the diamond and has been called the greatest baseball player of all time.

Then there was Buck Leonard. His first-base playing skills were considered the match of New York Yankees star Lou Gehrig's.

But even among avid baseball buffs these names may draw a blank. They played in the Negro baseball leagues in the years before that historic day in 1947 when Jackie Robinson joined the Brooklyn Dodgers and broke the half-century-old color barrier in the majors.

Charleston and Leonard did not play in obscurity by any means. Though the Negro leagues were around before the color bar went up, the teams reached their stride in the 1920s and '30s when thousands of black fans, and even some white baseball enthusiasts, packed stadiums, ballparks and sandlots all over the country to see the stars of such teams as the Kansas City Monarchs, the Pittsburgh Crawfords and the Newark Eagles.

These fans got the chance to see baseball at its finest. "Blacks were playing probably the most exciting, and very possibly the best — baseball seen in America before 1947," critic John Holway writes in his book, "Voices From the Great Black Baseball Leagues."

Carl Scheele, curator of a recent exhibitin on black baseball at the Smithsonian's Museum of American History, agrees. "The talent of the black baseball league stars was amazing."

Talent wasn't the only thing these players had going for them. They had charisma and a bit of panache. The flamboyant pitching style and personality of Leroy "Satchel" Paige, for instance, made him a national celebrity even before he broke into the major leagues in 1948 as a 42-year-old "rookie" for the Cleveland Indians.

Another dazzling pitcher, "Smoky" Joe Williams, was throwing treacherous fast balls before Paige became a star on the mound. And there was shortstop John Henry Lloyd whose mild manner off and hard-driving ballplaying on the field earned him the title "the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of baseball."

Although most of these players were never declared national sports champions, they did become heroes in the nation's black communities. "When I was a kid, I felt a great sense of pride whenever I watched black leaguers play," recalls James Piper, a designer for the Museum of American History and himself a former semi-pro black baseball player.

Ironically, soon after Robinson cracked the color bar in major league baseball, the black leagues began to fade away.

"Once integration began, the major leagues recruited the better young players of the black leagues," cultural historian Donn Rogosin, who organized the black baseball exhibition, explains. "Then the fans stopped going to see the black league teams play; they opted for integrated rather than segregated baseball."

It's not easy to track down the great moments of the Negro leagues and their stars. Most of the teams never documented their players' records. The large metropolitan newspapers seldom covered their games and hardly ever featured stories about the players. So, when the leagues died, the little bit of fame the black league stars had known died, too.

Today's sports historians must glean most of their information about the leagues from the files of black newspapers of the period and from the memories and memorabilia of such players as former first baseman Walter "Buck" Leonard.

Leonard, now 73 and a real estate broker living in Rockie Mount, N.C., was once half of a dynamite duo. The other half was Josh Gibson, the ball player credited with hitting the longest home run ever struck in Yankee stadium. Like Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth of the major leagues, Leonard and Gibson batted third and fourth in the line-up. Between 1937 and 1945, the duo led the Homestead Grays to nine straight Negro league pennant wins.

Life in the undefinanced black leagues was exciting, but rough even for the stars, Leonard says. During the season — mid-April to the end of September — most of the teams tried to play every day to keep financially afloat. "One year we played 210 ball games and traveled 30,000 miles by bus and train," Leonard recalls.

If a team found a little extra time in its schedule, it set up games with small-town white and black semi-pro teams to get a little extra money. "Sometimes we played three games in one day," Leonard says. "We'd play a doubleheader against a black team at Yankee stadium on a Sunday afternoon; then, on Sunday night, we'd go out on Long Island and play a semi-pro, white team."

Economic necessity also proved to be the mother of invention in black baseball. In the early 1930s, the Kansas City Monarchs were pioneers in the use of the portable lighting system that made night baseball — a good source of revenue — possible.

Near the end of the season, the best players in the leagues went to Chicago to play in the East-West Classic, an annual all-star game. "My greatest thrill on the field was playing in that game," Leonard says.

After the Classic and the end of the grueling season, most of the players continued their hectic pace in off-season, cross-country barnstorming tours and winter games in Florida, California and Latin America.

The players looked forward to these off-season games, especially those in Latin America, for several reasons. "We made three times more money in the Latin American countries than we did playing in the Negro leagues," says Monte Irvin, a veteran of the black leagues who went on to stardom in the majors.

The players could also improve their skills and learn to play under extreme pressure. "If you didn't play well in the Latin American countries," Irvin remembers, "they sent you back to the United States."

But perhaps the main reason for the popularity of the off-season games was the opportunity afforded the black players to compare their skills with those of white major league players. In Mexico, Cuba, Venezuela and other Latin nations, black leaguers played with and against white major leaguers on fully integrated teams.

In the United States, black all-star teams organized by such players as Satchel Paige barnstormed with white all-star teams put together by such men as Dizzy Dean. These games demonstrated that the skills of black players equalled and often surpassed those of white major league players. Boxscores uncovered by author Holway show that out of the 445 games black leaguers played against white major leaguers between 1886 and 1948, the black teamss won 260, lost 172 and tied 4.

Within the last 10 years, the baseball world has begun to praise the achievements of the greats of the black leagues. In 1971, Satchel Paige was the first of these players to be elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame. Josh Gibson and Buck Leonard were elected in 1972. And this year, Rube Foster, the organizer of the first successful black league, was added to the Hall of Fame.

"I never thought I would be honored like this," Buck Leonard said a few days before attending a White House luncheon for champions elected to the Hall of Fame. "It makes all those years of low pay and long travel in the Negro leagues worthwhile."

Second National High School Activities Week Is Oct. 19-25

Though most people know of the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL), not many understand exactly what it does and how it does it.

Maddening pace of March encompasses all of the more than 500 high schools that are members of the league in some fashion, even though the annual state basketball and hockey series perhaps reflects a frenzied rush for recognition more than any other MSHSL activity.

But there are many more activities. Twenty-eight diverse programs to be exact. The league sanctions 24 interscholastic sports activities, as well as music, speech, debate and drama competition. It supervises activities for more than 200,000 students.

And to recognize these activities, a week has been set aside to spotlight the school-sponsored activities in which the students of our state and nation are actively involved. Second annual national school activities week will be celebrated from Monday, October 19, through Sunday, October 25, reports Larry Larson, director of information and publications of the Minnesota State High School League.

It is a week in which member schools of the MSHSL will be taking extra time to recognize student participation in activity programs and well as promoting community support and recognition of the athletic and fine arts activity programs of the school.

It is not a national athletics week. It is a national activities week. Did you ever wonder what it takes to be state champion in one of the 11 individual events in the annual speech competition? Or to be part of the state championship team in debate? Did anyone other than the debater(s) or judge(s) ever see the champion crowned? What schools received starred performances in choir, band, or jazz ensembles?

While interscholastic activities have been described as the other half of education, it is essential to remember that music speech and other non-athletic endeavors are integral parts of the interscholastic program. Athletics and non-athletics, together, are the other half of education. Non-athletic activities are just as important in the total scope of the activities program as athletics. And, they may be even more difficult to prepare for and compete in.

National federation of state high school associations office and the Minnesota State High School League Office are involved in a number of promotions for the activities week.

Former President Gerald R. Ford is the honorary chairman of activities week. Underway is a joint resolution to be passed in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives followed by a presidential signing proclaiming activities week. The NCAA, National Football League and the National Basketball Association have agreed to air public service announcements on their various network fall television and radio programs and various national and special interest magazines and publications already have or will be carrying articles on activities week.

Here in Minnesota, the MSHSL office has sought a governor's proclamation for activities week. Public service announcements will be distributed to all radio stations in our state and TV stations throughout the state will be urged to program the MSHSL "Year In Review" film and the fine arts special during activities week. In addition, the print media will be given advance information urging their active support and cooperation.

To assist the schools' efforts to promote national activities week, the MSHSL has mailed an information packet to schools regarding that special third week in October. Board of directors of the league strongly urges all member schools to plan programs within schools which will stimulate student's interest in all activity programs and to develop a program that will emphasize what a sound investment communities make by supporting school activities at the ballot box and ticket booth.

The need for public awareness and support of high school activities programs is acute and each year illustrations of the lack of support or awareness of the values and needs of high school programs appear.

Usually, where there is a strain on the public educational dollar, high school activity programs are the first to be reduced or eliminated. Receiving national notice is the lack of funding for activity programs in cities such as Boston, New York and Los Angeles, and the reduction of tax dollars through public mandate in Massachusetts and California.

These examples of national note are only the tip of the iceberg in that in all sections of the United States demands for the educational dollar are becoming greater and the resultant strain on activity program funding increases.

For instance, some school districts have eliminated the funding for athletic and activity programs altogether; in some locations students are required to pay a fee in order to participate; and there are examples of cutbacks in varying degrees in all 50 states and in all sizes of communities and schools. In many areas student and parental concern for participation in high school activities as well as the values which the students and parents receive therefrom is lacking.

As to the values of activity programs, there are several very vivid, documented examples:

+National surveys reveal that students participating in high school activities are more likely to have higher academic averages and far better attendance records.

+Of the students who drop out of high schools, 94 per cent have not been involved in any school activities such as music, speech, athletics, student government, etc.

+Best predictor (according to ACT and SAT studies) of success in later life is previous participation in high school activity programs — not high school or college grade point average, test score or rank-in-class.

+Generally, participation in activity programs teaches values that make children happier and better citizens, builds strong minds and bodies, emphasizes that competition is not evil (but American way of life), and that race, color, sex and economic status are not obstacles for participation, and finally, instills poise and confidence.

+Nationally, over one-half of the high school student population participates in high school activity programs for approximately two per cent of the total school budget, obviously the best value in public education today.

Truly, high school activities are, in fact, "the other half of education". With such values for such a minimum investment, it is important that the public become aware that this "other half of education" is needed and therefore public, parental and student support a necessity. Thus, the reason for national high school activities week.

U.S. Jobless Rate Rises To 7.2 Per Cent

Employment situation was little changed in August, the bureau of labor statistics of the U.S. department of labor reported. Overall unemployment rate was 7.2 per cent, compared with seven per cent in July. During most of the January-June period, the jobless rate had been 7.3 per cent.

Following substantial increases in July, employment, as measured both by the monthly surveys of households and establishments, held about steady in August. Since July 1980's recession trough, both employment series have risen by about two million.

Unemployment rate in August, 7.2 per cent, and the number of unemployed persons, 7.7 million, were up slightly from July. Patterns differed, however, among certain worker groups. For example, the rate for young men 20 to 24 years, which has exhibited considerable volatility since April, rose sharply in August and, at 12.7 per cent, returned to the June level. In contrast, unemployment among 20-24 year-old women has shown little movement in recent months, and, at 10.8 per cent, the rate was unchanged from July.

Among workers 25 years and over, the jobless rate for men (4.8 per cent) also was little different over the month, while that for women (5.5 per cent) inched down. Among teenagers, the rate for blacks (45.7 per cent) increased substantially, whereas unemployment of white teenagers (15.6 per cent) was not much different from July. This large rise in black teenage unemployment contributed to a marked increase in the overall jobless rate for black and other workers to 15 per cent.

Number of unemployed persons who lost their last job rose in August; all of the increase was among those whose employment had been permanently terminated. The number of persons on layoff was unchanged over the month but was almost half a million below the level in August 1980.

Number of persons unemployed one to three months increased in August, as did those jobless six months or more. The average (mean) duration of unemployment went up to 14.5 weeks, about the level that had prevailed at the beginning of the year.

Program Offers Scholarships For Seniors

Seniors at Lincoln high school have an opportunity to enter the 1981-82 Century III Leaders program, which awards local, state and national prizes to students who demonstrate the leadership abilities and social awareness necessary to help meet America's needs as we enter our third century.

One particularly outstanding senior will eventually collect the $11,500 scholarship which goes to the Century III national winner. That person is selected at the Century III Leaders Conference, scheduled for March 5-8, 1982, at Colonial Williamsburg, VA.

Two winners from each state and the District of Columbia — chosen from among a pool of winners from each participating high school — receive $1,500 scholarships and all-expense-paid trips to the Williamsburg Conference. Two state alternates each receive $500 awards.

Students are judged at the local school level on leadership abilities, school and community involvement, a short essay written on a particular issue facing America, and a current events examination.

In all, the Century III Leaders program awards $218,500 in scholarships and provides for 102 students to attend the Williamsburg conference. The program is administered by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

Deadline for students to apply is October 16. Students interested in participating in the program should contact Whitey Olson in the guidance office at Lincoln high school.

Meeting For Cosmetologists Here Oct. 5

Newly-organized cosmetology unit of the Minnesota office of consumer services (OCS) is conducting a series of informational meetings for cosmetologists throughout Minnesota in September and October.

Persons in the area interested in attepding the meetings may attend the October 5 session at 8 p.m. at Northland community college, room A-16.

Purpose of the meetings, according to Kris Sanda, director of the OCS, will be to explain changes in the state's licensing and regulation of the cosmetology industry.

"We in consumer services would like to meet with cosmetologists to talk about the new law that went into effect July 1," she said.

At that time, the Minnesota Legislature abolished the state board of cosmetology and transferred its licensing and regulatory functions to the office of consumer services.

Cosmetologists with questions about the new law, the dissolution of the board of cosmetology, the OCS, or the changes to take place in the cosmetology industry are invited to bring their concerns to any of the meetings.

Jaycee Women Plan Social Meeting Mon.

An informal social gathering has been planned for Monday at 8 p.m. at the Elks club in Thief River Falls by the Thief River Falls Jaycee Women.

Weather Helps Crops Harvest

Even though temperatures were generally cooler than normal, last week's weather was mostly sunny and dry providing for favorable development of crops, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. Temperatures during the middle of the week dropped below 40 and light frosts occurred in many parts of the state, but virtually no crop damage was reported.

Most crops are now very near maturity and there is little concern over a heavy frost. Another good week would set the crops up for an excellent harvest. Moisture has continued to become shorter with dry weather over most of the state during September. Topsoil moisture is now rated four per cent very short, 18 per cent short, 73 per cent adequate, and five per cent surplus.

Harvest has begun on the earlier planted field corn, soybeans and sunflowers. One more week of frost-free weather would bring the moisture of corn to a nearly ideal level for harvest. Field corn is virtually all dented with 36 per cent mature which compares to the five-year average of 62 per cent and last year's 71 per cent. Cutting of corn for silage stands at 28 per cent compared to 32 per cent last year and the five-year average of 46 per cent. The condition of field corn is one per cent poor, 20 per cent fair, 63 per cent good, and 16 per cent excellent.

Nearly all of the soybeans have now turned yellow. An estimated 55 per cent is shedding leaves with 14 per cent of the crop mature. This compares to the five-year average of 77 per cent and 37 per cent and last year's 80 per cent and 20 per cent, respectively. Some of the replanted beans are as much as two weeks away from maturity. The crop is rated four per cent poor, 25 per cent fair, 65 per cent good, and six per cent excellent.

Sunflower bracts are now 92 per cent turned yellow with 47 per cent turning brown. This compares to last year's 98 per cent yellow and 85 per cent brown. Sunflowers are rated three per cent poor, 24 per cent fair, 69 per cent good, and four per cent excellent.

Harvest progress now stands at 57 per cent for flax, 48 per cent for potatoes, and 90 per cent for sweet corn for processing. Both sweet corn and flax are slightly behind normal while potatoes are well ahead. Seeding of winter wheat and rye are ahead of average but equal to last year at 74 per cent and 71 per cent, respectively.

Plowing of small grain and hay stubble totals 68 per cent, ahead of the five-year average of 57 per cent and last year's 61 per cent. some rain is needed for wheat and rye seedings and to soften the ground for plowing.

GUNS GALORE were on display prior to the annual banquet of the Northwest chapter of Ducks Unlimited Tuesday evening in Thief River Falls' Best Western Inn. Approximately 350 people attended the sixth annual banquet, the largest attendance in the chapter's history.

City Council Hears Food Sale Complaint

asked Bob Bredeson and Glenn Peterson if they were in agreement with the recommendatin "as is", which suggests disbanding the committee, rescinding council's action of December 23, adopting the assessment roll and placing the matter in council's hands.

They agreed, but expressed displeasure at not being informed of the meeting until reading about it in the paper. Carlson noted that he had taken the "legal steps of advertising the meeting" and said there was no intent to keep it a secret.

In discussion on the matter, Mayor Carlson said he hoped that council could decide on a parking assessment district that would be "acceptable by the majority" and commented, "I hope both sides will feel they are treated fairly." Council voted to accept the committee's three-party recommendation, but selection of a parking district will be left for future decision.

Representatives of the nursery school using the old library expressed concern regarding "recent comments from council" regarding the bulding and its use. Their three-year lease is due November 1, and Jean Schaefer questioned whether they should be looking for new quarters. Mayor Carlson stated "I hope the talk hasn't alarmed you too much," and stated concern was primarily for the use of the upstairs. The matter was referred to the building committee to bring a recommendation to the second meeting in October.

Parks and recreation director Mike Mongoven brought two items before the council. The first, a $7,200 renovation of the Eighth street boat dock, was approved. State funds are available to pay for the improvements.

The second, a suggestion to hire Curt Howe as a replacement for Larry Tveitbakk at the sports arena drew a lot of discussion. Howe has been working for the city under the CETA program since May. Mayor Carlson, who has been working with the finance committee on budget cuts, expressed a need to "consolidate rather than expand" in filling positions. He questioned whether other people already on the payroll couldn't be trained to operate the equipment at the sports arena.

A motion by Penning to go ahead with the hiring was defeated after considerable discussion, but the matter will be reconsidered at a future meeting after the budget has been looked at more closely.

Police Chief Ken Froschheiser commented that recent public meetings about the traffic flow plan had drawn comments "overwhelmingly in favor of the plan," noting that a couple of areas drew objections. "We're looking closely at those now," he said.

He also requested that language of the ordinance regarding "use of tobacco and related devices by minors" be modified to include "possession." He said that enforcing the ordinance by the high school was made difficult by the language. Giving an example, he said, "if a bunch of kids was standing around smoking and threw down the evidence when approached, I can't prove who did and who didn't."

Penning expressed concern about the intent of the law to deal with controlled substances rather than cigarettes, saying he wasn't that concerned about tobacco, "but I want marijuana cigarettes stamped out."

Froschheiser commented, "I can't discriminate that one drug is worse than another . . . all drugs are bad." He said that making possession of tobacco and related devices by minors illegal would give him something he could work with. "It might give me reasonable cause for search and seizure," he said. He was asked to work with the city attorney in drafting a proposal to be brought before council at their next meeting.

In other business, the council:

—Accepted the bid of Molstad Excavating, Grand Forks, ND, of $8,459 to do the sanitary sewer project along Fifth street between Main and LaBree avenues.

—Set 7 p.m. October 13 for the proposed use hearing for federal revenue sharing funds (about $73,400 involved).

—Approved recommended budget amendments as follows: Increase miscellaneous state aid revenue budget by $13,373; increase YCCIP project expense budget by $10,000; decrease the general fund insurance budget by $30,000 to compensate for decreased actual insurance cost; and increase the government buildings maintenance budget by $31,729 to cover the contract on re-roofing of the library and city auditorium.

—Were informed of upcoming meetings with Mike Auger, Minnesota state planning agency, October 19, on financing for redevelopment; October 20 with MnDOT on state highway 59 S.E.; and October 28 for a conference on land use planning and law, and economic development.

Next meeting is September 29 and involves a hearing on the Dewey avenue water main project.

THREE NATIONAL awards were presented to Mrs. Robert Reeve at the Ninth district Past Presidents Parley, held September 13 at the home of Mrs. James Cuppett. Awards were: National Education award for education chairman for the department of Minnesota in recognition for submitting the most outstanding education report in Northwest division for 1980-81; the National Education award for best department committee activities from PACT (Post and Auxiliary Community Together); and the Service to American Award, which consisted of a hand made music box playing "God Bless America," from the National President Dora Seymour. Presenting the awards was Mrs. Eugene Radeke of Red Lake Falls, who was Department president in 1979, the same year Mrs. Reeve was Ninth District President. In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear dad and mom, Hjalmer and Alma Lee, who passed away one year ago Sept. 10, 1980 and Oct. 13, 1980:

Gone are the faces we loved so dear,
Slight is the voice we loved to hear.
Too far away to sight or speak,
But not too far for thought to reach.
Nice to remember them who once was here,
And who though absent are just as dear.

Sadly missed by their daughters and sons, Jasper, Avery and Vernon Lee, Avis Nelson, and Betty Berg. 1t74p

Survey Claims Fish Agencies In Money Bind

Pressure on the nation's fisheries resource is rising steadily, but state wildlife agencies lack the funds to maintain fishing success at an acceptable level, according to a national committee formed to promote legislation aimed at increasing federal financial support for state fisheries projects.

The committee — called "The National Committee For Expansion of the Dingell-Johnson Fund" — wants support for legislation that would levy a 3 per cent federal manufacturers tax on recreational boats, motors and boat trailers. The committee also wants to extend the current federal excise tax on fishing equipment to lines, hooks and other accessories.

Excise taxes from fishing equipment is collected under the Dingell-Johnson Act and used by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to assist states in financing fisheries projects.

D-J funds currently amount to $28 million and provide a little over 10 per cent of total fisheries expenditures in the various states.

Additional federal financial help is urgently needed, says the committee, since "the average state fisheries budget needs to be increased by about 43 per cent to manage the resource up to public expectation."

The sun puts out more energy in just one second than humanity has used in its whole history, reports International Wildlife magazine. Because its energy is radiated in all directions, only one-half trillion of the sun's output ever reaches the earth.

Birds Threatened By Habitat Loss

Of the more than 9,000 bird species in the world, 274 "cling to life by a tenuous thread," and 37 have populations below 300, according to a report in the current issue of International Wildlife magazine on the world's 37 most endangered birds.

On small islands and on large continents, many species of birds are endangered because of destruction of their habitats by humans, says ornithologist Warren B. King, chairman of the U.S. section of the international council for bird preservation, in the National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly publication.

"In the past 15 years, massive forest clearing for farmland, grazing, forest products and expanding human populations has produced a marked increase in the mumber of endangered birds in continental tropical forests," King reports, and some of the 37 most threatened birds are on the endangered list simply because they are restricted to life on tiny islands.

As examples of birds imperiled by the destruction of forest habitats, King cites the Mauritius parakeet and the imperail woodpecker. On Mauritius, in the Indian Ocean, the forests that the Mauritius parakeet needs for food, cover and nesting have been replaced largely by sugar cane fields. Only five of the birds remain on the island where, coincidentally, the dodo bird became extinct. The cutting of large nesting trees, plus some shooting for food, has reduced the population of imperial woodpeckers to no more than 20 birds in northwestern Mexico.

As examples of birds imperiled by their limited ranges, King cites the Aldabra brush warbler and the Hawaiian crow. No more than 25 brush warblers survive on the 110 acrea of the Aldabra Atoll, also in the Indian Ocean. The Hawaiian crow population has declined to fewer than 100 because some of its food supply has been reduced by the introduction of pigs into Hawaii's forests. The introduction of non-native plants and animals usually poses a threat to indigenous species, and the threat is greater when that species is restricted to an island habitat.

Is there any hope for saving these birds? In the past, the remedy for helping a declining wildlife species was to leave it strictly alone. Today, it's recognized that when a bird's natural support systems have already failed, direct intervention is the only recourse. By using imaginative techniques to help birds compensate for changes in their environment, scientists have accounted for some dramatic success stories.

Puerto Rican parrot, for example, has apparently been saved with a management strategy that has begun to build its population up from a low of 15. Newly built nest cavities discourage attack from an aggressive thrasher, noxious fly larvae are under control and captive-reared birds are returned to the wild. In another case, the reproductive output of the Spanish imperial eagle, population 150, was increased by 43 per cent when third-and fourth-born eaglets, which hardly ever survive, were placed in nests with with one or no young.

Unfortunately, such efforts are labor intensive and costly, and cannot be looked upon as ultimate solutions. As King's report in International Wildlife concludes, "If there is no hope for restoring a healthy habitat in which a species can survive on its own, such efforts, while noble, will inevitably prove futile."

The following is International Wildlife's list of the world's 37 most endangered birds:

1. Marianas mallard. Population: 2. Gone from Guam and possibly Tinian and Saipan in the western Pacific. The last two were sent to Hawaii in 1978 for captive breeding.

2. Kauai O'o. Population: 2. Limited to a swamp in Kauai, Hawaii. Introduced rats, plants, diseases, pigs and birds contributed to its decline. Little hope remains for its survival.

3. Chatham Island black robin. Population: 5. Reestablished on Mangere Island off New Zealand after burrowing seabirds in its former stronghold damaged its scrub-forest habitat.

4. Mauritius parakeet. Population: 5. Introduced monkeys on the Indian Ocean island of Mauritius steal its eggs. Vastly diminished forests and exotic vegetation are also serious problems.

5. Japanese crested ibis. Population: 13. In June 1981, seven birds, including a breeding pair, were found in China, where they had been thought extinct. On Sado Island in Japan, six aging ibis are being bred in captivity.

6. Mauritius kestrel. Population: 15. Forest cutting, shooting and egg predation by introduced monkeys on Mauritius have hurt this small falcon, but the species is back from a low of six in 1974.

7. Ivory-billed woodpecker. Population: less than 20, with probably fewer than 10 in Cuba and fewer than 10, if any, in Florida, Texas and Louisiana. Forest cutting is to blame, but shooting also contributed.

8. Imperial woodpecker. Population: no more than 20, but last confirmed sighting was in 1958. Lives in Mexico's mature pine woodlands, which have been cut and burned. For years the species was persistently shot for the stew pot.

9. Madagascar sea eagle. Population: about 20. Shooting is a highly popular, largely uncontrolled pastime in the Malagasy Republic. It has reduced this species to ten pairs at most from several hundred birds just a few decades ago.

10. Aldabra brush warbler. Population: fewer than 25. Clings to life on Aldabra Atoll in the Indian Ocean. Never known to be more widespread than at present, but is at risk from cyclones and other random catastrophic events.

11. California condor. Population: no more than 25. Extinction likely within 12 years without strong intervention. Major causes of decline unclear, but include habitat loss, shooting and pesticides.

12. Puerto Rican parrot. Population: 28, including 10 in captivity. From a low of 15 in the early 1970s, it began an encouraging comeback, but only after intensive management and research. Recovery is still not assured.

13. Lord Howe Island wood rail. Population: 30, with 10 in captivity. Formerly widespread on Lord Howe Island in the southwest Pacific. Now restricted by rat predation to two small mountaintop plateaus.

14. New Zealand black stilt. Population: 30. Stream alteration has seriously reduced its numbers. Endangered by proposed hydroelectric project and by hybridization with other stilts.

15. Kakapo. Population: 40. At least 30 of these flightless, nocturnal parrots were discovered in 1976, adding to the known population of 10. Stoat predation in New Zealand caused their decline.

16. Seychelles magpie robin. Population: about 40. Cat predation remains a threat on Frigate Island in the Seychelles. Experimental trans-location of several birds to another island was attempted but is not yet fully successful.

17. Rodrigues brush warbler. Population: 40 to 50. Clearing of brushy woodland for firewood and frequent cyclones on Rodrigues Island in the Indian Ocean are problems.

18. Okinawa woodpecker. Population: 40 to 60. The tops of five mountains on Okinawa retain patches of mature, moist forest large enough to sustain small numbers. Forest clearing for firewood destroys habitat.

19. White-breasted silvereye. Population: fewer than 50. Loss of forest on Norfolk Island in the Pacific plus competition with a close relative that invaded Norfolk this century threaten the last few birds.

20. Mauritius pink pigeon. Population: 50, of which 30 are in captivity and relatively secure. Forest reduction, cyclones and egg robbing by introduced monkeys may destroy the wild population this decade.

21. Chatham Island oystercatcher. Population: about 50. Removal of sheep from Mangere and South East Islands, Chatham Islands, in the southwest Pacific has helped this shorebird, but it is still at risk from random, catastrophic events.

22. Chatham Island plover. Population: 50 to 60. Formerly widespread along New Zealand's shorelines, but eliminated there, possibly by cats. Now the species is restricted to South East Island in the Chatham Island group.

23. Seychelles black paradise flycatcher. Population: 60 to 70. Formerly occurred in five islands in the Seychelles; now limited to one, LaDigue. Suffers from lowland forest destruction and human persecution.

24. Noisy scrub-bird. Population: 80 to 90. Persists in one patch of eucalyptus forest in western Australia. Once, more widespread. Declined because of massive forest clearing and burning, and cat predation.

25. Hawaiian crow. Population: about 100 in Hawaii's mountain forests. This crow's future appears bleak because of forest destruction, predation, disease, and loss of food due to browsing by cattle, pigs and goats.

26. Atitlan grebe. Population: about 100. This flightless waterbird, confined to one lake in Guatemala, is hurt by habitat loss and introduced bass. A recent earthquake lowered water levels, halving the population.

27. Kabylian nuthatch. Population: about 108. Discivered in 1975, it is confined to a forested "island" on one mountaintop in Algeria. Goats and cattle present adequate regeneration of nearby vegetation.

28. Whooping crane. Population: 118 to 123. A massive conservation education campaign as well as habitat safeguards in the United States and Canada have brought a gradual buildup from a low of 15 birds in 1941.

29. Rodrigues fody. Population: 120. The fody's forest habitat on Rodrigues Island in the Indian Ocean has been largely destroyed. What remains is cut for firewood and damaged by cyclones.

30. St. Lucia parrot. Population: 125. Forest habitat is decreasing in the mountains of St. Lucia in the Lesser Antilles. Shooting is also a threat. Most apparently survived a hurricane in 1980.

31. Hooded grebe. Population: 126. Since its discovery in 1974 on a single lake in Argentina, it has suffered poor reproduction because of predation of eggs and young by kelp gulls.

32. Spanish imperial eagle. Population: 150, but that estimate may be optimistic. Now confined to oak forests in Spain, it suffers from forest clearing, poisoning and shooting.

33. Imperial parrot. Population: about 150, divided between two mountains on Dominica in the Lesser Antilles. Shooting is the primary threat. A recent destructive hurricane may also have caused some losses.

34. Cahow. Population: 200. Once numbering thousands, then thought extinct for three centuries, it is staging a comeback in Bermuda. Intensive management is reducing rat predation and competition for nest holes by another seabird.

35. Short-tailed albatross. Population: 200. Japanese feather hunters killed thousands last century. Removal of people from Torishima, its breeding island in the western Pacific, led to a gradual comeback.

36. Takahe. Population: fewer than 250. On New Zealand's South Island, predation by stouts and competition from introduced elk for tussock grass seed heads, the bird's most important food, are major problems.

37. Philippine eagle. Population: about 300, on Mindanao, Leyte and Luzon. Each pair requires an enormous area of forest for feeding, so forest destruction is a threat. So is shooting for trophies.

Information about these birds was collected by Warren B. King for the International Council for Bird Preservation.

List Winners In Union Lake Run Saturday

A former runner of the Boston Marathon, Tom Devine of Grand Forks, won the Lake Sarah 6.5 mile run-around Saturday at the Union Lake Sarah campground.

Devine, 40, completed the course, which actually measured 6.7 miles, in 35:45. In second place was Steve Kohorst, 30, of Grand Forks in 37:37, followed by Ted Sundin, 17, of East Grand Forks in 38:40.

First female to cross the finish line was 16-year-old Liz Dickenson of Bemidji in 45:19. That time was good enough for tenth place overall.

One-mile fun run was won by Shane Anderson, 12, of Thief River Falls in 6:29.

Winningest active high school head football coach in Minnesota is Tom Mahoney of Fairmont. Mahoney has a 193-67-8 30-year standard. His record at Fairmont is 160-59-6 covering a 25-year span. Second to Mahoney on the active list is Le Sueur tutor Bruce Frank. Frank's career mark is 190-84-10 spanning 33 years. While at Le Sueuer his record for 26 years is 156-68-10.

Program Claims Jobs Found For Welfare Cases

The work incentive (WIN) program helped find jobs for 4,808 state welfare recipients during the first nine months of fiscal year 1981, the Minnesota department of economic security announced recently.

Welfare savings for the first three quarters of the fiscal year, projected on an annual basis, were more than $15.5 million. Program costs for the nine-month period were $6,379,226.

Grant reductions to WIN participants also lowered public expenditures for medicaid and food stamps. In addition, the state and federal governments gained revenue through income taxes paid by employed WIN registrants.

WIN is a federal program which helps persons receiving aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) to become gainfully employed, reducing or eliminating their dependence on public welfare. The program also provides vocational training and other job-related services.

A total of 15,228 individuals entered the state WIN program from Oct. 1, 1980, through June 30, 1981. As of June 30, there were 21,463 individuals classified as WIN registrants; 70.3 per cent were women and 29.7 per cent men. Almost half the participants were high school graduates.

In addition to those who entered permanent employment, 54 participated in public service employment programs, 246 were in on-the-job training, 661 received basic education or vocational classroom training, 912 were assigned to non-WIN funded training programs and 315 were in non-WIN subsidized employment.

WIN registrants had an average starting wage of $4.68 per hour.

In Minnesota, 21.3 per cent of those entering the work force took jobs in the clerical field, 9.8 per cent went into the professional, technical or managerial fields, 8.6 per cent in structural work, 6.8 per cent in benchwork, 5.2 per cent in sales and 5.1 per cent in machine trades.

As of June 30, 5,501 WIN registrants were fully employed. An additional 1,173 registrants were employed part time. WIN registrants remain in the program until they are no longer receiving AFDC assistance.

In Minnesota, the WIN program is jointly operated by the Minnesota department of economic security, through its job service offices, and the Minnesota department of public welfare, through county welfare agencies. More than 90 per cent of the state's AFDC recipients live in the 53 counties served by the Minnesota WIN program.

Tips To Help You

If gas prices get to be too much for you, there may be another way to get where you're going at less cost than if you drove. Last year, 374 million passengers traveled in low-cost comfort to nearly 15,000 destinations by the most fuel-efficient transportation available . . . intercity bus.

Travelers who take a charter bus or a tour, will often find that their bus ticket covers more than just the trip. It can include prearranged hotel accomodations, meals, admissions and sightseeing for the whole family.

Buses not only save money for travelers, but for people who send packages, too. Because buses go everywhere a road goes, you can send a package almost anywhere in the country and, in many cases, it will be delivered overnight.

Soil Test!

Don't make a move without it.

As a successful farmer today, consider yourself a manufacturer.

The soil is your factory and a soil test is simply an inventory of the supplies needed to meet your planned production. And the balance of that inventory is as important as its size.

So, take that inventory . . . soil test.

Need help? Let our Fertilizer Specialist assist you in every part of your plan, from soil test through application. We can even arrange custom application if you wish. Come in today and let us help you develop a comprehensive crop production program.

Management Of Money Helps Student Costs

Students often have a hard time making ends meet. Some cash flow planning and a realistic budget may help them cut down on emergency calls to parents, asking for money, according to the Minnesota Society of Certified Public Accountants (CPAs).

Consider how much money you will need, and when you will need it, for major expenses like tuition and room and board, and for day-to-day expenses such as laundry, newspapers, haircuts and telephone bill. Any money not used right away should be earning interest, CPAs say, so put large amounts for tuition, room and board or rent into a savings account, or a money market fund. If you don't have enough to open your own money market account (often $2,500 is needed to do this), perhaps you can add to your parents' account.

To calculate the interest accruing on your portion of the account, simply keep track of the daily interest rate or use an average for the period your money is in the account. Multiply principal by interest rate and divide by 365 to find daily interest earned. If you deposit $1,000 into your parents' account for 90 days, you will earn about $37 based on an average interest rate of 15 per cent. If your parents use a money market fund with check-writing privileges, be sure to plan cash flow properly when you ask them to make a withdrawal. Checks can usually be written only in amounts of $500 or more.

Deposit into a checking account all the money budgeted for a few weeks and draw from it to meet expenses, CPAs say. If you receive a weekly or monthly allowance from your parents put that into this account. (A recent survey showed that monthly expenses amount to $100 to $300 for college students.) If you saved $1,000 for expenses from your summer job, you would have $25 a week for spending money. Find out if the bank exempts students from service charges and if your school offers check-cashing facilities.

Another consideration should be food costs. School dining plans may be more costly than cooking your own meals. If your school charges $1,300 a year for the dining plan, that's three meals a day for five days which comes to about $36 a week for the 36-week school year. In addition to this weekly amount you will need to spend money for food on weekends. Figure out what it would cost to buy groceries and cook your own meals.

Learn to shop. Economize as much as possible on personal items and clothing. Seek out discount stores. Campus stores will carry things you need, but probably at higher prices. Save by buying clothes that are well made, don't require dry cleaning and remain in style longer.

If you have a work-study job, be sure to calculate where this pay will fit into cash "inflow." Sometimes, the first two weeks of pay for these jobs is held until end of semester. In addition, there may be no paychecks during holidays or semester breaks, so be sure to account for these dry periods.

Books may cost $120 to $200 per semester depending upon courses. You may be able to get half the price back at the end of the semester if you sell the books, but you may not always be able to count on this.

The cost of educational services, books and supplies has gone up 12 per cent this year over last, so it's important, say CPAs, to plan wisely before you spend.

DOT To Weigh Trucks While In Motion

Minnesota's first weighing-in-motion scale — the first of its kind in the nation — installed in I-494 in Bloomington will collect data to improve highway pavement management, said commissioner Richard P. Braun, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

Braun explained that this data will help Mn-DOT measure actual truck weights. More accurate vehicle weight data will help Mn-DOT improve pavement design which will lead to more dollar savings on the state highway system by extending the life of the pavement.

The scale, installed in the pavement of I-494, one mile east of Hennepin county State-Aid Highway 18, has one loop detector ahead of the scale and one behind it. A computer located in a building off I-494 is connected to the loops. Spacing between the loops allows the computer to measure vehicle speeds and determine axle spacings in addition to the scale obtaining the vehicle weights.

Because vehicles are not being stopped, Mn-DOT will be able to weigh more vehicles and gather more and better traffic data, Braun said.

Minnesota's weighing-in-motion scale was developed by the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, Canada. Cold weather performance should be excellent since the scale operates efficiently at temperatures as low as 40 degrees below zero fahrenheit, he said.

Edge of America

A barren beach — some plunging waves — and then for thousands of miles, the sea. Poets might think that way. But millions share the thought . . . this is the edge of America!

But the edge of our nation has been closing in. Within our restless society we have confronted a new edge of America — a shoreline of freedom, of justice, of mutual respect of men for one another and for their institutions. When you leave that shore behind, there is nothing . . .

Look rather at the heart of America. Look at the spiritual treasure which inspired patriots to crown religious liberty as the supreme freedom.

Each week our churches pursue their sacred mission. More and more they've been welcoming families like your own . . . folks who have seen the edge of America — and are seeking the heart!

Isolation And Fear Motivate Abused Women

by Kathleen Ann Kolden

This is part four of a six-part series on battered women. "Why Women Stay".

Fear and isolation are two very significant factors in holding a women in an abusive situation. Many of the women I have worked with have had a far greater fear of what their spouses would do to them should they attempt to leave than if they remain in the relationship. There is also the fear of not knowing what is out there, in the world, for them should they decide to leave. Starting a new life, the responsibility of raising a family alone may sometimes be a more frightening consideration than the abuse some women have tolerated.

From the Del Martin book "Battered Wives" one battered woman was quoted as saying, "I don't know. I only know that it has happened and that each night I dread the final blow that will kill me and leave my children motherless. I hope I can hang on until I complete my education, get a good job, and become self-sufficient enough to care for my children on my own."

One form of isolation occurs when a woman is forced by her partner to break off relationships with her friends and family. She may not be allowed to go out when her injuries show lest the abuser be found out.

A woman may isolate herself out of shame and fear that someone would find out. In some cases a woman may feel a desire to protect her partner's reputation or job. A woman who is economically dependent and emotionally attached to her spouse may fear losing him if others find out about the abuse. He would be humiliated and put the blame of that humiliation on her.

A battered woman with children very often depends solely on the financial security provided by her spouse. In fact, the woman who has ample financial security provided and some sort of status within the community may have a far more difficult time ending an abusive relationship than the woman who is financially insecure. If she has not been employed for some time her job skills may be outdated. Welfare may not be considered. Jobs that provide enough of an income for a woman and children to become self sufficient are scarce.

One woman relates, "I was told that if I was a 'good girl' and took care of myself, some nice guy would come along, fall in love, marry and take care of me for the rest of my life. I believed that — I actually believed that — and here I am at 37 with three small kids — left alone. My divorce settlement is going to leave me hardly anything to live on. The judge asked me at my pre-trial hearing why I wasn't looking for a job. I married at 20 without finishing college. I have no training — I have no money to go back to school. The jobs I might even be able to get don't pay anything! Who is going to look after my children if I do work? I don't know what I am going to do."

Very often a battered woman "stuffs" her feelings. She may feel hatred, anger, fear, loneliness and turn them all off to be able to function in her everyday existence. As a result the repression of feelings can lead to severe depression. The depression leads to the immobilization women feel. She feels out of control, that even if she does try something to end the abuse it won't make any difference anyway.

"A man taking the responsibility for his violent behavior must face an incredible amount of guilt and shame. It means he must confront his whole concept of masculinity. As a society, we have given men neither the permission nor the tools to do this. Consequently, men who are violent will continue to abuse their partners and to place the blame for their behavior on the women they have abused. And, abused women as victims of this violence will continue to accept the blame until they are given the permission to place the responsibility for the battering on the men who abuse them." This tuote is taken from a manual distributed by the state department of corrections.

The next article will deal with the effects of battering on children.

THEN and NOW!

Although tobacco has been used in America since before Columbus arrived, few people today know all the facts about smoking.

For instance, did you know that low tar cigarettes have been around for over 15 years? In the early 1960s, one of the largest tobacco companies recognized the demand for a low tar cigarette and assigned the development of such a product to its Department of Research and Development.

The result was the first Carlton cigarette, introduced in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles in January, 1964.

During the mid-1960s, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) established a laboratory in Washington, D.C. for the purpose of measuring cigarettes for tar and nicotine content. The first published report was issued in November, 1967 and the average cigarette had 20.3 mg. tar and 1.2 mg. nicotine. Carlton had 7.2 mg. tar and 0.5 mg. nicotine.

Many new brands have been introduced as "ultra low tars," some too recently to be tested by the FTC. In the 17 most recent FTC reports, however, no cigarette has been reported to be lower in tar than Carlton. According to tests using the FTC method, Carlton king size filter tip cigarettes in the flip-lid box have less than 0.01 mg. of tar, 0.002 mg. nicotine. That is even less than the version tested for the 1981 FTC report.

THEN: In 1967, the Federal Trade Commission reported the average cigarette had over 20 milligrams of tar.

NOW: Today, you can get a cigarette with less than one hundredth of a milligram of tar.

Another surprise about cigarettes is that although the tobacco plant was first cultivated here, modern-type cigarettes originated in Europe. The first American-made cigarettes were not created until 1867.

World Population

Following comments were written by Werner Fornos, director of the Population Action council:

Seven years ago, when Ronald Reagan was still Governor of California, he stated that global population stabilization was vital "to the welfare of all peoples of the world." He emphasized that, unless "major efforts" were made to reduce population growth, "vast numbers of people will face severe famine and misery."

Now, as President of the United States, during one of the fastest growing decades in world history — a decade in which global population is expected to exceed five billion, Reagan, through leadership and action, can be instrumental in avoiding the calamities he underscored back in 1974.

Rampant, unchecked population growth is certainly a great obstacle to social and economic progress in the developing world, where 90 per cent of this growth is expected to occur between now and the end of the century.

World overpopulation is at the source of numerous potential catastrophes: food scarcities and increasing malnutrition, depletion of natural resources and degradation of productive environment, growing unemployment and underemployment, urban crowding and severe housing shortages, and the diversion of resources from investment to support the growing population.

Thus far President Reagan has demonstrated that he is still very much cognizant of the population problem. The first international document to which he affixed his presidential signature — the declaration emanating from the Ottawa Summit Conference — contains a firm commitment to placing "greater emphasis on international efforts" to reduce world population growth.

Furthermore, there is encouraging evidence that President Reagan's concern is not limited to rhetoric. While other programs were undergoing drastic budget cuts, the President called for a 33 per cent increase for overseas population assistance, bringing it to a total of $253.4 million. During their confirmation hearings, his handpicked Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Agency for International Development Administrator, M. Peter McPherson, each pledged their dedication to the goal of slowing down global population growth. More recently McPherson strongly reaffirmed the Administration's position in a cable to all Ambassadors and AID mission directors, ensuring them that "the U.S. does not intend to diminish its commitment to and leadership in international population programs." McPherson said Reagan's call for a one-third increase in these programs "at a time of severe budgetary stringency and cutbacks of many domestic and international programs, speaks for itself."

Meanwhile, a bipartisan contingent of 105 members of the House of Representatives has notified the White House of its "united support for family planning programs." In a letter to the President, they stressed that numerous developing nations, including Mexico, Thailand, Indonesia, Columbia and Costa Rica, have begun to experience significant declines in their fertility rates as family planning services have become more available.

The members of Congress who signed that letter indicated their deep concern that the controversies over abortion, sex education and contraception for young people are creating the mistaken impression that government support for family planning services is the subject of partisan disagreement among federal officials. Acknowledging the intense ongoing debate among elected and appointed officials over the abortion issue, the representatives correctly observed that federal funding for family planning services — both at home and in developing countries receiving U.S. assistance — has always enjoyed solid bipartisan support.

Family planning must not be allowed to become an issue of "abortion politics." It is high time that the White House and the Congress heeded the advice of the Republican Task Force on Earth Resources and Population, in its report issued in December 1969: "We need to make population and family planning household words. We need to take the sensationalism out of this topic. If family planning is anything, it is a matter of public health." The chairman of that task force was then a Texas congressman. Today, he is Vice President of the United States George Bush.

President Reagan deserves praise for his commitment toward reducing world population growth. In the continuing effort to cut the budget even more, the President must now show the courage of his convictions by standing firm on the Administration's international population assistance position. It is more than a matter of Presidential credibility; at stake is the quality of life for future generations of world inhabitants.

How Times Change!

For many years the state of North Dakota was the consistent butt of jokes about its two-track highways, icebox winters and horizon to horizon scenery. But times change, and columnist Wayne Lubenow points it out in a recent column.

". . . Then came the energy crunch and then came the boom in oil and coal and suddenly the power-poor state started to pay us a lot of attention," writes the Fargo-based freelancer. "They courted us like long-lost brothers, but their fangs were dripping as they eyed our coal and oil."

Lubenow points out that Minnesota is among those states, and he has what we believe to be a few valid points. He is critical of Minnesota senator Dave Durenberger's contention that all the natural resources in any state belong to all Americans — and therefore North Dakota should cut its taxes on coal and oil in half.

"If North Dakota's oil and coal also belong to Minnesota," he reasons, "then so should Minnesota fish belong to North Dakota. . . For decades the state of Minnesota has socked it to North Dakota anglers and cottage owners. An out-of-state fishing license is three or four times what Minnesotans pay. If they can tax their fish, why can't we tax our oil and coal?

". . . They want North Dakota to dig up the western half of the state for coal, plumb deep for oil, use up our priceless water — and then give it away. I don't think that's fair — especially in view of the way Minnesota jealously guards its own natural resources.

"I think North Dakota has been exploited long enough," he writes. "We've been the little kid down at the end of the table while all the big kids were getting all the chicken from the platter in the middle.

"Make no mistake; counties where oil and coal exploration is booming have been impacted. They richly deserve tax money to take care of things. The entire burden of exploration should not fall on them nor on the people of North Dakota. The big energy companies, who send our energy elsewhere, should not expect to pump it out for free. Nor should other states expect to get it for free."

Lubenow points out that North Dakotans have become more important to Minnesotans, and he chides Durenberger for his seeming sensitivity to states' rights.

"I go to Minneapolis on occasion to see your Vikings and Twins and North Stars play," he writes, "and you even tax me for that. C'mon, Senator, you've had your way with us long enough. Now it's our turn."

Hard To Understand

Following editorial is from the Pope Country Tribune at Glenwood:

One thing that we've never been able to understand . . . how people can get so worked up about gun control laws, and yet completely ignore a killer who each year kills 15 times as many people as are killed by handguns.

We're talking about the drunk driver. Society needs more protection against the drunken driver, who in one accident can wipe out as many as a half dozen people.

If a gunman went on a rampage and killed a half dozen people, it would be front page news throughout the nation, but let a drunken driver smash into another car and kill that many and it would rate the front page only in some weekly newspaper near where the accident occurred.

The nation needs tougher penalties for persons committing a crime with a gun, and we also need stiffer sentences for drunken driving as well.

There are times when it is difficult to comprehend the rationale of our thoughts and actions, and this is one example.

Borrowed Nonsense:

"My wife and I still set aside two nights a month for dining out . . . with soft music, thick steaks, good wine and all the trimmings."

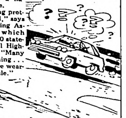
"Terrific, but doesn't it cost a lot for babysitting?"

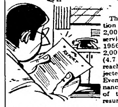
"Not really. The wife keeps the kids when I'm out and I keep them when she's out."

IT'S A FACT!

Interstate highways are wearing out, but not because of truck traffic, but because America's interstate system is becoming a natural victim of old age.

They're "performing pretty much as expected," says the American Trucking Association (ATA), which cites this March, 1980 statement by the Federal Highway Administrators: "Many sections . . . are reaching . . . 20 years . . . They are wearing out . . . on schedule."





The interstate construction program has put about 2,000 miles of pavement in service each year since 1956. An average of about 2,000 miles of the system (4.7 percent of the total) is reaching the end of its projected life span each year. Even with proper maintenance, says the ATA, many of these miles now need resurfacing.

INFLATION TAXES

The ATA contends that highway user taxes paid into the federal Highway Trust Fund, are "stagnant or falling" because of more fuel-efficient vehicles, reduced travel and use of road funds for non-highway transportation purposes. The organization points out that these factors "have put a tremendous strain on highway financing." It warns that a delay in any project means it will, eventually cost more, due to inflation.

reports to Minnesota

Controversy over the course of American federalism has raged ever since the adoption of the Constitution almost 200 years ago. Modern Presidents ritualistically approach the White House with fine intentions of curtailing federal power, but a search of recent history reveals no examples of success.

President Reagan may well be the exception. The opening months of his Administration have demonstrated his dedication to a "New Federalism" — a return of authority and revenue to state and local governments.

Reagan recognizes the Tenth Amendment to the Constitution as an essential part of the law of the land. "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited to it by the states, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people." This amendment has a logical base — government works best when it is closest to the people, when citizens are intimately involved and take a participatory role.

In today's government, Washington's influence is more pervasive, inefficient and costly than ever. Too many Americans have come to view states as mere administrative provinces of an ineffective federal government. The revived enthusiasm for local control stems from popular frustration over the growing complexity of our national governing system operating out of Washington.

Reagan's reform of the federal system, a radical transfer to state and local governments of program and taxing authority, could be one of the major accomplishments of his administration. The first major step in this revitalized Federalism is to decrease the spending of the federal government. Thus, Reagan's program centers on a series of broad cuts that reduce President Carter's budget requests for fiscal year 1982 by $44 billion.

Reagan aims to couple this revised budget with the consolidation of 85 individual federal aid programs into six broad grants covering health, education and other social needs. Administrative control over the resulting blocks would be shifted to the states and twenty-five per cent of their funding would be cut. This block grant program will require a "leap of faith" by officials across the country, many of whom fear that the harm from cutbacks in federal funds will outweigh the benefits from increased flexibility and control.

Most state officials agree that they can get by with less federal money if Reagan also reduces the many regulations and paperwork. To this end, the Administration has formed a task force, headed by Vice President Bush, to begin eliminating many of the superfluous federal regulations. Members of the task force believe that state and local officials should not be subjected to the over-regulation that has burdened the American economy and limited the decision making and effectiveness of state and local governments.

The President has also appointed an Advisory Committee on Federalism. This committee is reaching out to state, county and city officials, members of Congress and private citizens to join in a forum to rejuvenate the intellectual basis of Federalism and to give specific guidance on programs the Administration is addressing.

The shift towards more federal power has dominated policy during the twentieth century. The New Deal initiated a plethora of federal aid programs. These increased after World War II as social and economic aid to the states was extended while new areas of federally sponsored assistance were opened. A record of inadequate state action for helping the poor, handicapped and hungry forced this federal intervention. Various interest groups quickly discovered that they would rather have Congress target funds for their programs than trust the states to do so. Reagan hopes that his "New Federalism" will overcome the prevalent apprehension that states will not provide the support for needed programs. To this end, he proposes the maintaining of a "social safety net," an array of basic economic security programs that will catch the truly needy.

Proposals by earlier Republican Administrations to curtail the federal government's role were consistently resisted by Democrats in control of the Congresses. With the advent of a Republican majority in the Senate, New Federalism finally has a chance for success. Reagan's program has already been endorsed by many state legislators and most of the nation's governors. Ultimate success depends on the Administration's continued political momentum and ability to defeat an array of special interest groups that defend their programs in tenacious and generally successful lobbying.

James Madison wrote in the Federalist Papers: "The federal Constitution forms a happy combination . . . the great and aggregate interests being referred to the national and local and particular to the state governments." The current Administration is attempting the difficult and delicate task of distinguishing between aggregate and particular interests. Whether they will succeed in this endeavor remains to be seen in the coming years.

Between 1970 and 1978, the number of women working part time in managerial and administrative jobs grew by 59 per cent, from 164,000 to 261,000, according to the publication of the U.S. Department of Labor entitled "Job Options for Women in the 80's."

Scientists Share Frustration . . .

Voyager Z — End Of Era Of Space Exploration

by Madeline Jacobs
Smithsonian News Service

August 25 at precisely 8:25 p.m. (PDT), the Voyager 2 spacecraft zoomed by Saturn, a mere 63,000 miles above its hazy cloudtops, revealing to hundreds of millions of people around the world their closest look yet of the multi-ringed marvel, the most remote and dimmest planet known to the ancients.

For the next two months, scientists will anxiously await and then pore over the highest-resolution photos ever taken of Saturn's rings and five of its satellites.

Flight of Voyager 2 — just as the flights of all the spacecraft preceding it, unmanned and manned craft by the names of Mariner, Explorer, Pioneer, Surveyor, Ranger, Viking, Apollo — marks a triumph of technology and a testament to the genius and inquisitiveness of the human mind.

But ironically, Voyager 2 also marks the end of the first great era of space exploration, a golden age of discovery which has unleashed us from our parochial view of the heavens and brought us to an entirely new understanding of the solar system.

For, at best, under current budgetary conditions, only one new launch is scheduled for the 1980s — the Galileo mission now planned for a 1985 departure and arrival at Jupiter in 1987. Planned, too, is a mission to Venus to map its cloud-obscured surface using radar. But the Venus project is not yet funded and even the Galileo project may be in jeopardy.

To the thousands of scientists absorbed in more than two decades of planetary exploration, there is more than irony involved in what they see as the imminent demise of the U.S. space program. There is a sense of profound disappointment and frustration, sentiments shared by Dr. David Morrison, a planetary astronomer at the University of Hawaii. Morrison has worked on the Mariner missions to Venus and Mercury, as well as the Voyager and Galileo projects, and recently served at the headquarters of the national aeronautics and space administration in its space science program.

"The really unfortunate part," he says, "is that during the last six years when some of the most exciting results were coming in from Mars, Jupiter and Saturn, we did not make investments for the future. It hasn't yet hiet the general public, but during the 1970s we were spoiled; not one 12-month period passed without an encounter with a planet. In the 1980s, if we're lucky, we'll have three encounters at most — Uranus and Neptune by Voyager and Jupiter by Galileo. Pessimistic view is that we might not have any planetary program at all if NASA has budget cuts in fiscal year 1983 comparable to those in the past two fiscal years."

The end of planetary exploration would be a tragedy for each of us, in Morrison's view, but especially for those in future generations. Indeed, a whole generation has grown up with the space program and been inspired by the images of distant, enigmatic worlds. Each new world has been a reminder of the nature of excellence, what we are capable of as human beings and our place in the solar system.

Morrison and others believe that many people have almost come to take the spectacular successes of the space program for granted. Success, in the form of nearly a quarter of a million photographs returned from space, has placed in the category of commonplace such wonders as men walking on the moon; Olympus Mons, a Martian volcano three times the height of the largest earthly volcano; Titan, a planet-sized satellite of Saturn with an atmosphere eerily similar to Earth's, only locked in a deep freeze; and nine volcanoes actively erupting on Io, one of Jupiter's satellites and the only place in the solar system other than Earth where we've directly witnessed geologic processes in action.

"Clearly, these two decades have produced a revolution in our concept of the solar system and the Earth's place in it," Morrison says. "Most outstanding to me is the incredible diversity of what we've seen. Each of the two dozen bodies we've looked at is unique."

It is just as clear that exploration has raised as many questions as it has answered. Ultimately, Morrison believes, by studying these "unique sister worlds, we'll have a better understanding of our own world — its weather, climate changes and geological processes."

But most scientists caution against overselling space exploration on the basis of practical applications or the widely touted spin-off technology.

"The material spin-off from the space program is trivial," states Dr. Noel Hinners, director of the Smithsonian's national air and space museum and former associate administrator for space science at NASA. "It's great that it's there, but the purpose of space exploration never was and is not now spin-off.

"Rather, the most important benefit of the space program is the role that space exploration has occupied as a national endeavor. One place where you see this clearly is at the air and space museum. When you see visitors there standing in long lines to touch a piece of the moon brought back by our Apollo astronauts, you realize that there is more to life than just material things."

Morrison concurs. "Throughout history, the most successful societies have explored new worlds andd been thrilled by it. It's the human aspiration."

Both Morrison and Hinners point out that exploration of the planets is recognized throughout the world as an area of unchallenged American leadership, a position contributing immeasurably to national prestige. Now, as the United States retrenches, other nations are sitting up and taking notice. "If we don't explore space, someone else will," Morrison contends. "A good example is the mission that was scheduled to rendezvous with Halley's Comet in 1986. When we pulled back, the Russians stepped in and are now strongly committed to Halley. Japan and the European space agency are also taking more active roles."

Critics of the space program do not deny that planetary exploration has been good for national prestige and morale. But they argue that, in an era of limited resources and increasing demands, it comes down to a matter of selecting priorities. Thus, within NASA itself, the planetary exploration budget has fallen victim to the demands of the more utilitarian, reusable space shuttle. And many space-oriented projects now are being designed with at least some military applications in mind.

Boosters of the space program are not blind to the subject of priorities, but they point out that space exploration is "really a bargain." "If each person in the United States gave 25 cents a year for five years, we could do the Halley mission," Morrison says. Carl Sagan, one of the space program's biggest promoters, puts it even more graphically.

"The cost of a single nuclear aircraft carrier," he has written, "could pay for the Halley's Comet mission, Galileo to Jupiter, the Venus Orbital Imaging Radar mission to Venus, significant initial work on a Mars roving vehicle, a Titan entry probe and a manned mission to a carbonaceous asteroid.

"The short-term economy of cancelling planetary exploration would be dramatically outweighed by the long-term loss," he continues. "Unmanned planetary exploration speaks to us on an almost mythic level about our place in the universe, about origins and ends, about our responsibility for our small blue world . . . These spacecraft provide nourishment for the spirit and the soul — and civilizations are not judged on what they provide for the body alone."

Scientists have learned more about the solar system in the last two decades of planetary exploration than in the preceding 350 years of telescope-based observations. "New solar system" is a place full of beauty and mystery. A few examples:

Mercury: closest planet to the sun has a surprising lunar-like surface but shows evidence of strong volcanic activity early in its history.

Venus: is similar to earth in size, density and position in the solar system. But our sister planet is now a hellishly hot world where heat is trapped in a thick atmosphere of carbon dioxide laden with sulfuric acid clouds.

The Moon: our closest neighbor is heavily cratered and shows virtually no sign of geological activity in the last 2.5 billion years. Some moon rocks date back 4.6 billion years, or about the time the solar system itself was formed.

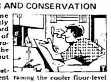
Mars: nearly all the speculations about Mars have been proven wrong. Mars is incredibly diverse, with global dust storms, craters, great volcanoes, enormous canyons and dunes and channels bearing a striking resemblance to Earth's riverbeds. Mars is the only known planet other than earth where water has flowed in the past. The question of life on Mars remains unanswered, however.

Jupiter: Voyager spacecrafts discovered a ring around Jupiter along with Saturn a kind of "mini solar system." The satellites of Jupiter discovered by Galileo — Io, Europa, Callisto and Ganymede — have been revealed as totally different than any previously studied planets, each with a distinctive "personality."

Saturn: Voyager 1 discovered two new satellites, bringing the total to at least 15. Saturn's satellite, Titan, is the only satellite known to possess a substantial atmosphere, making it of special interest to scientists. The biggest surprise was the stunningly complex ring system, made of more than 1,000 ringlets containing braids, knots and kinks.

Hints For Homeowners

MODERNIZATION AND CONSERVATION



Do-it-yourself home modernization recently took a giant step forward when a leading maker of kitchen cabinetry introduced "Connect•Ables," the cabinet-in-a-carton you put together in minutes.

The secret of this cost-saving home improvement system is a unique connecting device that securely joins together the panels of a cabinet with a mere turn of a screw. This means you can redesign the layout of your kitchen and that you can install base and wall cabinets, with complete instructions, custom-fitted for your family's needs.

The tools for the job are simple, too. See the Cooper Tools display at most hardware stores or at a home center—that's where you'll find Connect•Ables—for screwdrivers, tape measure and a claw hammer. Add a level, drill and square, and go to work!

Also new for the do-it-yourself homeowner are decorator-styled fans that install at existing ceiling outlets. They offer both cold and hot weather energy and cost savings by circulating accumulated warm air downward and, in summer, raising the cooler floor-level air for more even distribution and greater comfort. Again, the important installation tool is that handy screwdriver!

Storage space is another common household problem, and there are several new instant-install products worth checking out. One, a rack system called "Space Builder," goes on a door or wall for cans, bottles, books or you name it. There are "Permahooks" for perforated-board storage of tools and for shelving—the hooks won't pop out or wobble.

While on your hardware venture, give some thought to water conservation. Because so many parts of the country are plagued by water shortages, many flow-control devices for showers, faucets and toilet tanks are available. Most are easily installed with an adjustable wrench and pliers.

Cholesterol Only Part Of Health Problem

You probably know the fellow.

He's overweight. He's a boozer and a smoker. He doesn't get enough sleep or exercise.

And if you happen to express any concern over his state of health,he's likely to tell you: "Don't worry about me or my ticker. I'm watching my cholesterol these days."

Sound familiar? Perhaps. Sound logical? Hardly. But it's the sort of "reasoning" that's becoming popular. And it's usually expounded with certainty.

The fact is, there are few things about cholesterol we can accurately call "certainties." On one hand, we know that arterial plaque—the "rust" that builds up on the inner walls of major arteries, often restricting blood flow to the heart and brain—contains cholesterol.

We also know that eating saturated fat tends to increase the amount of cholesterol in the blood (serum cholesterol), while eating polyunsaturated fat tends to lower it. And we know that many—though not all—persons with coronary heart disease have more serum cholesterol than normal.

But on the other hand, we don't yet know how arterial plaque is formed or how cholesterol becomes a part of it. Nor do we know the origin of cholesterol found in plaque—whether it comes from food or the body itself. (Almost every cell in your body naturally produces cholesterol. And when you lower your intake of the substance, your body compensates—by producing even more.)

We don't even have solid evidence that a low-cholesterol-high-polyunsaturated fat diet can actually prevent heart attacks. States a recent Consumers Union study of diet and heart disease: "What one would expect to happen on the basis of population comparisons and laboratory evidence has yet to be demonstrated in practice."

We do know, however, a thing or two about heart disease. And one is that obesity, smoking, excessive drinking, inadequate sleep and inadequate exercise will make you a prime candidate for it.

Onions Top Hearty Burger Sandwich

A hearty burger sandwich topped with rings of Idaho-Oregon Sweet Spanish onions is a meal that will appeal especially to the men in your household. Savory broiled burgers, served on toasted rye bread are spread with a tasty mixture of blue cheese, cream cheese, mayonnaise and seasonings. Over this go tomato slices and crisp juicy onion rings. Then the sandwiches are slipped under the broiler to heat until bubbly.

Sweet Spanish onions from Southwestern Idaho and Eastern Oregon are on the market from mid-August through March. Look for the large round onions with the bronze parchment-like skins, and buy enough to enjoy often while they are in season.

Idaho-Oregon Sweet Spanish onions have excellent keeping qualities if properly stored in a cool, dry, dark, well-ventilated area. Cut onions should be wrapped in plastic and refrigerated. Or chop and freeze to use at your convenience.

Onion Burger Sandwiches

- 1 Idaho-Oregon Sweet Spanish onion
- 1 lb. ground beef
- Salt and pepper
- 4 slices rye bread
- 1 package (3 oz.) cream cheese, softened
- 2 ounces blue cheese, crumbled
- 1/3 cup mayonnaise
- 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- Dash of salt
- 8 slices tomato

Peel and slice onion. Separate into rings. Shape ground beef into 4 thin burgers and broil to desired doneness. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Toast bread slices on one side. Place broiled burgers on untoasted side. Combine cheeses, mayonnaise, Worcestershire sauce and salt. Spread part of cheese mixture over burgers. Top with tomato slices and onion rings. Spoon remaining cheese mixture over top. Broil until bubbly. Serves 4.

Separated At Birth . . .

Mothers, Babies Still 'Close', Says 'U'M Study

by Judith Raunig-Graham
'U' M News Service

Babies separated from their mothers at birth remain capable of forming positive attachments later, according to recent research conducted by a team at the University of Minnesota.

Researchers L. Alan Sroufe, Sara Rode, Pi-Nian Chang and Robert Fisch evaluated 24 babies who had been separated from their mothers at birth because of prematurity or severe health problems. The babies were studies during their second year of life.

Results showed that the babies were comparable in patterns of attachment to previously studied babies who had not been separated from their mothers for an extended period following birth.

The study's conclusion is especially significant to parents of premature infants and to couples who adopt, Sroufe said, since research over the past few years has emphasized the need for skin-to-skin contact between mothers and infants following birth in order to promote strong attachment.

Sroufe, a faculty member in the university's institute of child development, said he has received phone calls from anxious parents who wonder whether their adopted or premature babies will "bond" to them. Bonding is the formation of a close relationship between parent and child.

A study done in 1976 by two St. Louis researchers indicated that skin-to-skin contact at birth promoted strong attachment. Sroufe does not dispute the accuracy of that finding, but believes people has misinterpreted the results. Some now think that without early skin-to-skin contact, later positive attachment is impossible, he said.

"We certainly don't think it's true that mothers and babies separated at birth can't have good relationships," he said.

"Immediate involvement with the infant is helpful to starting off a good relationship, but I don't see it as either necessary or sufficient. Having early contact doesn't guarantee a good relationship."

Sroufe, who was principal investigator for the study, said this study and other data support his belief that what happens over time is what matters in forming a relationship. Attachment develops throughout the first year of life, he said. "Like any relationship the quality depends on what you put into it over time."

The 24 infants in the study, all from middle-class homes, were placed in the neo-natal intensive care unit of University of Minnesota hospitals at birth because of prematurity of illness. The babies were later evaluated in a University setting with their mothers at approximately 14 months of age. A laboratory setting was chosen because it would be unfamiliar to the babies whose responses would likely differ if they were evaluated in settings they were used to, Sroufe said.

Babies considered to have a firm attachment to their primary caregiver share certain characteristics, Sroufe said. They use the mother or caregiver as a secure base for exploration because they are confident of her availability. When they are distressed, they are willingly comforted by the mother. Following separation, the attached babies actively seek interaction with the mother.

The procedure used to evaluate attachment in the study required observing the babies' reactions when their mothers left them alone in a playroom and then returned. Reactions were noted during seven three-minute episodes over 21 minutes.

First the baby and caregiver were placed in a playroom and then joined by a stranger. The caregiver then left and returned shortly therafter. The baby was then left alone. The stranger returned, and finally the caregiver returned. The episodes were videotapes and then evaluated.

Following their observations, the team concluded that 17 of the 24 babies were securely attached, three were anxiously attached, and four were resistent to attachment.

The anxiously attached babies differed from the securely attached in that they often mixed seeking contact with angry behavior following separation. The babies resistant to attachment ignored or turned away from their caregivers upon reunion.

Sroufe noted that all normal babies exhibit these varied behaviors at times in their home environments and that's why the observations were made in a University setting, where all babies would be expected to turn toward their mothers for relief from stress.

Sroufe also pointed out that when each of the babies in the study was in the intensive care unit, its parents were encouraged to visit once the infant's condition had been stabilized. That factor may have had a bearing on the outcome of the study, he said.

The researchers concluded that while the early days after birth may be important, the quality of the infant-caregiver relationship is a product of the entire history of interaction.

Hints For Homeowners

Add-On Heat Pumps Lower Heating Bills

More and more American homeowners are discovering a way to heat and cool their homes without raising their temperatures or putting a damper on their budgets.

It's all based on scientific principles discovered over a hundred and fifty years ago. You can add an electric heat pump to your existing heating system and your heating bills may drop immediately. More importantly, you'll have gained protection against the rapid increase in oil and gas prices which have risen dramatically since 1975. In addition, heat pumps provide efficient central air conditioning when the weather is hot.

A home heat pump is a close relative of the familiar home central air conditioner. Experts at Carrier Air Conditioning, a company with half a century of heat pump experience, point out that heat pumps take advantage of the fact that refrigerating equipment can be used for heating as well as cooling. This is possible because what refrigeration actually does is move heat.

Your refrigerator, for example, cools by moving heat from inside your refrigerator to the outside. This is how a home air conditioning system works, too. Your air conditioner removes excess heat from within your home and moves it outside.

A heat pump goes one step further. It can reverse itself and remove the heat that already exists in the outside air, and transfer it inside your home. Even at very cold outdoor temperatures, there's still heat in the air—free heat that the heat pump can capture for further use.

Even when outside air temperatures drop, your home heating bills needn't soar if you have an add-on heat pump.

Best of all, it takes less energy to extract and transfer heat than it does to produce heat by "burning" electricity (as in a toaster or electric furnace).

What many American homewoners are doing is checking their heating systems. If it's in good shape, they're adding a heat pump for maximum efficiency and lower operating costs. If the heating system is shot, they're changing over to a heat pump altogether. Either way, homeowners are reducing their energy costs by hardly raising a finger.

FANCY THAT!

A skillful home run hitter was Babe Ruth. Ruth still holds the record for 60 home runs in a 154-game season, most long hits (119), most total bases (457), and most bases on balls (170) in a single season! Ruth was a winner with baseball fans when he played. . and is still remembered as a winner by baseball fans today.

Giant Worms From Ocean Depths Are Subject Of Study

by Thomas Harney
Smithsonian News Service

Spiraling down through the ocean at the rate of 91 feet a minute, the two scientists and pilot aboard the submersible Alvin were aware of only a slight sinking sensation. Leaning on their shoulders against the floor, the scientists peered through Alvin's portholes, as the blue-green waters of the Pacific quickly faded into an abysmal blackness.

Gradually, a myriad of dazzling diamonds appeared in the distance--actually, a galaxy of luminescent underwater life--lighting up the eerie darkness like a billion nightime stars. As the vessel approached the bottom, the pilot switched on the lights. Under direction from the mother vessel, Lulu, 8,000 feet above, the pilot maneuvered the miniature sub the last few feet toward the geothermal springs.

There, as hot water laden with toxic hydrogen sulfide gushed through a vent in the sea floor, were the creatures they had been seeking--giant worns growing upright in tangled clumps, their scarlet plumes slowly undulating among the rocky crevices.

For Dr. Meredith L. Jones, one of the scientists aboard, it was an exhilarating moment. He was seeing firsthand the incredible worms, discovered nearly two years before. He could not know then that this expedition was just the beginning of a complicated quest that would uncover the secrets of these amazing animals.

Now, after three years of intensive research, Jones and other scientists have concluded that the giant worms are not only a new family of animals, but that they owe their very existence to bacteria, which nourish the worms even as they are living within the animals' bodies and which do so by a mechanism never before observed. This discovery may help explain how other deep sea creatures survive and flourish in hostile environments and may provide clues to the evolution of life on Earth.

The story behind the giant worms began in 1977 when they were first spotted by the crew on board Alvin, a U.S. navy research submersible operated by the Woods Hole Oceanographic institution. With support from the National Science foundation, an expedition of scientists from Woods Hole, the Massachusetts institute of technology, Oregon state university and the U.S. geological survey had set out to investigate for the first ime one of the geothermal springs occurring in the geologically active region of the East Pacific, 200 miles east of the famed Galapagos Islands.

In this area, known as the Galapagos rift, lava sometimes erupts between separating zones of oceanic crust. Ordinarily, water at depths of a mile and a half is a frigid 36 degrees Fahrenheit; animal life is scattered and sparse. But in the Galapagos rift, hot water from the earth's interior flows up through fissures or vents in newly solidified sea floor lave.

The scientists were seeking to understand more about the geology of these newly discovered vents and how deep sea sediments rich in ore form at such sites when they stumbled across a dense aggregation of organisms flourishing in a pocket of surprisingly warm water, about 73 F. Tests showed that the water in the pocket was rich in hydrogen sulfide, created from sulfates in the subsurface rocks by the heat of the geothermal spring.

Living and thriving in this strange environment were the giant tube worms and other bizarre creatures--foot-long clams and mussels and peach-colored jellyfish resembling dandelions.

Using a remote-controlled mechanical collecting claw, the Alvin crew collected a few of the vent animals. Later, aboard "Lulu," scientists examined the exotic worms. Inside the rigid, one-inch diameter tubes, which held the worms upright, were long, soft, pink bodies. Amazingly, the worms had no mouths or digestive systems.

How could these worms and other animals survive, let alone flourish, in this hostile environment? Puzzled, the researchers shipped the Galpagos worms off to the Smithsonian institution's Dr. Meredith L. Jones, one of the world's leading experts on the anatomy of worms. It became his job to determine what known species, genus and family of worms — if any — they represented.

At the national museum of natural history in Washington, D.C., Jones examined tissues of the worms under a microscope and slowly began piecing together a picture of the animal's circulatory, muscular, reproductive and nervous systems.

"At first, the anatomy was totally alien," Jones recalls, "but after awhile it became apparent that the worm's internal structure was similar to that of two species described about eight years ago belonging to the phylum Pogonophora (or 'beard bearer').

"The worms from the Galapagos were much bigger and the plume was different, but the similarities were such that I knew they were related to the pogonophoran worms."

About a quarter million tightly bundled tentacles made up the plume of the giant worm, Jones found, giving it its fuzzy appearance. The tentacles were rich in blood vessels, accounting for the plume's brilliant red color.

At that point, Jones and other scientists had tacitly assumed that the giant worms probably were nourished by absorbing organic molecules through the tentacular surface of their plumes or across their body surfaces. This picture was consistent with the prevailing belief that the smaller pogonophoran worms received nourishment by absorbing organic molecules from the deep sea mud in which they lived.

But the news later arrived that two British and two Norwegian scientists had assayed the environment in which the small pogonophoran worms lived and could not find enough organic material in the mud to make it possible for the worms to survive, much less reproduce and grow.

"This was stunning news," Jones remembers. "Here we were working with much more massive worms without mouths or guts. How in the world were they getting the nourishment they needed?"

Shortly after, Jones came upon a tiny clue that would eventually lead to solution of the puzzle. While dissecting giant tube worm tissue from the trunk of the worm's body, he spotted some tiny yellow flecks. Suspecting that they might be grains of sulfur, he asked mineralogists at the Museum of Natural History to test them. His hunch proved correct. The flicks were crystals of pure sulfur--an extraordinarily unusual substance to find in an organism.

"I thought there had to be some relationship between the sulfide environment in which they lived and the sulfur crystals," Jones says. "Somehow, the giant tube worms must have worked out a mechanism to get rid of sulfide that came across the plume or body wall. Somehow, they had to be detoxifying the sulfide."

A few weeks later, Jones gave a lecture on the worms at Harvard university. He mentioned the crystals of sulfur to a Harvard graduate student, Colleen M. Cavanaugh, who immediately told him that she thought bacteria might be producing the sulfur.

Jones sent specimens of tissue to Cavanaugh and to Dr. Stephen L. Gardiner at the University of North Carolina. Using sophisticated microscopic techniques, both confirmed the presence of bacteria that metabolized sulfur compounds and obtained chemical energy from these compounds.

Another major piece of the puzzle fell into place when Dr. Horst Felbeck of the Scripps Institute of Oceanography in San Diego reported that in the worm's trunk region he had found several key enzymes identical to the ones found in plants which convert inorganic carbon to useful organic carbon in the form of carbohydrates.

"It now appeared," Jones relates, "that the bacteria living in the worms' bodies by the billions contained the enzymes needed to make adenosine triphosphate, an energy-carrying chemical crucial to the formation of carbohydrates."

The last critical link in the chain of discovery was forged by Dr. Greg H. Rau of the University of California at Los Angeles. His studies suggested that organic carbon--carbohydrates and proteins--manufactured by the bacteria was being incorporated into the muscle structure of the worms themselves, thus ruling out the need for the worms to obtain carbon from some other source in their environment.

"The great fun of this puzzle has been finding out the fantastically different ways life has of doing things," says Jones, who named the new worm Riftia pachyptila Jones (as is customary, the name of the describer of the species appears in the title). But although one mystery has been solved, many questions about the worms are yet to be resolved, including how the worms reproduce, how they get from one deep sea vent to another and where they originally evolved.

It seems possible that sulfur-consuming bacteria evolved about the same time as the worms, more than three billion years ago, with both organisms finding it advantageous to form a partnership. And, as a result of the Galapagos worms study, some scientists now believe that bacterial colonies may account for the way in which various other sea creatures obtain nourishment

Laundry Room Goes To The Dogs

Doing the laundry is for the dogs—so why not let your laundry room go to the dogs!

This tongue-in-cheek notion was adapted by C. Jean Mattingly, CKD, a devout dog-lover and Manager, Home Modernization with General Electric, to convert a bland basement corner into a cheery laundry and pet grooming center.

No remodelling was involved in the project—just a combination of appliances and pet accessories, arranged for function and multiple use.

Jean selected an off-white paint for the walls and ceiling to provide a crisp, yet soft look under the room's economical fluorescent lighting. To complement the existing sink, General Electric's popular natural shade of almond was chosen for the large capacity washer and dryer.

The laundry equipment was installed next to the sink for maximum convenience. On the other side, Jean placed a metal "grooming" table, attaching the adjustable arm with its sling for holding man's best friend in place during clipping and brushing. By its placement near the sink, the arm support can be swung over the sink for hanging drip-dry clothing, and the table can double as extra counter space for folding laundry.

Laundry and pet grooming supplies were attractively stored in glass cannisters on the shelves of a second-hand wicker etagere that was spray-painted in the off-white of the walls. A wicker screen also received a new coat of paint and was placed to camouflage the furnace area.

Various pet memorabilia and simply framed photographs of the canine-in-residence provided the finishing touches.

With a pleasant multipurpose center like this, neither pet nor owner will mind those inevitable clean-up chores!

cancer answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Dear Cancer Answers:

My sister had a mastectomy last year. She seems to have to go to the doctor for check-ups a lot more than she did before her surgery. Is that the normal procedure, or does it mean the doctor thinks her cancer is likely to come back?

Worried Sister

Dear Worried Sister:

A woman who has a breast removed (mastectomy) due to cancer should expect to have frequent and thorough medical examinations. The exact nature of these checkups may vary from physician to physician. However, the following schedule is frequently recommended for women whose cancer was confined to the breast and who have minimum risk of the disease spreading or recurring. Checkups are generally set up for every three months during the first two years, every six months for the next three years, and yearly thereafter.

At each visit the physicial examines the site of the patient's operation, the remaining breast, the lymph nodes above and below the collar bone and in the armpits, the lungs, liver and abdomen. Once a year a series of laboratory tests usually is done which include blood tests and a blood count, chest and skeletal x-rays, a Pap smear, mammography of the remaining breast and a pelvic and rectal examination.

Doctors may alter this follow-up schedule for women whose disease has spread beyond the original site by the time surgery was performed or who for some other reason are at higher risk for the disease recurring.

Your sister's frequent checkups do not necessarily mean that her doctor thinks her cancer may recur. However, if it does, the doctor is likely to find and treat it early.

Dear Cancer Answers:

My daughter is a sun-worshipper. She spends several hours a day at the public pool or in our backyard getting a tan.

I've told her that too much sun can cause cancer, but she says that only old people get that. All she cares about is how good her suntan looks.

What can I tell her that will convince her that so much sun is dangerous?

D.C.

Dear D.C.:

Many young people, like your daughter, are carefree and ignorant of the long-term changes brought about by regular, deep tanning. So, with each passing year, their skin becomes more leather-like. Brownish, flat "sun spots" may appear in time. And their skin loses its normal elasticity, becoming wrinkled as the cells begin to break down or function improperly.

These events set the stage for premalignant and malignant skin changes. In fact, sun is the leading cause of skin cancer.

If the threat of cancer seems too far off for your daughter to take seriously, try appealing to her vanity. Physicians are all too familiar with women patients who wonder what to do about premature "aging changes" on sun-exposed areas of the body, particularly the face.

Ironically, in their quest for beauty under the summer sun, these women eventually defeat their purpose. They begin to look old and wrinkled before their time.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I've read some articles in the papers and magazines lately about a new cancer treatment called monoclonal antibodies. Where is this treatment available?

J.R.L.

Dear Cancer Answers:

My mother is being treated for cancer. She has become so depressed that we're all worried more about her state of mind than her illness right now. Are there any specific causes for the depression that we might not be aware of? What can we do for her?

C.R.

Dear C.R.:

Many cancer patients are depressed at various times during their illness and treatment. Cancer specialists and psychiatrists have studied this problem. They believe depression is caused by a variety of circumstances in a cancer patient's life.

Some of these circumstances are physical problems brought about by the disease and treatment, such as pain or discomfort, difficulty sleeping, loss of appetite, loss of strength and energy. These physical problems often can be corrected or improved with medication or an adjustment in the treatment. As the patient feels better the depression will improve.

Other types of depression may have more emotional causes. The patient may feel that he or she has become a burden on the family because they're not able to contribute as much and are costing the family money and time. If the patient has lost a body part due to surgery to treat the disease, they may have a difficult time adjusting to their new body image. Most cancer patients feel they have lost contact with some of their friends as a result of the disease. All of these emotional complications can cause the patient to feel depressed.

Families who are aware of the special stresses cancer and its treatment place on patients can help. By keeping the normal channels of communication open and encouraging patients to be open and honest about their feelings, families can work to prevent the withdrawl and feelings of isolation that cause depression. Patients should be encouraged to tell their doctors about any physical problems they are having.

A booklet called Taking Time published by the National Cancer Institute offers other suggestions for ways families can help cancer patients cope with their disease and the alterations it causes in their lives. If you would like a free copy of Taking Time, call the Cancer Information Service. The toll-free number in Minnesota is 1-800-582-5262. In North Dakota and South Dakota it's 1-800-328-5188.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I own a wood burning stove. A friend just told me he read the stove's smoke could cause cancer. Is that true?

PaulS.

Dear Paul:

No direct link between smoke from wood burning stoves and cancer has been found. However wood smoke does contain many more pollutants than smoke from conventional oil or gas furnaces.

Recent studies have shown that wood stoves emit at least twice as much carbon dioxide, hydrocarbons and particulate pollutants into the air as conventional furnaces. These pollutants include some of the same cancer-causing or promoting compounds found in cigarette smoke.

With the growing popularity of wood stoves, experts—including the Environmental Protection Agency — believe wood stove emissions could present a major air pollution problem in the future. Consequently, the EPA is working with manufacturers to design and develop a wood stove that burns cleaner.

In the meantime, wood stove owners can minimize smoke pollution by making sure their stoves are clean and burning the wood as completely as possible. This means keeping air dampers open according to the manufacturers recommendations, and adding wood gradually rather than stacking in a lot at once. The more completely the wood is burned, the less pollutants go up the chimney.

Dear Cancer Answers:

The company I work for encourages its employees to have a physical every couple of years. This year when I had mine the doctor ordered a procto exam. He said at my age it's time to start checking for signs of cancer of the colon and rectum. How often should a person be checked for that?

G.A.H.

Dear G.A.H.:

Doctors who specialize in treating cancers of the colon and rectum recently recommended a check-up schedule. According to these specialists, people over 40 should have annual fecal occult blood tests. This is a laboratory test in which a small sample of bowel movements can be an early sign of cancer of the colon or rectum.

A proctoscopic examination every three years also was recommended for people over 40. A procto is an internal examination. The doctor inserts a lighted metal tube, called a proctoscope, into the anus to examine the rectum and lower portion of the colon.

The specialists stressed that people who are at higher risk for colorectal cancer should begin this check-up schedule at an earlier age. People who have had colon polyps, ulcerative colitis or who have a family history of cancer of the colon or rectum should ask their doctors about the best

Dear Cancer Answers:

My daughter had a mastectomy for breast cancer recently. The doctor said he would do an estrogen receptor test at the time of the surgery to help plan her treatment. What is this test and how will the doctor use it?

Mrs.C.N.

Dear Mrs. C.N.:

The estrogen receptor test gives doctors valuable information about the type of breast cancer a woman has. Almost half of all breast cancers seem to be dependent on various harmones to grow. The estrogen receptor test tells the doctor whether or not a breast tumor is hormone-dependent.

If the test shows a woman's tumor is hormone-dependent, she can be given additional treatment to change the hormone balance in her body. This treatment may involve removing the glands that produce female hormones—the ovaries. The patient also may be given drugs that block the production or action of various hormones.

Breast cancer specialists recommend that every woman who undergoes surgery for breast cancer have an estrogen receptor test done at the time of the surgery. If the woman needs additional treatment, the test information should be used in planning her treatment.

Dear Cancer Answers:

How many agents are known to cause cancer in people? It seems like the world is teeming with cancer causing substances with a new one suspected weekly. I feel so helpless and confused by all this! It seems like there is nothing you can eat, drink or do without exposing yourself to cancer! What should I do?

Fearful

Dear Fearful:

The fact is that there are only about three dozen agents which are proven human carcinogens. Many of these are not substances which the average person will encounter very often, or in very great quantities. For most of these agents, the real hazard is in industrial or occupational exposure. And the most common cancer causing agents of all are the ones we can control.

The next time you read an account of a new substance suspected of causing cancer, remember these things:

+ Most of the suspected carcinogens you hear about have never been (and may never be) linked to a single case of human cancer, but at least one in every four cancer deaths, over 100,000 a year, is caused by cigarette smoking. Lung cancer was a rare disease in 1900; today it is an epidemic. The role of other environmental carcinogens is dwarfed by the toll that cigarette smoking takes on human life.

Make distinctions when you read about suspected carcinogens. Ask yourself how much exposure you are likely to have. Also note whether the substance is considered a strong or weak carcinogen, if indicated.

+ Do not confuse occupational exposure with consumer or personal danger. Many people, for example, read that vinyl chloride can cause a rare liver cancer in workers exposed to the gas, and assume that the finished produce, polyvinyl chloride, used to wrap their meat, is carcinogenic as well. Not so.

+Don't let fear of cancer lead you to underestimate other dangers. When the study was announced which suggests that the antihypertensive drug reserpine might be carcinogenic, a number of people stopped taking their medication without consulting their doctors. The dangers of uncontrolled high blood pressure far outweigh the remote and minimal danger of cancer from taking reserpine.

+ Use moderation and common sense. The best thing any of us can do to promote good health is to lead a prudent life style. Smoking, overeating, drinking too much, and over-exposure to the sun are all dangerous to our total good health — not just cancer risks.

In the many years it will take to genuinely understand and prevent cancer, the best that any of us can do is to make intelligent, informed risk-benefit decisions about the things that we as individuals and as a society can control.

FLUNKING THE ACID TEST

It's the acid in your mouth that causes tooth decay. Once acid eats a hole in the enamel of a tooth, bacteria have a field day in making the hole bigger and destroying the tooth, unless treated in time.

Even prehistoric humans had this problem. But the problem became much worse when man began eating sweetened foods. Bacteria thrive on sugar. They multiply by the millions, producing acid in the process, the acid that eats away at unprotected teeth.

Laboratory tests on animals raised in a germ-free environment showed that they can eat unlimited amounts of sugar and never develop a cavity. But once exposed to the kind of bacteria that live in human mouths, the tooth decay becomes rampant. Even the Eskimos had few problems with tooth decay until they started eating sweetened foods.

Cutting down on sugar intake will help prevent decay, so will fluoride treatments, and regular dental checkups. They can help you flunk the acid test and save your teeth.

Our "Family Healthcare" is a major medical policy that provides high maximum benefit amounts for medical care and contains deductible and co-insurance features.

Briefly, here is how this plan works: once you have paid a selected deductible for any one covered illness or injury, you pay only 20% of the next $500 of expenses. American Family pays the remaining 80% of that $500 PLUS 100% of the expense up to the benefit limit you choose — $10,000, $20,000, $50,000, $100,000 or $250,000. Food Co-op Members Join Forces For Bulk Orders

by Dave Berg
Times Reporter

Webster defines a cooperative as "an enterprise or organization owned by and operated for the benefit of those using its services." As an adjective, it is defined as "marked by a willingness and ability to work with others."

Both definitions seem to fit the Good Earth Foods cooperative which meets south of Thief River Falls at Valhall every six weeks to distribute a health food order. Once the truck arrived last Wednesday, everyone seemed to spring into action and take part in the many activities.

Although the cooperative was originally started a year ago last May as an attempt to cope with the rising cost of groceries, current president Linda Van Wert insists they are not in competition with the stores. "We neither sell nor stock any food," she says. "Everything has to be paid for before the order is shipped." Vice-president Geraldean Mostrom chimed in, "Most of this stuff isn't even available in the stores."

A variety of strange names backs up the statement: Tamari sauce (described as "similar to soy sauce, only better"), garbonzo beans, carob chips (like chocolate — only "good for you"), and bee pollen.

Other products have familiar names, but look strangely different: Green spaghetti, dark brown whole wheat lasagna, sea salt, dried mixed vegetables, and dried fruit. "There are no preservatives in this stuff," says Mostrom.

The quantities are staggering. One order was 3,600 pounds. The last one was somewhat smaller at 2,400 pounds. Most foods are divided into five pound lots. That's the minimum any one family can take. Most are delivered in 25 or 50 pound packages. Spices are ordered by the pound, cheeses vary between two and 15 pound blocks, and liquids like corn oil and molasses come in five gallon cans. "If we don't have enough demand for something to make up a minimum order, we don't order it," says Van Wert.

Most of the food comes from a warehouse in Superior, WI. A newsletter put out by the warehouse gives recipes and tips, and lists items available, quantities and prices. Flour, yeast and lecithin are ordered from Natural Way Mills in Middle River. In addition, members may bring in excess garden produce to be shared.

The members hold a meeting three weeks prior to the distribution to place their orders. At this time, the individual orders are consolidated to decide what can and cannot be ordered. If there is not enough demand for an item to make a minimum order, some members may have to increase their order, or talk someone else into getting the item. Or, if orders for an item exceed the minimum quantity but remain under the next larger size, some members may have to divide their order with another or wait until next time.

Members pay $12 a year plus 15 per cent on their order to belong. The money is used to pay rent on the hall where they meet and store their equipment, and pay for shipping and supplies. The co-op purchased scales when it first started to accurately divide the goods received.

On Wednesday, the truck was 45 minutes late. The new driver appeared inexperienc-

VARIED TEXTURES and colors of foods are lined up along one wall of Valhall in five pound packages. Lasagna, nuts, rolled oats, beans, licorice, carob chips, flour and dried fruits are just some of the items ordered in bulk, and packaged by members of the Good Earth Foods cooperative. "Packaging is 80 per cent of the cost on some items in the store," said Marvin Merkins, coop member.

TRF Officials Attend Region Cities Meeting

Thief River Falls city clerk Gerald Wigness, assistant Roger Delap, and city council members Ambrose Wysoski, Clayton Restad, Bill Penning, Milan Borsheim and Dr. Donald Goodrich attended a program of information and discussion during the regional meeting of the League of Minnesota Cities (LMC) held Tuesday at East Grand Foks.

Duane Anderson, MPCA grants section, discussed the impact of federal cutbacks in wastewater treatment grants to cities. (Current information indicates that cities will lack federal assistance to complete development or modernization of treatment facilities.) Anderson indicated no changes or relaxation of state water quality standards for effluent are anticipated in the near future.

Decreased federal dollars, combined with the press of inflation, the freeze on 1982 local government aid by the State, along with high interest rates, and the State's imposition across — the — board of strict levy limits have caused considerable alarm among cities.

These anxieties and a desire to find alternative revenue sources and less costly means for delivering services have forced city officials to look for new methods to meet necessary expenses while eliminating or reducing some programs.

Following afternoon discussion of city management techniques for "doing more with less," meeting participants had an opportunity to compare user fees charged in neighboring cities. This comparison provided officials with ready information on service charges in their area and a means by which to begin consideration of altering such fees in light of restrictions on city revenues.

Tom Thelen, LMC field representative, provided an opening for discussion of methods available to cities to reduce expenditures, including increased use of

DURING A TOUR of the Elm Lake and Nereson wildlife management areas in eastern Marshall and Roseau counties Thursday, items of interest were discussed by officials of the Minnesota department of natural resources. At the Elm Lake area above, regional game manager Bob Farmes points out how water is pumped from Branch 200 of Judicial Ditch 11 into the impoundment area during dry years. The pump has a capacity of raising water level on 40 acres by a foot in 24 hours.

Water Impoundment Area Toured With DNR Thurs.

Water impoundment areas which serve double duty as wildlife areas and water storage for flood control were visited during a tour sponsored by the Minnesota department of natural resources Thursday.

Elm Lake wildlife management area, a 15,943-acre area in eastern Marshall county, and Nereson wildlife management area, a 9,730 acre area about four miles west of Wannaska in Roseau county, were visited during the tour. A noon stop for lunch was made between visits to the two units at the Thief Lake wildlife management area headquarters, where that area's wildlife and flood control capabilities were also explained.

Heading the tour were Merlyn Wesloh, regional administrator for the department of natural resources at Bemidji, and Bob Farmes, regional game manager for the DNR, also at the Bemidj headquarters. Commissioner Joseph Alexander, who had been scheduled to accompany the tour, was unable to make the trip to Thief River Falls by air due to heavy fog Thursday morning.

Fog most of the morning hampered visibility as the group stopped by the outlet structure on the Lost River pool — the western part of the Elm Lake wildlife management area north of Branch 200 of Judicial Ditch 11. Wesloh opened the informational session and Farmes gave a brief background on the area and answered questions from members of the touring group.

The Elm Lake area was approved by the department of natural resources' division of fish and wildlife in 1960 when Commissioner George Selke dedicated 15,000 acres of consolidated conservation area land to wildlife management, thereby creating the Elm Lake unit.

The Elm Lake, Eckvoll and Mudlac wildlife management areas combine with the Agassiz national wildlife refuge to form a continuous block of about 83,000 acres of wildlife habitat. The area is managed for waterfowl, deer, moose, ruffed and sharptail grouse and an abundance of non-game wildlife species.

"This management complex offers excellent opportunities for public hunting and trapping, wildlife viewing, environmental education and nature photography as well as providing a large natural area for people to explore and enjoy for its own sake," Farmes told the group.

Since creation of the area, much development has taken

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Debra Ann Mortrud And Craig A. Benson Wed

Debra Ann Mortrud of this city and Craig Allen Benson of Kenyon exchanged marriage vows recently at a four-o'clock, double-ring ceremony at Our Saviour's Lutheran church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Mortrud, Thief River Falls. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Benson of Kenyon.

Rev. Eugene Enderlein officiated at the ceremony. Randy Moe, a friend of the couple, was the organist and accompanied Julie McCarlson, a sister of the groom, as she sang, "God, A Woman and A Man." Barbara Elmquist sang "Wedding Song," and Benita Wold, sang "The Lord's Prayer." Both are friends of the couple. The bride and groom, kneeling at the altar, sang, "Wedding Prayer."

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a gown of white organza with Chantilly lace trimmed with iridescents and pearls adorning the mandrin collar, fitted bodice and sheer yoke. Lace also enhanced the shadow styled bishop sleeves and edged the bouffant skirt that flowed into a chapel-length train. Her walking length veil was held by a derby hat with lace trim. Cliff Reierson and Jeanette Grabanski were married Sept. 29, 1956 at the Nazareth Lutheran church at Holt with Rev. James Peterson officiating. The cake was iced in white and decorated with yellow roses, silver accents, iridescence separators and bells with an anniversary couple, doves and a 25th anniversary emblem on the upper tier. It was cut and served by Mrs. Phyllis Martin of Shoreview and Mrs. Audrey Rude of Wadena. Mrs. Rose Marie Eichorn of Hibbing and Mrs. Maxine Reierson of Holt poured the coffee. Cathy Erickson sang a corresponding novelty song to the tune of "Little Brown Church in the Vale." An appropriate poem, "Just for 25 Years," was read by Gerri Nelson.

MCC Teachers OK Proposal For Mediation

Teachers of the Marshall County Central Education association (MCCEA) in Newfolden voted to accept the school board's request to go to mediation, even though the required mediation period expired the end of July.

"We teachers will do everything possible — short of accepting a below average salary settlement — to avoid a strike situation in reaching contract agreement," states Carol Peterson, chief negotiator for the teachers.

Opposing sides have been at a stand still since September 8 when the board offered an average increase of $3,500 per teacher over two years (salary, fringes, and extra-curricular) and the MCCEA proposed a $6,500 increase per teacher.

Under the 1980-81 contract the salary for a beginning teacher in Newfolden was $10,750 compared to the state 1980-81 average of $11,200. Under the board's last proposal the beginning teacher's salary would be about $12,000 the first year, while the MCCEA's proposed beginning salary would be about $13,400.

Kramer-Brown Uniserv (consisting of 24 area shcools) is the lowest in salary in the state", continues Mrs. Peterson, and Newfolden ranks 17th out of those 24 schools in salary. We feel we have an above average school system in Newfolden. Certainly, then, we should not expect to pay teachers below average salaries.

STAYING IN TOUCH!

Congressman
Arlan Stangeland

Common sense and cautious optimism are often rare commodities in the nation's Capitol. In the heat of partisan debate, both of those items are sometimes in short supply.

But I was able to stock up on both of those items during Congress' three-week summer recess in August. Holding "office hour" sessions in 21 cities, I had an opportunity to listen closely to the people of the Seventh District.

In every town, from Hallock to Morris, from Moorhead to Brainerd, folks expressed a cautious optimism about the nation's economy and the new directions America is taking.

It is natural that people would be happy about the tax cuts. And most of the farmers and small businessmen were pleased with the massive reductions in frustrating and unnecessary Federal regulations.

Most people were also supportive of efforts to restrain Federal spending. They said that if the cuts were across-the-board and fair, they were willing to do their part to help bring the budget under control.

There was a lot of concern about the $30 billion increase in defense spending. Even though most people want us to spend every dollar necessary for the nation's security, they were pleased when I told them about my meeting with budget director Dave Stockman, who told me that once the cuts in social programs were made this summer, he was going to go after reductions in the defense budget to assure a balanced budget by 1984.

Everyone was concerned about the Social Security program. I assured them that when Congress did deal with social security later this month, I would not vote for any changes which would: 1) significantly change the benefits structure of current retired recipients; 2) damage the long-term financial strength of the system; 3) impose such new payroll taxes that would threaten the economy.

The most widespread concern throughout the District was about current high interest rates. The high cost of borrowing money is having a tremendously negative effect upon the District.

The Federal Reserve's tight monetary policy is not lowering inflation, it is contributing to it. In July, we had our first return to double-digit inflation, and most of that increase was caused by the high cost of homes and cars. Until mortgage costs and interest rates come down, those items will keep inflation at high levels.

The tight monetary policy is keeping inflation high in another important way, by boosting the cost of servicing the National Debt. Current high interest rates have already added $10 billion to the Federal deficit.

It isn't fair to ask consumers, farmers and small businessmen to pay such artificially high interest rates when the tight monetary policy isn't holding down inflation any more. I wrote to President Reagan and Federal Reserve Board chairman Paul Volcker to ask them to relax the punitive monetary policy.

I think that they will do this, because the farm sector and the small business community are the key factors of the recovery program. Without a strong agricultural sector, food prices will sky-rocket and inflation will resume its upward spiral. And small businesses, not big industries, are the groups which will create most of the 13 million new jobs the tax cuts are expected to produce. Interest rates must be lowered if inflation is to be reduced and jobs are to be created.

All across the District, I heard people talking about the President's economic program. They were saying that although Mr. Reagan's program really doesn't take effect until October 1, they were already feeling a mood of recovery. Most of that is probably psychological, but when the tax bite in every paycheck gets smaller next month, the recovery will really begin . . . if we can lower interest rates.

So far, the people in our District are not impatient about the state of the economy. They realize that the problems facing our economy were created over the last 20 years and they will not be solved overnight.

With common sense and cautious optimism, they believe that we are on the right track.

Agreement Saves Business $225 Million

Gov. Al Quie reported that an agreement has been signed with the U.S. department of labor, eliminating the possibility of $225 million in federal unemployment tax increases for Minnesota's 93,000 private employers.

Quie said he had been informed by U.S. secretary of labor Raymond Donovan in late August that Minnesota may not have been in conformity with federal unemployment laws. The possible loss to Minnesota employers, had this been true, would have been $225 million.

He explained that under federal unemployment law, Minnesota employers pay federal taxes equal to 3.4 per cent of the first $6,000 of each employee's wage. However, if the state is in compliance with the federal unemployment law, the employer receives a tax credit for 2.7 per cent, making the actural amount of federal unemployment taxes paid .7 per cent. Without the agreement, Minnesota employers would not have received the federal tax credit.

The agreement placed Minnesota in compliance with 1981 federal unemployment laws, and a federal hearing on this matter, was avoided, according to Quie.

The governor stressed that the agreement does not mean any reduction in regular unemployment benefits for employees, and said that he will propose legislation in the next legislative session incorporating the provisions of the agreement.

Children Are Influenced By Home Violence

by Kathleen Ann Kolden

The following information is taken from the book "Battered Wives" by Del Martin:

"If the American-family dream is a nightmare for spouses involved in domestic violence, it is even more so for their children. They suffer the consequences of their parents' battles simply because they exist."

What battering occurs in a family is is quite common for other forms of violence to exist also. It is not unusual for the battered woman, in her desperation and frustration, to strike out at the children, "scapegoating them as she has been scapegoated by a violent husband."

In a study by J.J. Gaylord, 37 per cent of 100 women surveyed admitted to taking their own frustrations out on their children and 54 per cent claimed their husbands committed acts of violence against their children.

Children react with shock, guilt and fear from watching physical violence between their parents. A couple of years ago while watching a role play I relived a childhood experience. The actors were so realistic. Fear gripped me. I involuntarily threw my hands over my face, shaking, sobbing and — looking for a place to hide — I fled from the scene. I was 31 years old but feeling the emotional trauma a child would suffer.

Richard Gelles, author of "The Violent Home," did research that revealed people who as children had observed physical violence between their parents were more likely to follow that example with their own spouses than those who never saw their parents fight. "Not only does the family expose individuals to violence and techniques of violence," Gelles concludes, "the family teaches approval for the use of violence." My own family experience supports the Gelles findings.

Erin Pizzey, author of "Scream Quietly or the Neighbors Will Hear", says, "A man who batters is a child who was battered that nobody helped. If we look at the history of these men, they are either beaten children or actually watched it. . . so the violence goes from one generation to the next. It becomes the norm."

Most of my life I carried around a sadness inside of me that I didn't understand. I was shy, afraid of people and had very low self-esteem. With the sadness I carried a load of guilt. Where did it come from?

Only in the last three years since I became interested and active in the battered women's movement have I started to make positive, healthy changes in my life. My own consciousness raising, sharing my experiences with others in many different ways, and counseling have all been beneficial in bringing about these changes. I can overcome and make changes in my life but the emotional scars will always be there.

"We must stop protecting our myths and lies, and stop teaching our children to strike out blindly with their fists. If there is battering to be done let it be directed against that sacred front door to the family home," states Del Martin.

Team Formed To Study MN. Transit Issues

A decision team will be formed to study Minnesota's transit issues, according to commissioner Richard P. Braun, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

Plans for the team were announced at the eighth annual transit meeting, sponsored by Mn-DOT, recently in Alexandria.

Representing transit providers and Mn-DOT, the team will develop information on local transit operations and goals to assist in analyzing the role of transit in Minnesota's transportation system, Braun said. An important issue for local transit systems is a contingency strategy for the phasing out of federal transit operating assistance.

Sherri Y. Alston, Mn-DOT's assistant commissioner for public transportation, said Congress already has agreed to less federal funds for operating assistance and Minnesota's economy does not make the state the logical candidate to bridge the gap from federal cutbacks.

"It is our job to educate the public on the importance and worth of public transportation," Alston said. "For many senior citizens and handicapped Minnesotans, the local bus is the only means of transportation."

She suggested that a way to begin the education process is to develop a coordinated strategy involving transit aid recipients, the governor, legislators, Mn-DOT and, most importantly, the users. She said Mn-DOT plans to join with transit providers to begin the education process.

More than 50 of Minnesota's 87 counties, representing about 85 per cent of the state's population, have some form of state subsidized public transportation within their borders. Public transportation includes bus services, shared-ride taxis and dial-a-ride.

"If you look at the transportation being provided by private carriers, this number is even larger," Alston said. "Mn-DOT believes the state has a role in assisting public transportation systems, but it is apparent that local units of government are going to have to pick up more of the cost of transit if it is to continue at its present level."

USDA Releases Australia Beef To US Markets

Based on laboratory test results and ongoing investigations by U.S. and Australian authorities, the U.S. department of agriculture has released into commerce most of the Australian beef impounded since August 25.

Only meat from the state of Victoria, which has 51 of Australia's 200 plants certified to export to the United States, will remain impounded. Victoria product represents about 19 per cent of the Australian beef presently in the United States.

Beef from Victoria will continue to be impounded because test results show the presence of horse meat in boneless beef shipments from plants in that state. Jason Meats — Establishment No. 622 — located in Abbotsford, Victoria, has been removed from a list of approved exporters to the United States because USDA confirmed horse meat September 2 in a shipment from that plant. The shipment was in a processing facility in Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Australian minister of primary industry Peter Nixon has announced the discontinuation of operations at all independent boning plants in Victoria for at least 30 days to facilitate the investigation there.

State Hog And Pig Inventory Down By 17%

Producers in Minnesota reported 4.25 million hogs and pigs on hand September 1, 1981, 17 per cent below a year ago and 2 per cent below June 1, 1981. This is the lowest September 1 inventory since 1987, as reported by the Minnesota agricultural statistics service.

Breeding stock, accounting for 14 per cent of the inventory, totaled 590,000 head, down 20 per cent from a year earlier. Market hogs at 3.7 million head were down 16 per cent from last year and 1 per cent below last quarter. The 14 quarterly state inventory of 52.2 million head is down 5 per cent from last year. These 14 states account for approximately 86 per cent of the total U.S. hog and pig inventory.

Minnesota's June-August pig crop is estimated at 1.90 million head, 17 per cent below a year ago and 11 per cent below last quarter. There were 260,000 sows farrowed with an average of 7.30 pigs per litter compared with 300,000 sows and 7.60 pigs per litter a year earlier. Producers in the 14 quarterly states reported a 1 per cent decrease in the pig crop from last year. Litter size averaged 7.37 compared with 7.18 a year earlier for the 14 states.

Hog producers in Minnesota intend to farrow 230,000 sows during September-November, down 18 per cent from a year earlier; and 220,000 sows during December-February, down 12 per cent. Intentions in the 14 quarterly states are down 6 per cent and 1 per cent for the next two quarters.

Nutrition Is Important To Young And Old

Aristotle believed that a man reaches the perfect pinnacle of his life, his golden mean, at 49 — a pretty ripe old age in those days. At 49, Aristotle reasoned, a man attains the apex of his spiritual and intellectual development.

Of course, he probably can't do nearly the number of push-ups he could have at 19, reports Dr. Laurence M. Hursh, consultant to the national dairy council.

Most of us become less physically active as we grow older. Consequently, our energy needs drop. In fact, a man in his 70s may consume 40 per cent fewer calories that he did in his 20s — and yet not lose any weight. That's because he's not burining off those calories the way he did 50 years before.

Though caloric needs decrease as we grow older, our need for balanced nutrition doesn't. Like his teenage counterpart, the octogenarian must eat a variety of foods to get the protein, carbohydrate, fat, vitamins and minerals required for optimal health.

However, the elderly do have a few nutrition concerns of their own. One is getting enough fiber — or roughage — in their diet to counter constipation, a rather common problem among older persons. Good sources of fiber are fresh fruits, fresh vegetables, whole grain cereals and whole grain breads. Drinking enough fluids — at least four to eight glasses daily — and exercising regularly are also important factors in relieving constipation.

Another concern as we grow older is a disease called osteoporosis. Resulting in thin, brittle bones that break easily and heal slowly, osteoporosis has been linked with calcium deficiency. That's why it's important for older persons to include two daily servings from the milk group in their diet.

Protein deficiency is also fairly common among senior citizens. One reason is that complete protein sources often take the form of meat. And, for some of us, chewing meat can be quite a task. Such persons need to prepare meat in more palatable ways — in stews or soups, for instance. Also, keep in mind the "soft" sources of complete protein — eggs, milk and cheese — as occasional meat substitutes.

You don't have to be a dietitian to realize the lifelong importance of balanced nutrition. Likewise, you don't have to be a Greek philosopher to know that, if you're in good health, the prime of your life is the time of your life — right here and now.

D. Seaverson Visits Ports In Japan

Navy Seaman Dennis L. Seaverson, son of Pearcy L. and Margerat A. Seaverson, Thief River Falls, recently visited three Japanese ports during an 18-day goodwill tour.

Seaverson is a member of the staff of Commander 7th Fleet, operating from Yokosuka, Japan and embarked aboard the amphibious command ship USS Blue Ridge.

As the flagship for the Commander 7th Fleet, the Blue Ridge conducted port visits in Beppu, Kagoshima and Sasebo, and operated in Japanese waters with the Japanese Maritime Self Defense Force destroyer JDS Shirane. The cruise was designed to promote good will between U.S. sailors and their Japanese counterparts through personnel exchanges and mutual training.

Port visits offered staff members the opportunity to visit many sights on the southern island of Kyushu.

Seaverson joined the Navy in May 1978.

Time is running out for approximately 900,000 veterans to use their GI Bill educational benefits, says the Veterans Administration. Current law permits a veteran to use education benefits within 10 years following discharge, or by December 31, 1989, whichever is earlier.

TRF Officials Attend Region Cities Meet

propane, reduction in thermostat settings, use of sodium street lights, and insulation improvements as well as joint purchasing and street improvement projects.

The evening portion of the meeting featured a question and answer period in which League staff fielded inquiries on a variety of issues. Concerns raised included the lack of support of local law enforcement personnel by the courts in enforcing city ordinances, further cuts in local government aids and border city competition, especially the growing shift in grain shipments away from Minnesota ports.

Over 100 officials from 23 cities attended.

LMC President Vaughn Thorfinnson, mayor of Red Lake Falls, addressed the group and participated in the evening portion of the meeting.

LMC General Counsel Stan Peskar also spoke to officials regarding financial condition of Minnesota cities, noting the restrictions placed on the ability of local government to obtain revenue for basic services. Peskar suggested the need for local officials to make their problems known to state legislators. Future legislative policies toward cities must be adjusted, argued Peskar, to provide local government options to encourage economic development and manage local revenue sources.

Also a part of the evening program was a presentation by Pat Lorentz, Minnesota OSHA, regarding rule-making anticipated on fire department clothing and training standards. Lorentz outlined provisions of the federal OSHA requirements (which apply only to private industry) and noted that notice of rule-making will appear in the September 21 edition of the state register and explained the new rule will apply to all public fire departments.

The opportunity for cities to respond to the proposed standards is relatively brief. If sufficient numbers present serious concerns about imposition of these work clothing requirements for fire departments, written notice of those concerns must be forwarded to the Minnesota Department of Labor and Industry within 10 days following the September 21 date. Hearings would then be scheduled to bear those (and other) concerns.

League regional meetings provide an opportunity for local officials to exchange views on issues confronting cities and to discuss League legislative policies in preparation for the next legislative session.

Food Co-Op Members Use Bulk Buying

ed, and had trouble backing up to the door. When it became apparent that he wasn't going to get any closer, the truck was opened and members began the job of unloading. While some members carried the heavy packages in, others compared what was coming off the truck with what was on the order sheets.

Inside the hall, other members began opening the packages, and again, contents were checked against invoices. If an item was going to one member, weight was checked and it was marked with a number assigned to that person.

Bulk items were opened, and members working in teams of two or three began weighing them into five pound packages. Paper sacks and plastic bread wrappers were used as containers for most of the items. While one member held the sack open another would begin filling it from the bulk container using scoops cut from plastic jugs. More experienced members sometimes offered advice.

"When you're up to the 'B' in bread, you're just about there," Audrey Donarski told daughter Susan and Sharon Bueno, who were bagging farina. "Oops, take a little out . . . too much, put a little back in," they coached each other as they worked. Occasionally holes were found in the bread bags and a second had to be added.

"This stuff is so good," said a woman bagging dried fruit, "my kids eat it instead of candy." "It's got pears and apples and all kinds of stuff. Here, try some," volunteered another. The room was not silent as the members worked. The people laughed and talked about recipes, children, gardens, and of course, prices.

What do you do with a pound of pepper? Marvin Mehrkens says he makes a lot of sausage. "I figure if I use 40 per cent of it I can throw the rest of it away and come out even, compared to buying it in those little cans," he says.

Five pounds of cheese? "I freeze it," says one lady. Five gallons of molasses? "My family divides it up," says one man. "With 14 kids, it all goes," laughs Audrey Donarski.

When the individual items have been bagged into five pound packages, the bags are marked with the contents and a number assigned to the person placing the order. The packages are then lined up along the back wall of the building. When everything has been packaged, it is ready for distribution.

Using the order forms, a box is started for each member. Each item ordered by the member is found and placed in the box. Everything is checked by more than one person.

All members must help. Each person's time is recorded. Some help with the bookkeeping, others with the manual work. The packaging is not done without some spillage, and the hall must be cleaned up before the day is done. Starting at about 3 p.m., the whole process is usually completed by 6:30.

At one time, the club had 80 members, but like many organizations in the area, a lot of members have moved away. "We've got 38 members right now," says Van Wert, "but we're always looking for more."

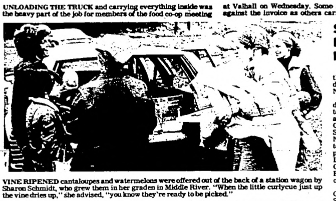
UNLOADING THE TRUCK and carrying everything inside was the heavy part of the job for members of the food co-op meeting at Valhall on Wednesday. Some members checked the items against the invoice as others carried them inside.



VINE RIPENED cantaloupes and watermelons were offered out of the back of a station wagon by Sharon Schmidt, who grew them in her graden in Middle River. "When the little curlycue just up the vine dries up," she advised, "you know they're ready to be picked."

Drills Stressed For Safety In Case Of Fire

Fire safety in the home will be stressed during 1981 fire prevention week October 4-10 in Minnestoa, according to public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

EDITH (Exit Drill In The Home) trains families to escape from home fires. The plan will be tested at 7 p.m. October 7, in a number of Minnesota communities. State fire marshal Wes Werner urges families to review home fire safety rules, particularly in advance of winter months when wood-burning stoves and other heating devices are used.

Home fire safety rules are illustrated in a series of public service announcements produced by the department of public safety (DPS) office of public information. The PSAs emphasize home fire drills and the importance of smoke detectors. They will be used to promote year-round fire safety, Werner said.

Home fires in Minnesota again took a heavy toll during 1980. Sixty-eight state residepts lost their lives in one and two-family dwelling fires. Another 19 died in apartment fires. Comparable figures for 1979 were 46 and 10. The overall fire death toll in 1980 was 122, an increase of three over 1979.

Planning is a key part of the EDITH program. Werner suggests the following steps:

+ Sit down with your family and make a plan for emergency fire escape.

+ Choose a place outdoors for everyone to meet for roll call, locate a "call box" or neighbor's telephone for notifying the fire department.

+ Once you have evacuated, do not re-enter the building.

+ Practice the escape.

+ Make sure children can operate the windows, descend a ladder or lower themselves to the ground.

+ Have children practice saying the fire department number, the family name, street adress and town. Post the fire department number on or near your phone.

Heart Ass'n. Exceeds Goal Of $2,025,000

American Heart Association, Minnesota Affiliate, Inc., surpassed its 1981 campaign goal of $2,025,000 according to Imogene F. (Jean) Teasley, Edina, 1981 chairman of the board of directors.

"The $2,201,615 raised represents a 16.2 per cent increase from 1980," Teasley said. "The willingness and dedicated effort of the volunteers statewide produced a double digit increase for the second consecutive year for the February Heart Month campaign," she added.

The funds will enable the Minnesota affiliate to increase its support for heart research projects, community programs and professional and public education programs.

Efforts continue year-round to reduce heart disease, highlighted in February with the door-to-door state-wide campaign.

Although deaths due to heart disease have declined throughout the United States, heart disease is still the nation's number one health problem, affecting more than 41 million Americans and contributing to the death of over 17,000 Minnesotans.

American Heart association, Minnesota affiliate, Inc., is 9 state-wide health agency dedicated to the reduction of premature death and disability caused by heart and blood vessel disease.

Italy Halts U.S. Cattle, Sheep Imports

Italy has closed its import doors to U.S. ccattle and sheep because of bluetongue—a viral disease that affects some U.S. livestock. In taking the action, Italy becomes the last member country of the European common market to halt such imports.

During 1979, the U.S. exported $40 million worth of cattle worldwide. Of this figure, $2.5 million was exported to EEC members, including nearly $1.5 million to Italy. By 1980, the EEC restrictions had cut U.S. exports to nearly $33,000 to Italy.

The embargo is based on the fact that some U.S. cattle are infected with bluetongue, a virus disease which affects cattle, sheep, goats and other ruminants. The disease is spread by small biting gnats — sometimes called sand flies, biting midges or "no-see-ums."

USDA and the U.S. state department are working to protest the EEC requirements and re-establish trade with Europe.

Bluetongue is most prevalent in the southern and southwestern United States. A recent USDA survey showed most northern and northeastern cattle are nearly free of the disease.

Crime Rises 55 Per Cent During 10-Year Period

Attorney General William French Smith announced Thursday that the FBI's crime index of reported serious crimes increased nine per cent in 1980 over 1979. The crime index was 18 per cent higher in 1980 than in 1976 and 55 per cent higher than in 1971.

The United States population increased at a slower rate during these same years — two per cent since 1979, five per cent since 1976, and nine per cent since 1971. The national crime rate, which relates the crime volume to population, increased seven per cent in 1980 over 1979, 12 per cent over 1976, and 42 per cent over 1971.

According to the FBI uniform crime reports final 1980 statistics released by Director William H. Webster, over 13 million crime index offenses were reported by more than 15,000 law enforcement agencies nationwide. Geographically, the southern states, the most populous region, accounted for the largest volume of crime index offenses in 1980 — 31 per cent. The north central and western states recorded 24 per cent each and the northeastern states, 21 per cent.

Collectively, the violent crimes of murder, forcible rape, robbery, and aggravated assault increased 11 per cent in volume during 1980 and represented 10 per cent of the total crime index offenses. The property crimes of burglary, larceny-theft, and motor vehicle theft rose by nine per cent. Not included in this figure is arson. Adequate 1979 data were not available to establish trends for this offense.

When considered individually, all index offenses displayed increases. Murder rose seven per cent; forcible rape, eight per cent; robbery, 18 per cent; and aggravated assault, seven per cent. Burglary was up 14 per cent; larceny-theft, eight per cent; and motor vehicle theft, two per cent.

Since 1976, the volume of violent crimes increased by 33 per cent and property crimes by 16 per cent. Since 1971, violent crimes have jumped 60 per cent and property crimes 54 per cent.

The violent crime rate per 100,000 inhabitants was up eight per cent over the 1979 experience, 26 per cent over 1976, and 47 per cent over 1971. The property crime rate per 100,000 inhabitants rose seven per cent over 1979, 11 per cent over 1976, and 41 per cent over 1971. In 1980, there were 5,900 index offenses for every 100,000 persons in the United States.

In the metropolitan areas, there were 6,758 index offenses per 100,000 people, a seven per cent increase over 1979. The rural counties reported a rate of 2,290 offenses, a six per cent rise; and cities outside metropolitan areas recorded a rate of 5,396 offenses, a nine per cent increase.

Law enforcement agencies were successful in clearing 19 per cent of the index crimes reported during 1980. The clearance rate for violent crimes was 44 per cent; for property crimes, 16 per cent.

Clearance rates for individual crimes were murder, 72 per cent; forcible rape, 49 per cent; robbery, 24 per cent; aggravated assault, 59 per cent; burglary, 14 per cent; larceny-theft, 18 per cent; and motor vehicle theft, 14 per cent. Twenty-four per cent of the crime index clearances (excluding arson), 11 per cent of the violent crime clearances, and 28 per cent of those for property crimes involved solely persons under 18 years of age.

During the year, there were an estimated 10.4 million arrests for all criminal infractions other than traffic violations. Arrests by law enforcement for these crimes increased two per cent between 1979 and 1980; while for the five-year period from 1976 to 1980, arrests for all offenses except traffic violations increased five per cent. Nationally, the arrest rate per 100,000 inhabitants was 4,653; for cities over 250,000 in population, the rate was 6,439; for suburban areas, 3,838; and for the rural counties, 3,242.

The statistics for youthful arrestees showed that persons under 25 years of age comprised 70 per cent of the persons arrested for crime index offenses, 57 per cent of those arrested for violent crimes, and 73 per cent of those arrested for property crimes. Between 1979 and 1980, arrests of persons under 18 years of age decreased six per cent, while arrests of persons 18 years of age and over rose four per cent. In this same time period, male arrests outnumbered those of females by five to one, with arrests of males up one per cent and those of females up two per cent.

The estimated 23,044 murders represented approximately two per cent of the violent crimes during 1980. The volume of murders increased in all regions and areas of the United States. Nationally, an average of 10 of every 100,000 inhabitants were murder victims during the year. Firearms were the dominant weapons used in the commission of reported murders. Handguns were involved in 50 per cent of reported murders, shotguns in seven per cent, and rifles in five per cent.

Males between the ages of 20 through 29 composed the largest group of murder victims. Relatives or acquaintances of victims committed 51 per cent of all reported murders. Forty-five per cent of the murders resulted from arguments, and another 18 per cent occurred as a result of felonious activities. The 18 to 24-year age group accounted for 35 per cent of the total 1980 murder arrests.

Forcible rapes during the year (82,088) increased 45 per cent over 1976 and constituted six per cent of the violent crimes. An estimated 71 of every 100,000 females in this country were reported rape victims. Regionally, the highest forcible rape rate was in the west with 101 reported victims per 100,000 females. Rapes by force made up 77 per cent of the total, and attempts or assaults to rape accounted for the remainder. Males under the age of 25 comprised 54 per cent of the forcible rape arrestees in 1980, with 29 per cent of the arrestees in the 18 to 22-year age group.

The volume of robbery offenses increased 31 per cent over the past five years, and in 1980 the estimated 548,809 robberies totaled four per cent of the index crimes. Cities over 250,000 in population and the suburban areas both reported 19 per cent rises in robbery offenses. The robbery rate in 1980 was 244 for every 100,000 inhabitants, up 15 per cent from the 1979 rate.

Regionally, robberies occurred most frequently in the northeastern states, where the rate was 363 per 100,000 inhabitants. In 1980, the value of property stolen in robberies was an estimated $333 million, with an average loss of $607 per incident. Over half of the robberies reported occurred on the streets and highways, with an average loss of $399.

Bank robberies, showing an increase of five per cent over the previous year, registered the highest average loss, $2,784. Forty per cent of all robberies were committed with firearms, while strong-arm tactics (hands, fists, feet, etc.) were used in 38 per cent. Arrests for robberies disclosed that 73 per cent of the persons arrested were under 25 years of age.

Aggravated assaults accounted for 50 per cent of crimes of violence during 1980. The estimated 654,957 offenses in 1980 recorded a 33 per cent increase over 1976. Rises were reported in the 1980 volumes of aggravated assaults for each geographic region of the country.

For every 100,000 people in the United States there were 291 aggravated assaults. For metropolitan areas, the rate was 328; for cities outside the metropolitan areas, 262; and for rural counties, 137. Only 24 per cent of these assaults were committed with firearms; 22 per cent with knives or cutting instruments; 28 per cent with blunt objects or other dangerous weapons; and 27 per cent with personal weapons, such as hands, fists, feet, etc. Persons 21 years of age and over accounted for 70 per cent of the 1980 aggravated assault arrests.

The nearly four million burglaries occurring in the United States in 1980 represented 31 per cent of the property crimes and 28 per cent of the total crime index. Burglary offenses rose 22 per cent over the 1976 volume, with increases experienced in all regions and areas. The 1,668 burglaries per 100,000 inhabitants represented an 11 per cent increase over the 1979 rate and a 16 per cent rise over the 1976 rate.

Residential property was the target in 67 per cent of the reported burglaries. Seventy-three per cent of all burglaries involved forcible entry. This offense represented a financial loss estimated at $3.3 billion, or an average of $882 per burglary. From 1979 to 1980, arrests for this offense rose two per cent. Nationally, persons under 25 years of age accounted for 81 per cent of all arrests for burglary, and 45 per cent of all arrested for this crime were under the age of 18.

Totaling more than seven million, larceny-thefts accounted for 53 per cent of all reported index crimes and per cent of property crimes. Volume increases ranged from 10 per cent in the southern states to five per cent in the northeastern states. The 1980 larceny-theft rate was 3,156 per 100,000 people nationally, an increase of six per cent from 1979. The average value of property stolen was $307, up from $256 in 1979. The total loss to victims was $2.2 billion.

Miscellaneous thefts from buildings and thefts from motor vehicles resulted in average losses of $483 and $341, respectively. Fifty-five per cent of the arrests in this category were of persons under 21 years of age; 37 per cent of the arrestees were under the age of 18. Females comprised 29 per cent of all larceny-theft arrestees. More women were arrested for this offense than for any other during 1980.

For 1980, more than one million motor vehicle thefts were reported in the United States. Thirty per cent took place in the northeastern states, 25 per cent in the southern states, 23 per cent in the western states, and 22 per cent in the north central states. Overall, there were 495 motor vehicle thefts per 100,000 inhabitants.

An estimated one of every 143 registered motor vehicles was stolen in the nation during 1980. The average value of the vehicles was $2,879, for an estimated total national loss of $3.2 billion. Law enforcement agencies cleared 14 per cent of the motor vehicle thefts reported in their locales. Sixty-five per cent of all persons arrested for this offense were under age 21, and those under 18 accounted for 45 per cent of the total.

In 1980, there were 128,752 reported arsons. Residential property was the target in 58 per cent of structural arsons during 1980, while motor vehicles comprised 92 per cent of all mobile property targeted. Property damage due to reported arsons was $891 million; the average loss per incident was $7,745. Agencies reported clearances for 16 per cent of all arsons in 1980. Forty-four per cent of all persons arrested for this offense were under 18, and 70 per cent were under 25 years of age.

During 1980, there were 438,442 full-time law enforcement officers employed by reporting agencies. The national rate was 2.1 officers per 1,000 inhabitants. Including full-time civilians, the total reported force was 559,916 for a rate of 2.7 per 1,000 people.

Eighty-two per cent of the 57,847 reported assaults on law enforcement officers during the year were committed with personal weapons. Approximately one-half of the assaults occurred between 8 p.m. and 2 a.m.

In 1980, 104 local, county, state and federal law enforcement officers were killed in the line of duty. Firearms were used in 91 per cent of the killings. The officers' assailants ranged in age from 15 to 71, and 73 per cent had records of prior arrests. Law enforcement agencies cleared 91 per cent of the slayings.

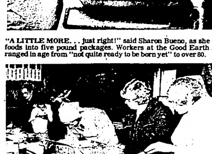
EVEN THE BOOKKEEPING is shared by members of the Good Earth Foods co-op. Individual orders, invoices and time spent working all have to be kept track of and cross-checked.

"A LITTLE MORE. . . just right!" said Sharon Bueno, as she and Susan Donarski weighed bulk foods into five pound packages. Workers at the Good Earth Foods co-op distribution meeting ranged in age from "not quite ready to be born yet" to over 80.



BULK CHEESES were removed from boxes and marked with the weight and the number of the member who ordered them. Everything was checked and rechecked against the order forms by co-op members.

Post School Program At NCC Thursday

A post high school planning program for all high school seniors and their parents will be conducted at Northland community college this Thursday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 6 to 8 p.m.

Students and parents can obtain information in the educational programs of 72 post-secondary schools and military service branches. Representatives from community colleges, public and private universities and colleges, vocational schools, trade schools, and the military will be present.

No formal sessions will be conducted; rather, the students and parents will be free to move about the area, spending as much time as they wish with the individual representatives.

According to the sponsors, the Minnesota association of secondary school counselors and college admissions officers, this will be the best single opportunity for students and parents to get needed information from the many sources present at this program. Modelled after the national college fair, conducted annually in Minneapolis, this program has the support of the high schools in the area and has replaced many of the college days-nights which were formerly conducted at local high schools.

High school counselors have more specific information, and students are urged to contact them.

U of M Grant Used To Help Engineering

A 400,000 grant to the Institute of Technology, University of Minnesota, has been awarded by Exxon Corp. to help attract engineering students and junior faculty members to advanced degrees and teaching careers.

U of M is one of 66 colleges and universities to share $15 million in grants from the Exxon education foundation.

Half of the U.M. grant will be used to support doctoral candidates in chemical engineering, mechanical engineering, mining engineering, and earth sciences and geology. Four candidates, one from each field, will receive an average of $50,000 over three years for tuition, fees and living expenses.

Advanced students often need incentive to remain at the University because demand for graduating engineers is so great, said Richard Jordan, associate dean of IT. Students with bachelor's degrees are now being offered between $22,000 and $28,000 a year to take jobs in industry, he said.

The other half of the $400,000 will be used to augment salaries of junior professors in chemical engineering and mechanical engineering departments for five years. This is designed to keep faculty in the universities. Currently, faculty members can increase their salaries 20 to 100 percent by taking jobs in industry, Jordan said.

"I think business realizes that unless a university has the teaching staff, it can't graduate the students who will move into industry in coming years. Industry can't eat up the seed corn," Jordan said. The grant will begin in the 1982-83 school year.

The Gap Grows Wider . . .

Following editorial is from the Wheaton Gazette:

It's tough to believe, but in spite of all the whoop-de-doo about Minnesota being short of cash to pay its bills this year, the 1981 legislature nonetheless approved a spending program for the 1981-83 biennium totaling $8.5 billion. That's a $1.6 billion or 23 per cent increase.

Those figures were brought to light to the Minnesota Taxpayers association in their latest newsletter.

The MTA says the figures are "bottom line," although they admit that they could be misleading. The accounting gymnastics which were employed during the 1981 session effectively balanced both the 1979-81 biennium and the budgeted 1981-83 biennium. The balancing act also served to widen the spending gap between the two bienniums and thus the large 23 per cent increase in spending.

Simply stated, there is $243 million included in the 1982 expenditures which were actually appropriations allocated for 1981. The $243 million is comprised entirely of payments to school districts. In August of 1980 the governor cut $195 million in expenditures due to revenue shortfalls. At that time it appeared that the state was headed for a deficit in 1981.

Part of the expenditure cutback involved $88 million in school aid payments which were later reinstated by the 1981 session. The $88 million was then included in fiscal year 1982 expenditures.

Thus, on paper the biennial spending increase is 23 per cent. After reallocating the education payments to the years as they really apply would show the increase to be only 15 per cent. But still a 15 per cent hike at a time when dollars seem tough to come by in Minnesota.

The accounting gymnastics are not over yet. $201 million in 1981-82 expenditures, were shifted into the 1983-85 biennium to balance the 1981-83 budget. The items included a shift in the 1983 rent credit payment which stipulates that a renter who is not a senior citizen or disabled must receive the credit as a separate payment in August, instead of opting to take the credit as an offset on the income tax form. The 1983 fiscal year ends June 30, 1983; the August payment effectively shifts $121 million in expenditures into 1984.

Changes in payment dates for DNR payments, taconite homestead payments and local government aid will similarly throw an additional $80.4 million in 1984.

If these expenditure items were to be accounted for in the 1981-83 biennium, and incorporating the above changes in educational payments, the state spending increase becomes 18 per cent. Therefore, on paper the biennial spending increase is 23 per cent. Taking into account the postponement in school aid and the other shifts, the increase if 18 per cent.

If all of this sounds confusing, welcome to the club. The governor and the state legislature have embarked upon a game of money shifting this year that has never before been seen in the state.

The game of financial musical chairs is keeping the machine chugging along. But be sure of one thing. Somehwere along the line, the tab is going to have to be paid. You don't cut expenses or taxes by simply shifting a debt down the road one, two or three years.

In simple terms, the state of Minnesota, already a high taxing unit, is spending more money than it is collecting. That is going to mean even higher taxes in the future.

Some Of Life's Don'ts

Don't drink water; the stuff is dangerous. There may be nitrates in it, or traces of radioactivity — no matter how purified. Water can also drown you. Or cause you to slip in the bathtub and break your neck.

In fact, if you want to live an utterly "safe" life, there is very little you can do except lie down and die.

Don't eat sugar. Scientists have detected a correlation between blanched foods and stomach cancer. The same hazards can be alleged again refined flour and polished rice.

Don't eat eggs or apples or carrots or rice, or oats or barley, or plums or cherries, or garlic or wheat bran, or wheat germ or safflower oil, or soybean oil, or corn oil, or honey. They contain estrogens. Don't eat green vegetables, for the same reason.

Don't breathe. You will inhale carbon dioxide, carbon monoxide and oxides of nitrogen and sulphur.

Obviously, don't drive or ride in an automobile. In the USA, 50,000 persons a year are killed by autos.

Don't eat salt. It may elevate your blood pressure.

"Don't farm. It is one of the three most dangerous occupations.

"Don't switch to a microwave oven. Those rays may cause cancer. Don't turn on the TV, for the same reason.

Finally, don't read this; you might have a nervous breakdown!

Is Crime Really Rising?

Amidst all the reports about fear of crime in the United States and ever-rising crime statistics, it is helpful to be reminded that much is being done — and can and must yet be done — to reduce the terrible toll of criminality on society.

At a forum on violence held at the Kennedy Library in Boston recently several speakers reminded their listeners that citizen efforts against criminals can make a difference. The example of a neighborhood that stuck to its principles despite threats and intimidation until a street gang was broken in Chicago and its leaders jailed was just one example. Or take the public pressure that helped spur enactment of the Bartley-Fox gun law by the Massachusetts legislature several years ago that mandates a touch one-year sentence for carrying an illegal firearm.

Also, the very fact that so much is not known about the degree of crime in the U.S., including inner cities where relations between police and citizens are still often tenuous at best, suggests public caution in evaluating crime statistics such as the FBI Uniform Crime Report for 1980 released last week. The report concluded that the U.S. crime rate increased seven per cent in 1980 over 1979, and 42 per cent over 1971. During that same period the population increased only nine per cent.

However, at almost the same time that the FBI figures were being released a respected national anticrime organization, the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, issued a report of its own on another topic that in part questioned the assumption that there has been a sharp increase in crime in the past several years. The NCCD report calls crime figures "notoriously subject to manipulation" and argues that alleged increases in numbers of crimes may in fact merely reflect better reporting of crimes than in past years.

Many criminal justice experts have come to the same conclusion. This is not to ignore that the U.S. does face a serious crime problem and that more and more lawbreakers are being arrested. Jails are bulging. It is especially disturbing that most crimes are committed by offenders under 25 years of age. But what is also clear from studies is that the fear of crime in the U.S. may be outstripping the actual commission of crimes.

While such a complex subject cannot be addressed in a few short paragraphs, the gathering at the Kennedy Library did bring out several points that U.S. officials and the public should explore:

+As suggested by Lynn A. Curtis, president of the Eisenhower Foundation for the Prevention of Violence, businesses must be integrated into neighborhood and community anticrime efforts. Residents and business people must "look out for one another."

+The media must be more judicious in the presentation of "crime news." The public needs to be alerted to genuine dangers. But too often what the public receives from the media merely heightens the fear of crime without in any way contributing to a solution of the problem.

+The entertainment industry must do a better job of policing itself and expunging violence from television and films. Whether the figure is 18,000 or only 10,000, as some participants noted, the average American child has seen thousands of homicides committed in films by the time the teen-age years are reached. That should be considered intolerable in a humane society.

+Finally, more needs to be known about the linkage of crime, alcohol and drugs. Crime remains a serious challenge to Americans. Yet what must not be overlooked is that many individuals are seeking solutions to the problem — and posting not inconsiderable victories along the way.

Gov. Quie's Column

On July 8 of this year I announced the formation of a new Governor's council on health promotion and wellness. The response from Minnesotans concerned about the health of their fellow citizens was overwhelming. In early September, I was able to announce the appointment of 15 outstanding members from around the state, selected from nearly 300 qualified applicants.

There have been two Minnesota councils on physical fitness under previous administrations and there are now 31 such councils around the country. Minnesota's council will have a broader charge than virtually all of these councils in that it will deal with "wellness".

Wellness includes not only physical health, but also spiritual, emotional and mental health. My charge to the council is to improve the qualify of life of Minnesotans by recognizing the relationship of these elements in our lives and to try to help all our residents achieve wellness.

Why should we be interested in health promotion and wellness?

First of all, it is important that we improve the already high qualify of life of Minnesotans. To some extent, this involves avoiding illness. But more than that, it involves helping people to feel better about themselves, to be happier and healthier.

Related to this is the importance of each of us assuming responsibility for our lives and lifestyles. This contributes directly to the stability and health of our private and public institutions, like family, church, school and government.

Overall, Minnesotans are a healthy and hearty people. On most measures of health, Minnesotans equal or exceed the national average. Yet it is important to remember that according to figures of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, some 70 per cent of our nation's premature deaths are the result of diseases associated with personal lifestyle and environmental influences. So, simply from the standpoint of avoiding illness and death, promoting good health habits is important.

Another concern is the rapid increase in health care costs. Health care expenditures have nearly tripled nationally in nine years, from an annual average per capita health care expenditure of $359 in 1970 to $943 in 1979. Many people are suggesting approaches to handling this rapid increase, but in the long run, keeping people healthy must be the centerpiece of any strategy.

Finally, healthy people are important to the general prosperity of our state. Minnesota companies have realized the importance of healthy lifestyles among our citizens. In many ways, our business community is leading the way with about 70 companies having established wellness programs. A healthy work force can reduce health care premiums, turnover, absenteeism and workers' compensation payments, while at the same time increasing morale and productivity.

With state government being the largest employer in the state, I am particularly concerned about this issue, and have urged the council to promote wellness among state employees.

I want to make Minnesota a leader in promotion of health, of healthy lifestyles and of a healthy environment.

I believe this council can contribute to Minnesota's high quality of life by providing assistance, education and leadership. This council will not tell people what they have to do, but rather will work with communities in order to promote changes that residents want. Education and knowledge is an obvious and essential first step.

I invite you to join the many volunteers who will be involved in the council's work. Please write to the chairman, Wheelock Whitney, 1535 Dain Tower, Minneapolis, Minn. 55402.

Cheryl VanHorn substituted for the President and opened the meeting. Jaki Weleski substituted for the secretary and read the minutes. Old business included Lisa Edington giving a report on the 4-H picnic held in Lake Bronson at 12:30 on September 13. Cheryl VanHorn appointed Jaki Weleski and Lisa Halvorson to work with her on the nominating committee. Lisa and Maria Edington, Jaki Weleski and Cheryl VanHorn volunteered to do radio announcing on KTRF for National 4-H Week. Maria Edington brought up going on a sleigh ride or hay ride. Then Maria Edington made a motion for a hay ride and Roy Natvik seconded it. The club decided to have it on Saturday, September 26 at 4:00 p.m. Cheryl VanHorn volunteered to be on the food committee and also for the club to use their hay rack and tractor. The hayride will start at the VanHorns and end there. Roy Natvik made a motion to adjourn the meeting; Mike VanHorn seconded it.

A demonstration was given by Tarry Edington on "How to Select a Bow." A project talk was given by Judy Weleski on sewing. Linda VanHorn passed out enrollment cards to be brought back next month and also led the group in singing. Polly Edington led the playing of relay races.

There were eight 4-H members present, three parents, two leaders and six visitors.

Dear Sir:

I think it is fine to report what goes on at city council meetings but I ask for more accuracy if your paper offers direct quotes. I did not originate the quote, "some people wouldn't go on a ten dollar project" from the parking meeting and neither did I originate the quote, "Why do we always have to rob the liquor fund, now we will never build a new liquor store" from the Sept. 22nd council meeting. If you want to spice up your paper using direct quotes thats OK with me but don't assign my name to someone elses statement.

To more accurately state my position on the parking district — I do not wish to have the citizens of Thief River Falls provide more downtown parking lots than now exist. I would like to study the possibility of using tax increment financing to renovate necessary areas in the downtown care.

To more accurately state my position on the liquor store — I am not in favor of building a new liquor store. I would like to have a roomy convenient place for merchandising liquor for those who want a good selection.

Thank you for printing this letter about misquoting me in each of your last two papers.

Sincerely yours,
Bill Penning

Hazardous Waste: Same old story; who's going to be the suckers this time?

According to the Thief River Times dated Monday, September 21; these wastes are supposed to be safe for dumping and yet they are not safe for Metro areas or what the geological people consider the most productive farm lands.

Setterholm said that clay soil was the best for storing this waste material; but the clay soil in this entire area has grand water veins that feed the wells in the area and also the river which in turn will effect the water in Thief River Falls and on to the Red River.

If they do dump wastes in the area designated, who is going to be watching the dumping to be sure there is never any seepage or spilling which could be very dangerous to anyone in the area? Also who will be monitoring to make sure only the type of waste is dumped that was supposed to go in this area?

These dump sites would not only be damaging to Marshall county, but also Pennington and all other counties south along the Thief and Red Lake rivers.

It is too late once these chemicals start seeping into the rivers, because this cannot be strained out of the water once it is in.

Let them keep their waste materials in the area where they are manufacturing them, and not pollute our wild-life areas.

Sincerely,
Theodore C. Johnson

AMERICAN KNOW-HOW — IT'S THE SPECIAL INGREDIENT THAT'S HELPED BUILD A STRONG COUNTRY

That know-how is also the key that has spelled success for America's 50,000 cooperatives and their 60,000,000 member-owners who take pride in what their cooperatives can do. For example, there are cooperatives for electric and telephone service, farm marketing and farm supply, credit unions and farm credit, housing, food, insurance, health care and day care.

The cooperative way of conducting business has proven to be both highly efficient and economical. That's why cooperatives have been around for so long — in urban, rural and suburban areas — located in every state from coast to coast. And that's why new cooperatives are being formed today.

Cooperatives are good for their communities — they provide jobs and services that benefit everyone. And thriving communities mean a better America in every way.

Protection Of Grain Prevents Insect Problems

During the growing season, farmers carefully monitor their crops for signs of insect infestation. But once the crop is harvested and augered into storage bins, it's often forgotten.

"If storage bins aren't periodically inspected, moisture and temperature fluctuations can cause grain to deteriorate, providing insects with a ready-made meal," said Dan Bjorklund, agronomy technical specialist in Fort Dodge, Iowa.

"Research indicates that more than 90 per cent of all storage insect problems can be avoided with proper preventative and grain protection practices," Bjorklund added. And these practices are extremely inexpensive. A complete prevention and protection management program costs less than three cents per bushel.

Key to managing a store grain facility is prevention, Bjorklund emphasized. For good weed control, either lay crushed gravel within a 15-foot radius of the bin or treat this same area with residual, nonselective herbicides.

When the bin is empty, sweep the floors and walls. After this cleaning, farmers should spray bin walls, inside and outside, forcing protective spray into all cracks and crevices, Bjorklund said. To protect the exterior walls, spray not only the bottom six feet of walls, but also a six to eight foot area around the bin.

"At the same time, it's also wise to clean combines and augers," Bjorklund added.

When preventative measures aren't taken, protect the grain with insecticide as it's being augered into the bin, Bjorklund said. This step may also eliminate the need for fumigation. There are a number of products available to protect harvested grain.

Prior to binning, the most convenient time to treat grain is while it is still in the truck or wagon. "Spread Malathion evenly on the surface, then cut it into the grain with a shovel," he said. "Dumping the grain from the truck into the auger will thoroughly mix the insecticide."

Another method of applying Malathion Dust is to evenly meter the dust onto the grain as it's being transferred into storage, Bjorklund noted.

"As long-term storage of grain becomes more prevalent, these preventative and protective measures will have even greater impact on profitability," Bjorklund emphasized. "Neglecting grain after it's harvested and stored can only cut profits."

Tour Reviews Dual Use For Impoundments

place. Farmes pointed out that many miles of roads have been upgraded and maintained for public access and parking lots and camping areas installed. Care has been taken to ensure the continued operation of local drainage systems which cross the unit.

Wildlife food plots totaling 160 acres have been developed and a controlled goose hunting facility constructed in 1977 with the cooperation of Agassiz refuge. About 150 dugouts for waterfowl production and public hunting have been constructed and the Lost River pool had improved or created over 2,000 acres of marshalnd.

The Lost River project was begun in 1969 and first flooded in 1975. Eleven miles of dike road and diversion ditch were constructed, two emergency spillways installed and three water control structures put in place.

Interest in flood control led to a cooperative plan with local and regional watershed authorities to improve the impoundment for additional flood control and wildlife benefits. This resulted in raising the dikes and spillways two feet, added 4,500 acre feet of flood storage and improved water intake capabilities with four new inlets. The impoundment now has a permanent pool storage capacity of 4-500 acre feet and a flood storage cpapcity of an additional 4,500 acre feet. It can absorb run-off of 1.6 inches of water from the 53-square-mile drainage area, Farmes said. Total cost of the projects is well over $300,000.

During the noon lunch stop at the headquarters of Thief Lake wildlife management area, Times editor Marvin Lundin was presented with a Golden Anniversary Citation from the department of natural resources for "outstanding contributions to the protecton and perpetuation of the natural resources of the state of Minnesota". Presentation was made by Wesloh in behalf of Commissioner Alexander.

Following the noon lunch and a summary presentation on Thief Lake WMA, the tour group traveled to the Nereson area where 2,400 acres of the 9,730 acre area are under custodial care of the division of fish and wildlife. Nereson area also supports waterfowl and upland game birds, moose, deer and non-game spcies.

"The wildlife and flood control impoundment that is just being completed on the area is an excellent example of interagency cooperation," Farmes said. "The Minnesota department of natural resources, section of wildlife, purchased the trust fund land and contributed money toward construction of the impoundment. Other sources of money, equipment and-or services include Roseau county, United States soil conservation service, Two River watershed district, Lower Red River water management board and Legislative Committee for Minnesota Resources (LCMR).

"This impoundment will provide 1,750 acre feet of flood storage and will still remain a permanent wildlife pool of 560 acres after the flood waters have been released. This type of arrangement satisfies both the need for wildlife habitat and concern for 'flooding,'" he added.

Future plans for the Nereson WMA include construction of potholes and nesting islands adjacent to the impoundment site, prescribed burning and food plot establishment.

Prowlers Lose 4th Game To Staples 15-14 Friday

Continuing in their tough luck fashion Friday, Coach John Schmitz' Lincoln high school Prowler football team dropped a 15-14 decision to the Staples Cardinals at Staples. It was the fourth loss in as many games for the Prowlers who have played strong football but have been unable to gain the win column.

Friday night it was a case of a defensive let-down at the end of the first half and an offensive error with victory in sight late in the game which made the difference.

Thief River Falls got on the scoreboard with only 42 seconds remaining in the first half as halfback Tom Ose scampered across the goal line on an eight-yard run. A high snap from center on the attempt for extra point by placement foiled that effort, but it appeared the Prowlers would go off the field at halftime with a 6-0 lead.

After receiving the Prowler kickoff, Staples appeared to be stopped around mid-field, but Peterson broke free on a run to the Thief River Falls 15-yard line. Keith Grochow caught him from behind with a saving tackle, and the clock was stopped with one second remaining in the half.

The second was all that Staples needed. Quarterback Card passed to Volesky who made a diving catch in the endzone with time expired, and when Vick kicked the extra point the Cardinals had a 7-6 halftime lead.

The third quarter was scoreless, but the Prowlers asserted themselves in the fourth quarter, scoring on a one yard run by fullback Jim Dillon with about six and one-half minutes remaining. Ose ran the conversion and Thief River Falls led 14-7.

The home team was not to be denied, however, as Staples raised the score to 14-13 on a one yard run by Finn. Rather than settle for a tie with a kick for a single point, the Cardinals gambled on a two-pointer. Card hit Volesky for the two-pointer with two minutes and 49 seconds remaining.

After receiving the Staples kick-off, The Prowlers marched steadily down the field toward what they hoped would be a winning touchdown. But Jeff Imgrund was hit hard following a good gain and fumbled the ball, with Staples recovering around the 25-yard line. The Cardinals ran out the clock to preserve the victory.

Thief River Falls dominated the game on the ground, gaining 228 yards on 47 carries for a 4.85 average while Staples gained 107 yards on 33 carries for a 3.24 average. Tom Ose led all rushers with 177 yards on 27 carries for a 6.56 average. Jim Dillon had 25 yards in six carries, Jeff Imgrund 18 yards in 11 tries and quarterback Brent Schmitz carried three times for eight yards. The Prowlers had 13 first downs to eight for Staples.

Peterson was the leading ground-gainer for Staples with 51 yards in seven carries, including the long gainer setting up the first half touchdown. Finn carried 12 times for 33 yards, Morden eight times for six yards and Card six times for 17 yards.

It was the Prowlers' vulnerability against the pass that again spelled their downfall. Card went to the air when he had to and completed seven out of 11 attempts for 126 yards. Morden was his favorite receiver, catching five passes for 100 yards while Volesky caught two passes for 26 yards, including the sensational TD grab to end the first half.

Schmitz completed five out of nine passes for 40 yards, including two to Dave Upham for 18 yards, two to Jim Dillon for 15 yards and one to Keith Grochow for seven yards. Total offense for Thief River Falls was 268 yards while Staples had 233 yards of total offense.

Turn-overs played a part in the game as each team fumbled twice and lost the ball both times. Thief River Falls was penalized six times for 32 yards and Staples five times for 45 yards. Thief River Falls punted three times and Staples six times.

A FRIEND is what Ron Sorvig made last week as he set up his target in his backyard in Basswood Trailer Court and got ready to practice shooting his bow and arrow. "I was just going to shoot when I saw the deer behind the target," Sorvig said. "That's probably as close as I'll get to a deer all year!" The deer, which resides in the senior citizen park at Valley Home, had wandered from her home two days prior to the incident.

Athletes Draw Much Energy From Glycogen

All runners—from the serious marathoner to the weekend athlete—have this in common: they draw much of their "fuel" from glycogen.

Glycogen is the storage form of carbohydrate. It's found in your muscle fiber, where it's kept in reserve for energy needs.

If you're exercising moderately — bowling, for instance—your body "burns" a relatively equal mixture of glycogen and fat. But during longer, more strenuous activity—like long-distance running—you rely more heavily on glycogen. That's because there's less oxygen in your muscles during such activity. And in the absence of oxygen, glycogen burns more efficiently than fat.

When a long-distance runner exhausts the glycogen in his or her leg muscles, there's no way to siphon more of it from other muscles. In other words, the tank is empty—at least in terms of glycogen. At this point, fat becomes the primary source of fuel.

But fat, remember, takes more oxygen to burn—oxygen that's not exactly plentiful about this time. That's why runners experience a sudden, overwhelming sense of fatigue when this switch occurs. In marathon circles, this is known as "hitting the wall."

There are some marathoners, however, who "trick" their bodies into storing more glycogen than normal, thus delaying the point in the race at which they'll "hit the wall." This controversial practice—glycogen-loading—entails two phases.

First, the runner depletes his or her leg muscles of glycogen a week before the race with a hard workout. The muscles are then kept depleted for the next two days by continuing workouts and following a high-fat-high-protein diet.

During the second phase—days four, five and six—the runner switches to a high-carbohydrate diet (about 70 per cent of the calories) and forgoes training (or trains very lightly). This is when the muscle fibers become supersaturated with glycogen.

Beat Goodridge 50-0 . . .

Skippers Romp To Fourth Win

Undefeated Middle River high school romped over Goodridge Friday night at Goodridge, spoiling the Huskies' homecoming with a decisive 50-0 football victory. The thrashing brought some bitter comments from Goodridge coach Rick Nelson.

"They won the battle but I think we won the war," Nelson said. "Our kids learned more from this game than his (Middle River coach Eldon Sparby) kids did from kicking a team after it was down."

Nelson particularly took exception to Middle River sticking to its starting defense and going to the air in an attempt to score in the final two minutes of the game. "Middle River played its starting defense the whole game," Nelson said, "and they passed on six of the last nine plays of the game trying to get another touchdown. I don't think there is any place for that in high school football."

In reporting game statistics to the Times, Sparby pointed out that he used his starting offense on only the first three series of the first quarter and the first two series of the second quarter. Taht offense never put the ball in the air, he said, but scored on every possession. He gave his starters game time by letting them play much of the game on defense.

"I don't feel they did very much to stop us," Sparby said, unaware of Nelson's comments. He did indicate he used many of his starting defensive players for most of the game, and that his offensive reserves "passed a couple of times".

The powerhouse Skippers opened the scoring on a one-yard blast by fullback Steve Bengston with tailback Jeff Cwikla adding the extra points on a run. Bengston scored the second touchown on a six-yard run and added the conversion points as well. Quarterback Mike Peterson closed out the first quarter scoring with a 13-yard run and a following run for the extra points.

After a scoreless second quarter, Middle River tallied on its first two possessions of the second half. Cwikla dashed into the end zone from 19 yards out and a pass for extra points failed. Halfback Doug Kilen scored on a three-yard run and Cwikla ran for the conversion and a 38-0 score at the end of the thrird quarter.

Reserve quarterback Scott Peterson connected with end Bradley Berg on a 29-yard pass for the first fourth quarter touchdown by Middle River and the conversion attempt failed. Final scoring came on a touchdown by linebacker Doug Kilen who fell on a Goodridge fumble in the endzone. Again the run for extra points was halted.

Middle River had 273 yards in total offense with Bengston picking up 91 yards in 13 carries to lead the ground attack. Mike Peterson, cornerback, led the defensive charts with 12 assisted and unassisted tackles, followed by middle linebacker Ryan Johnson with 11.

Middle River will host Plummer Friday at 3 p.m. in a game which is the Skippers' homecoming contest as well as a part of the annual Middle River goose festival celebration. Goodridge, whose record fell to 1-3, will travel to Oklee Friday to meet the Bobcats who have an identical 1-3 record.

Animals Use Whiskers As Touch Organs

Whether a man is bearded or clean-shaven has nothing to do with his survival. But that's not true of all "bearded" animals. Many wild creatures, according to the current issue of Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine, use their whiskers as "organs of touch" which help them find food and avoid obstacles in the dark.

Called "vibrissae" by scientists, animal whiskers are long straight hairs that grow out of tiny pits in the skin. "Around the roots of the hairs are very sensitive nerves," explains the National Wildlife Federation's monthly publication for children. "When an animal's whiskers feel something, these nerves tell the creature what it is."

While animals such as rabbits, deer, and wolves have whiskers, they are active during the daylight and so depend on their senses of sight, smell and hearing to find food and avoid enemies. Animals that usually prowl about in dark places make much greater use of their sensitive "feelers."

A cat's whiskers, for example, act "just like tiny fingers when the animals hunt at night," says Ranger Rick. They enable the feline to feel its way in the dark without bumping into anything. When a cat sticks its head into a dark hole or tries to slip through a picket fence, its whiskers let it know how much room it has.

Some animals' whiskers are a great help at mealtime. A walrus dives for clams in deep, dark waters where its thick, quill-like whiskers feel for tasty treats in the mud. Other aquatic animals, such as seals and otters, also find food with their vibrassae. Scientists have discovered that their whiskers act as a sort of sonar device, telling these animals that hunt in dark, cloudy waters whether a fish is moving up ahead — and exactly where to find it.

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Peres

Q. Pastor Don, my husband and I are Christians. A few months ago my husband begain seeing another woman intimately. When I learned of this, I was so hurt and grieved that I tried to take my life. I am better now and my husband has given up this other woman. My husband wants to prove he is sorry, but I feel that he should be severely punished. Should I forgive him, accept him back, what should my position be in this matter?

A. First of all I would like to say that my heart goes out to someone in your position. You are the product of a terrible misfortune, and I know the heartache that you must be going through. My prayer is that God would give you the strength to make the right choice.

Unfortunately your question is one that comes to my desk quite often. Adultery is almost the accepted thing in our society today. But God still says it is sin, and I can see why many people would love to see their mates severly punished.

As serious as it is before God and as harmful as it is to many families and children, adultery can be forgiven. Punishment is something that belongs to God. Romans 12:19.

The Bible teaches that if your husband was truly sorry for his sin, and asked God for forgiveness, he was forgiven.

I John 1:9 teaches: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

The Bible also teaches that you should forgive your husband for his trespasses. Matthew 6:14-15 says, "For if ye forgive men their trespasses (sins), your Heavenly Father will also forgive you. But if ye forgive not men their trespasses (sins) neither will your Father forgive your trespasses."

Mark 11:25-26 teaches, "and when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any; that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses."

Luke 17:3-4 says, "Take heed to yourselves: if thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him, and if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying I repent; thou shalt forgive him."

Ephesians 4:32 teaches, "Be ye kind to one another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

I suggest that you accept your husband back according to Romans 15:7 that says, "Wherefore receive ye one another, as Christ also received us to the glory of God."

As a Christian trying to please God, you will soon lose your attitude of bitterness and your feeling of being hurt. Ask God to resotre the joy of your salvation Psalm 51:12 and let the fruit of His Holy Spirit be produced in you again. Galatians 5:22-23.

If you have any questions you would like to have answered from the Bible, please write Pastor Don Peres, Box 129, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Mistakes Cost MCC Defeat At Hallock, 10-6

It was a combination of mistakes and some tough defense that resulted in a 10-6 win by the Hallock Bears over the Marshall County Central Nordics Friday at Hallock. One of the rarities of high school football — a field goal — figured in the host team's scoring.

Marshall County Central scored first in the contest on a 19-yard run by quarterback Dave Kragness but a run for the extra point failed and the Newfolden club led 6-0. Neither team scored in the second quarter and the Nordics left the field with a 6-0 halftime lead.

Newfolden kicked off to open the second half and almost immediately wished they hadn't. On the first play from scrimmage Tim Schulte broke free for a 50-yard touchdown spring and Larry Fertig nailed the extra point from placement for a 7-6 Hallock lead.

A short time later the Nordics failed to gain a first down and a fourth-down punt netted only six yards. Hallock reeled off two first downs and, when held by the Newfolden defense, turned to the strong leg of Fertig. Despite a crosswind he split the uprights from more than 30 yards and a 10-6 Hallock lead. Neither team was able to score in the fourth quarter.

Newfolden's defense held Hallock to a total of 110 yards of offense, including 89 yards rushing and 21 passing. With 50 of the 89 yards coming on Schulte's TD dash, the Nordics defense was stringy for the rest of the game. Hallock passed only twice, completing one for 21 yards.

Marshall County Central rushed for 139 yards and passed for 69 more, connecting on six of 19 attempts. But the Nordics also fumbled five times, losing the ball on three of those bobbles, committed costly penalties that halted drives and on several occasions had ballcarriers slip and fall in the open field.

Middle linebacker Scott Anderson played a strong defensive game for Newfolden, making or assisting on 18 tackles and recovering a fumble. Outside linebacker Allen Lindemoen was in on 15 tackles, defensive tackle Ron Kostner in on 13 and nose guard Grant Nelson and end Jeff Dahl each in on nine tackles.

Marshall County Central coach Sam Gebhart was very impressed with Fertig's kicking ability. "We play our nine-man games on an 80-yard field," he noted, "but Fertig puts the ball between the uprights and well over the crossbar on the kickoffs. He's the best kicker I've ever seen in this conference, that's for sure."

Friday's loss was the second for Newfolden against two wins. Hallock is 2-1 for the season. Both teams have lost to Argyle in the Top of the State conference race. The Nordics travel to Greenbush Friday for a 4 p.m. conference game.

Canvasback Duck Society Being Formed

A research library which contains all available scientific and lay literature about the canvasback duck has been established by the Canvasback Society of Cleveland, Ohio, a national conservation organization dedicated to conserving, restoring and promoting the increase of the North American canvasback population.

The library is housed at the Museum of Natural History in Cleveland. It is available on a no fee basis to biologists, ornithologists, students, writers and all others concerned for the welfare of the "Can," the legendary "King of Ducks".

In announcing establishment of the library, Keith C. Russell, president of the Canvasback Society said, "The canvasback is having very serious problems. The continental population fell to an all time low in 1972 and the bird is currently on the Audubon Blue List (one step removed from the threatened and endangered species list). Ironically enough, no one really knows why can populations have declined or, consequently, what to do about it. That is why we've established a national organization for the sole purpose of helping, this magnificent waterfowl. That is why we've pulled together all of the information available into this library."

Cornerstone of the Canvasback Society effort is its technical committee, comprised of the most qualified waterfowl biologists available in the United States and Canada. Under the guidance of this committee the organization will strive:

+To establish and maintain a reference library containing all known scientific knowledge relating to the canvasback and to make such information available without charge to the ornithological community and to all other interested persons.

+To cooperate with other conservation organizations in those programs which relate to the canvasback species of duck.

+To educate the general public in furtherance of the general welfare of the canvasback.

"The sharing of knowledge is the beginning of the solution to any problem," Russell concluded. "We've put a great deal of work into this library. We hope it will be in use continually. The Canvasback Society — and the canvasback — needs the help of everyone who cares.

All interested parties are asked to write for a free copy of the library's bibliography. The address is Museum of Natural History, Wade Oval, University Circle, Cleveland, Ohio 44106.

AN ARROW from the compound bow of Greg Anderson killed this black bear as it raided bee hives less than a mile from his home north of Middle River. Stating he had been baiting near Gatzke, he added, "you've got to be crazy to drive 25 miles when you can shoot one three-quarters of a mile from your house." Claiming he was about eight yards away when he released the arrow, he was asked if he was in a tree. "You'd have to be crazy to get that close to a bear with a bow and arrow on the ground," he replied.

Bear Facts

Elusive and notably shy black bears prefer to remain in their woodland habitat away from human annoyances, generally approaching only for foods around the campgrounds, garbage dumps, in parks or resort areas. It is safer to avoid foraging bear, who are unable to locate food in their own natural habitats.

Bears seek a variety of natural foods. In the fall, bear are anxious to load up on body fat preparing for their winter hibernation, and is they are already fat, they will enter their hibernation more quickly. If they are skinny, they may wander the far distant hills until they locate apple orchards, farmlands rich with foods, or resort to a grass and roots diet for the sake of staying alive.

Bears love berries, any kind of nuts and wild rose hips. Acorns are usually plentiful and most tasty for his needs. Often he will travel many miles to seek foods. Streams provide easy access to delicious eating fish.

Trapping bear, rather than hunting, is not considered very sporting or fair. Bear can easily be trapped. Nuisance bears can be killed with poison, such as the 1080 poison, which when injected into bait, will kill a bear, or if he eats anything that has eaten 1080, he will also die of that poison. It is reported that black bear have been wiped out when 1080 has been used in an area. Legitimate hunters who prefer not to trap bear, but to use hunting technics, requires much knowledge on the part of the hunter, for bear hunting is very difficult.

Each year our planet is suffering the loss of wildlife by extinction through man's careless regard for the preservation of wildlife and its habitat. Reports that cubs may die of starvation due to lack of food and habitat, plus bear over-population, has created a hunting pressure on the very existence of bear.

Every year wildlife becomes more extinct, noticeably absent from the scene. How dreadful, if the bear would become extinct.

Many areas of America don't have bear. Why can't more bear be removed to any equally favorable environment, preserving bear from the possibility of extinction? They may appear very plentiful in some over-populated areas at the present time.

However, this is a desk opinion without scientific background such as the DNR.

Fishing has been quieter on Lake of the Woods this past week. The walleye have been moving from the reefs to the sands and with cloudy weather the walleyes are in shallower water.

Northern activity has been fairly good this past week with many taken from weed beds. The river has seen more activity this past week with fish showing up in the evenings off the dropoffs. Nightcrawlers still seems to be one of the best baits, but when they're biting alll three baits seem to be working.

Gonvick Runs To 30-12 Win Over Bobcats

Gonvick Bulldogs raised their North Tri-County conference record to 3-1 Friday with a 30-12 win over the Oklee Bobcats at Oklee. It was a case of a strong ground game dominating against Oklee's aerial attack.

Trailback Ron Erickson put Gonvick on the board in the first quarter with a seven-yard touchdown run. A pass attempt for the extra points failed and the Bulldogs led after the first quarter 6-0.

Quarterback Dean Birkeland of Gonvick scampered into the endzone from 13 yards out in the second quarter, then hit halfback Al Wolden for the PAT and a 14-0 Gonvick lead at the half.

Gonvick boosted its lead to 22-0 when Wolden scored on a run from 10 yards out and Birkeland passed to split end Chad Bergerson for the extra points.

Oklee struck back in the third period when quarterback John Cyr passed to Gary Parenteau on a 22-yard scoring play. A pass for the extra points failed.

Gonvick came back strong after the touchdown, however, with Wolden scoring on a 50-yard run and fullback Jon Watne blasting into the endzone for the extra points. Gonvick led at the end of the third quarter 30-6.

Cyr hit Loring Mercil with a six-yard scoring pass to bring the score to 30-12 midway through the fourth quarter. On the game Cyr was nine for 23 passing for 105 yards and two touchdowns. Ricky Dulka won the defensive award for the Bobcats with 18 points. Oklee was missing starters Leif Fore and John Lindquist due to injury and Dulka was also hampered by injury.

Oklee will host Goodridge Friday in another North Tri-County conference match-up. Both teams will be looking for their second win after sustaining three losses.

Plummer Loses To Scots 33-7

McIntosh-Winger scored in every quarter, including a 19-yard fourth quarter field goal by Bob Bursheim, to roll to a 33-7 North Tri-County conference win over the Plummer Cardinals Friday at Plummer.

David Balstad opened the scoring for the visiting Scots on a 33-yard run. Chad Ekeberg passed to Randy Kroshus for the extra points and Mac-Winger had an 8-0 first quarter lead.

Craig Carver carried on a four-yard run in the second quarter to raise the score to 14-0 but the extra points run failed. The Scots got those two points later in the quarter, however, on a team safety as a Plummer punt attempt was blocked out of the endzone. Halftime score was 16-0.

Two touchdowns were scored by McIntosh-Winger in the third quarter, the first on a 29-yard run by Tim Finseth and the second on a 35-yard pass play from Russ Bly to Craig Carver. Bob Bursheim converted extra points from placement after both scores, making the third quarter score 30-0.

After Bursheim's 19-yard field goal in the fourth quarter, Plummer got on the scoreboard with a 52-yard pass play from Kyle Gustafson to Tim Peters. Russ Fisher kicked the extra point for a 33-7 final score.

Dean Sletten led Plummer's rushing game with 62 yards while Kyle Gustafson had 34. The Cardinals passers completed five of 13 attempts for 88 yards, including the 52-yard touchdown effort.

Gary Torkelson with 12 tackles led the Plummer defense, followed by Russ Fisher with nine, Mike Konickson with six and Kyle Gustafson with six plus a pass interception.

Now 2-2 on the season, Plummer travels to Middle River Friday to meet the undefeated skippers on their homecoming game.

DU Donations Locally Near $100,000 Mark

Indications are that this year's dinner of the Northwest chapter of Ducks Unlimited will push the total money raised for the organization in six years near the $100,000 mark, according to Stan Upham, chairman of the local chapter.

This year's event had the largest attendance ever — 348 meals served — and participation in all areas of the event was good, Upham said. He added that the Greenwing program for boys 17 years of age and younger had shown exceptional growth from six enrolling last year to 93 joining the program this year.

Greenwing members pay a $5 membership fee and receive a T-shirt, decal, patch, membership card and subscription to Ducks Unlimited magazine. It is planned to have a Greenwing outing late next summer to which fathers and sons or perhaps entire families will be invited. Program on waterfowl identification or firearms safety will be presented.

Upham also urged members who do not receive their DU magazine on schedule to contact him so that he can check on the subscription immediately. "If they wait until the next banquet," he said, "they miss out on a whole year of waterfowl information."

WHAT DO YOU DO WHEN YOU CHOOSE TO CARE BUT YOU DON'T CARE TO CHOOSE?

When you give through United Way, you don't feel like you're helping some people at the expense of others. Because your one gift helps support services that cover practically the entire range of human needs. And volunteers—local people like yourself—spend long hours going over budgets and needs in order to decide where the money can best be used. So you don't need to choose, when you just want to help as much as you can.

Thanks to you, it works. for all of us.

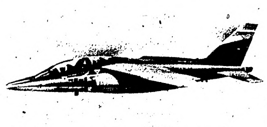
Fuel Miser Jet Trainer



Selection of the Lockheed-built Alpha Jet by the U.S. Navy for its new intermediate advanced trainer (VTXTS) program would save the United States about 64.8 million gallons of fuel if the current introduction schedule is accelerated by two years, according to Lockheed-California Company experts. Currently the Navy is targeting 1988 for introduction of a new trainer, but the Alpha Jet, which is operational now, could be introduced as early as 1986. Since it burns 50 percent to 60 percent less fuel than the Navy's current jet trainers, it would save $260 million at today's fuel prices. Lockheed would build the sleek aircraft in Burbank, Calif., under license from a European consortium.

U.S. Rep Says Weak Farm Bill To Be Disaster

"Unless a strong farm bill is approved by Congress and signed by the President, rural America will face economic disruptions that could cripple thousands of farmers and small business people next year," Rep. Arlan Stangeland told Secretary of Agriculture John Block late last week.

"When you look at the overall economic situation in most farm communities, you can see the havoc that will be caused by a weak farm bill," Rep. Stangeland said. "Interest rates have been hampering farmers and small business people for two years, and projects indicate that farm income will level off or drop next year.

"If Congress passes an inadequate farm bill, the situation will be even worse," he added. "If farmers can't get a reasonable return for their efforts, small town America may face the worst conditions since the great depression."

Secretary Block met with Rep. Stangeland in the Congressman's Capitol Hill office. Purpose of the meeting was to discuss the shape of the four-year farm bill (H.R. 3603), which is scheduled for floor debate next Wednesday. The administration is seeking minimal increases in the basic farm programs which are covered by the four-year bill.

"Goodness knows, I have been in total support of most of the administration's key initiatives," Rep. Stangeland said. "Most people were amazed when President Reagan got his tax reforms, reductions in regulations, and spending restraints.

"But I am going to have to work for stronger farm programs than the administration wants," he added. "It just makes sense that if we want to rebuild the national economy, we can't undermine the farm sector and all the small towns in America."

Rep. Stangeland, a member of the House agriculture committee, is the author of two portions of the House version of the farm bill. Both the oil sunflower loan program and the 19.6 cents-per-pound loan program for raw sugar have been opposed by the administration.

"I'm not just concerned about the sugar and sunflower programs; I'm concerned about the whole farm bill," Rep. Stangeland said, "The administration has to realize that most of these programs just provide loans which are repaid with interest. And the other programs help to maintain adequate supplies of food in the supermarkets at a reasonable price. It is a small investment for the federal government, but a strong farm bill will really help to hold down inflation, strengthen our economy, keep rural America healthy and keep food flowing to the cities."

Secretary Block remained noncommittal on stronger farm programs during the meeting. He stated that the administration would like the House to pass a farm bill which is closer to the version passed by the Senate last week.

"I remember when the President said that most folks would support the over-all budget cuts, but would oppose any reductions in programs that directly affected them," Rep. Stangeland said. "But this is different. A strong farm community is an integral part of the whole national economy; and in the fight against inflation, a stable supply of reasonaly-priced food is crucial."

The Congressman also pointed out that when farm income declines, the small businesses back in town also suffer.

"This farm bill is going to affect rural America for the next four years," Rep. Stangeland said. "If the President is not willing to ask the federal reserve board to ease its monetary policies and bring down interest rates, he ought to be willing to allow the farm bill to be a little bit stronger. The well-being of our farmers and small business people depend on it."

School Bus Week In MN. October 4-10

"Eight Lights for Safety's Sake" is the theme for the 1981 school bus safety week in Minnesota, October 4-10, according to public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

The eight lights are those which are on the front and back (four in each place) of every school bus. The lights are especially important for motorists when they are flashing. An amber color warns the motorist that a stop is coming soon and the red flashing lights, along with an extended stop arm, requires a full stop by the motorist until the children have entered or exited the bus and the lights are turned off, and the stop arm retracted.

School bus safety is the responsibility of every Minnesota driver who should know and obey school bus laws, Sopsic reminded.

In 1980 there were 678 school bus-involved accidents, compared to 866 the previous year. One fatality was reported in 171 personal injury accidents.

The department of public safety formed a special school bus safety task force in 1980 to study problem areas. A booklet giving results of the study was distributed to school districts, bus companies and other interested groups and individuals.

More than 600,000 school children ride more than 100 million miles on 9,000 buses each year in Minnesota.

"Busy as a bee" is a cliche proved true year after year at harvest time. As vital to agriculture as sunlight and water, the 200 billion bees at work in this country have pollinated $18.5 billion worth of produce this year alone.

Bees are responsible — directly or indirectly — for about a third of the American diet, according to Basil Furgala, an entomologist at the University of Minnesota.

"Bees are really the good guys, but most people don't give a hoot about these insects," said Furgala, who developed these crop statistics while on leave to the U.S. department of agriculture.

Furgala is an apiculturist (honeybee expert) who is "on the side of the bees," even if it sometimes hurts. After the first few stings of the season, he usually develops a tolerance to bee venom. Once, however, he examined a woodland swarm without wearing protective clothing; he slipped and was stung 150 times in a matter of seconds.

From almonds and apples to watermelons and zucchini, nearly all crops depend on the bee. Only grass crops are not dependent on the bee's pollination efforts. Few growers realize the debt they owe this tiny creature, Furgala said.

For example, if rain drives the bees away while apple trees are in bloom, the crop will be ruined. A wind of more than 15 miles per hour will confine them to their hives, making pollination impossible. Pesticides are the bee's worst enemy Furgala said.

But bees are gradually being recognized for their worth. Large growers often rent hives to pollinate their blooming acreage. One hive can be rented for about $40, and will take care of two acres. California almond growers, owners of large apple orchards and hybrid seed companies use this technique every year, Furgala, said.

But only about 5 per cent of the total bee pollination is done this "pay-as-you-go" fashion. Other growers often borrow hives from one of the country's 220,000 beekeepers in exchange for the honey the bees produce.

The sunflower is a prime example of a crop that benefits from the labors of bees, Furgala said. Sunflowers are pollinated efficiently be honeybees, along with 17 species of wild bees, bumble bees and syrphid flies. In Furgala's sunflower research plot in Waseca, Minn., production rose 40 per cent after a hive was placed near by.

Sunflowers are grown on nearly five million acres in the United Satates. That figure could double within several years, according to an article in the May issue of "Scientific American."With demand for sunflowers increasing, even a 10 per cent increase in crops could mean an additional $50 million for growers in Minnesota and the Dakotas, Furgala said.

Uses of sunflower seeds range from paints and plastics to snack foods, including "sunbutter," an alternative to peanut butter now being sold in parts of the Upper Midwest.

Like tiny paintbrushes, bees sweep pollen from the male to the female parts of a sunflower's 2,000 flowerettes. For effective pollination, this work must be done every day the flower is in bloom, and most bees visit 20 to 30 sunflowers each day. Even the so-called self-fertilizing sunflower hybrids need the bees' assistance and are not completely self-pollinating, Furgala has found

Mark Sugden, a graduate student working with Furgala, has developed a device that can result in sunflower hybridization, by taking advantage of the instincts of bees.

Sugden's battery-powered pollen dispenser has been attached to a hive near the Waseca research plot. The device coats bees with pollen from one type of male sunflower as they leave the hive. The bees then travel to a nearby field containing only female flowers. The result is a third type or hybrid sunflower.

The work of this year's bees is nearly complete. Late July bees, who live only about six weeks, are dying now. August-born honeybees will live four or five months, long enough to tend the eggs for next June, when new swarms of bees can begin the process again.

Bible Series At Covenant Church Begins

Evangelical Covenant church of Thief River Falls will sponsor a fall Bible Series with Dr. Ralph M. Gade of Chicago, Ill., as speaker. The series begins with Sunday morning services at 8:30 and 11 a.m. on October 4.

There will be evening services beginning at 7 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, October 7. Each evening following the regular service Dr. Gade will present an illustrated topic using color slides from the Middle East.

Dr. Gade is executive director of the American Association for Jewish Evangelism. For over 20 years prior to his call to direct the work of the A.A.J.E., he served as pastor of several churches in the Baptist general conference of America.

During his last pastorate, the Northwest Baptist church of Chicago, he was elected the "man of the year" by the B'nai B'rith because of the interest he showed in the Jewish people as well as the nation of Israel.

In 1961 Dr. Gade represented the Lerner newspapers (the largest chain of Jewish newspapers in the Midwest) at the trial of Adolph Eichmann in Jerusalem, Israel. He has made numerous trips to the Middle East. Following the six-day Arab-Israeli war, he obtained special permission to go to Israel to do some filming.

Dr. Gade attended Northwestern college, Roseville, as well as Trinity Evangelical divinity school, Deerfield, Ill. This series is recommended for anyone interested in the Biblical perspective as it applies to evangelism, today's events and the future.

Reagan Critic On Health To Speak Oct. 1

Larry Gordon, president of the American public health association and frequent critic of the Reagan administration's public health policies, will speak next week at the annual meeting of the Minnesota public health association (MPHA) in Bloomington.

Gordon, who is deputy secretary of the New Mexico health and environment department, will discuss "The Effects of Public and Private Policies on Public Health." His presentation will be part of the MPHA's Chesley memorial lecture series.

Gordon has been critical of the administration's proposals to cut federal spending on public health programs, and replace "categorical" grants for specific local programs with "block" grants, to be spent as the states see fit. In the September issue of "The Nation's Health," Gordon called the block grant proposal "an entering wedge in a scheme to shrink and then eliminate" support for many federal health programs.

Gordon went on to express concern about the effect of the cuts, expecially on prevention-oriented programs, which he saw as a necessary alternative to "sickness treatment and crisis medicine."

"Optimists suggest more can be done for less," he said, "but it is more likely that less will be done for less."

In the long run, Gordon argued, preventing illness can be more cost effective than simply treating people after they are sick. "We have watched with frustration and dismay while staggering billions have been poured into the sickness treatment system of our communities, states and nation, with unsatisfactory (though expensive) attendant impact on the health status of our citizens," he said.

The three-day MPHA annual meeting will be held September 30- October 2, at the Marriott Inn. Gordon is scheduled to speak on Thursday, October 1.

CETA Serves 33,090 In 9 Month Period

Enrollment in Comprehensive Employment and Training act (CETA) job training programs in Minnesota was 33,090 in the nine-month period ending June 30, the Minnesota department of economic security reported.

During this period, 10,605 of the 21,714 persons who left the program found jobs or entered other non-CETA training.

During the same period a year ago 35,173 persons were enrolled in CETA programs. For this period, 11,443 of the 21,142 persons who left the program found jobs or entered other non-CETA training.

Reduced number of enrollees in this year's program is due to the phasing out of the CETA-funded public service jobs, the department said.

An additional 8,155 young people held CETA-funded summer jobs in 1981 under a $2.6 million program.

In 1980, 7,060 young people helped CETA-funded summer jobs under a $2.7 million program.

In the nine months ending June 30, 1981, CETA contracted with employers to train 3,350 workers on the job. Under the contracts, Ceta pays a portion of the workers' wages. Any business may use CETA as a source of new workers.

Of the CETA job seekers entering employment during the nine-month period ending June 30, 1981, 44.7 per cent were women, 33.6 per cent were 21 years of age or younger and 8.9 per cent were 45 or older.

Safety Tips Given Farm Vehicle Drivers

Combination of fewer daylight hours and a busy fall harvest season in Minnesota can be a deadly one in terms of farm vehicle-realted accidents, according to public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

Farm vehicle operators and other motorists must share equally in observing laws and habits of common courtesy, Sopsic said.

National safety council estimates that each year farm machinery is involved in more than 23,000 accidents. Nearly half of these involves a collision with another vehicle and the rest include running off roads, overturning, or falling from equipment. In Minnesota in 1980 there were six fatalities in 225 accidents involving farm tractors or other pieces of equipment.

Minnesota law on farm vehicle reflectors was revised by the 1981 Legislature, requiring reflectors to be of the type approved for use on commercial vehicles. Law also requires operators to mount reflectors as close as practicable to extreme edges of the peice of farm equipment. Reflectors should be visible at night from all distances within 100 to 600 feet when directly in front of lawful lower headlight beams.

Other key safety reminders from the national safety council for those who drive farm equipment on public roads are:

+ Clear the windows of the cab-equipped vehicle before moving. Replace worn windshield wipers.

+ Equip tractors with extendable rear-view side mirror and consider installing turn signals.

+ Keep lighting equipment and reflectors clean. Replace burned out bulbs. Do not travel on public roads at night or when visibility is poor.

+ Make sure taillights, rear reflectors, flashing lights and the slowmoving vehicle emblems are clearly visible to following traffic.

+ Replace faded or damaged emblems. Keep them clean. Wash with water and add a mild detergent if they are dirty.

+ Have an adequate sight line or unimpeded view where a driveway or lane enters a road to see oncoming traffic.

+ Mow roadsides along property and clear adjacent road intersections. Inform local road officials if existing signs are damaged or if signs are needed to warn of roadway hazards.

Yield Results Of Sunflowers Are Reported

Sunflower harvest has begun despite variable yields in the tri-state area. Initial yield reports are available.

Favorable weather in central South Dakota has helped produce a good crop, according to agronomist Sam Heikes. Yields appear very good in South Dakota, with George Cottom of Onida reporting an average sunflower yield of 1,455 pounds per acre and Bill Maher reporting an average yield of 1,500 pounds per acre on his sunflower harvest at Pierre, S.D.

In west central Minnesota, early fields are producing somewhat disappointing yields. Fields preripened by disease and insects are yielding 1,000 to 1,200 pounds per acre. Later fields show promise of significantly better yields.

If the United States department of agriculture (USDA) June 1 acreage estimate of slightly less than four million sunflower acres harvested proves accurate, and state yields average 1,360 pounds per acre, the 1981 crop would be in the 2.4 million metric ton range.

Minnesota grain exchange president Ralph Hayenga believes that sunflowers will continue to follow soybeans on the market, as a competing oil to soybean oil. With plenty of beans on the market, Hayenga said, "it is unlikely that sunflowers will create their own market." According to Hayenga, one bullish outlook for sunflowers would be a potential Russian trade, turning a sympathic market to soybeans and sunflowers.

Russia is one of the three major sunflower producing countries along with the U.S. and Argentina. World production is currently estimated at about 15 million metric tons, up 16 per cent from last year.

Loss of slightly over 100,000 acres of Minnesota farmland from 1969 to 1978 may appear to be an insignificant part of the state's nearly 30 million farmland acres, but the total statistics do not give the total picture, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service of the state department of agriculture.

Fifty-nine of Minnesota's counties reported farm acreage losses during the period, while gains in 27 other counties offset much of the numerical acreage loss.

"But because there's a wide diversity of soil, climate, vegetation and topography within the state," the statisticians report, "some areas are decidedly prime farmland while others are not. It is in this context that Minnesota's farmland losses may be of concern."

The statistics service points out that the gain of an acre of farmland in St. Louis county — which is generally not well suited to crop production — would not offset the production loss of an acre lost in a Red River valley county.

North central and northeast districts showed a combined gain of over 134,000 acres of farmland from 1969 to 1978. "Because this area is mostly a forest, mining and recreation area with low agricultural productivity," the statistics service reports, "the increase in these two districts will not profoundly enhance farm production in Minnesota. If these two districts are eliminated from the state tabulation, Minnesota's farmland loss more than doubles and becomes significant.

Biggest drops in farmland acreage occurred in west central and central districts, showing a combined loss of over 385,000 acres. The three southern districts lost a total of 225,000 acres.

By counties, the greatest acreage losses were recorded in Douglas, Otter Tail, Stearns, Kandiyohi, Yellow Medicine, Brown, Wright, Hennepin and Todd counties.

The northwest district — which includes Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, Clearwater, Mahnomen, Norman, Clay and Becker counties — covers much of the Red River valley and grew over half of the state's wheat, barley, sunflowers, potatoes and flax in the 1978 census year.

This district's land in farms in 1978 totaled 5.8 million acres versus 5.7 million acres in 1969 for a gain of three per cent. This is the only major agricultural district which showed an increase in land in farms during the 1969 to 1978 census period.

A significant 86,000 acre increase in farmland occurred in Roseau county. This boosted Roseau's farmland by 15 per cent, the largest percentage of increase in any agricultural county in the state. Marshall county showed a sharp 75,000 acre gain while Norman gained 18,000 acres. Norman county has 96 per cent of its land used for

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

If Tom and Kaydell Super smile a little wider than normal when the wind blows through their back yard on the east edge of Middle River, more power to 'em.

Because that's what a wind of 10 miles per hour or stronger provides through their two kilowatt wind generator — more electric power to 'em. The Supers expect to have about 60 per cent of their electric power needs supplied by the generator which is mounted on a 60-foot metal pole near their two-year-old home.

The generator weighs about 265 pounds net weight, has three blades six and one-half feet in length, and begins generating electricity when the wind speed reaches 10 miles per hour for 30 seconds. It will continue to generate power until the wind speed drops below eight miles per hour. If it produces more electricity than the household uses, the excess current goes into the Otter Tail Power company line which serves the home. Rated output of 1,800 watts is reached with a wind-speed of 24 miles per hour.

Because there is a constant source of electricity available through the Otter Tail hook-up, the Supers are not dependent on the wind for power. They simply gain the benefit of using home-generated power when it is available rather than buying it from the power company, and receive a credit for surplus energy generated and fed into the company lines.

Super said he has been interested in the possibilities of wind power for three or four years and projects that it will take four or five years to recover his investment through reduced electrical costs. The unit with its 60-foot mono-tower cost $8,500. A structural tower with guy wires would cut the cost by $1,000. Federal energy credits will allow him to deduct 40 per cent of that cost from his income taxes, and the state energy credit will allow him another 20 per cent. The credits substantially reduce the investment to be recovered by electrical savings.

The Supers purchased the Enertech induction generator from Danny Juhl of Kennedy, operator of Lake State Sales which is the distributor for the WIND GENERATOR located at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Super in Middle River has attracted considerable attention since its installation in early August. The Supers expect the generator to supply them with up to 60 per cent of their electrical power needs.

Goose Festival Friday-Sunday

Three full days of activities will comprise the seventh annual goose festival sponsored by the Middle River community club this Friday, Saturday and Sunday in Middle River.

Events have been planned for all members of the family, with games, contests, a flea market, parade, senior citizens' white elephant sale, and concessions featured throughout the community during the three-day celebration at the goose capital of Minnesota.

Beginning Friday will be homecoming festivities, including a 3 p.m. football game with the Middle River Skippers taking on the Plummer Cardinals. Following the game, a ham supper, sponsored by the American Legion auxiliary, will be served at the American Legion club in Middle River. Hunters and other visitors are invited that evening to join in dancing and entertainment at the American Legion club and at Meadowbrooke Ballroom.

Early risers Saturday, who wait patiently for the opening of the 1981 waterfowl hunting season at noon, will be treated to a pancake breakfast from 8

McCullough, Hoefer Named To Committee

Dennis McCullough, rural Thief River Falls and Leo D. Hoefer, rural Red Lake Falls, have been appointed to the Farmers Home administration, (FmHA) Pennington county and Red Lake county committees, respectively.

Appointments were announced by Francis J. Koehmstedt, FmHA county supervisor. McCullough and Hoefer are farmers in the area and are active in local community affairs.

Pennington and Red Lake county FmHA committees are each composed of three members, appointed by the FmHA state director for three-year terms. One appointment to each committee expires each year. Committee members must be knowledgeable about the types of farming operations in the area and understand agricultural financing.

Other members of the Pennington county committee include A. Clifford. Arveson, Trail, and Curtis J. Swanson, Thief River Falls. Other members of the Red Lake county committee include Glen Haugen, Red Lake Falls, and Einar Kvasager, Oklee.

Terry Courneya was reelected chairman of the board of trustees for Northwestern hospital association at the reorganizational meeting held Monday evening in the hospital board room.

Roger Reuter was elected vice chairman to succeed Andrew Skaar who did not seek reelection to the board at the hospital's recent annual meeting. Darrell Bakke was elected secretary to succeed Evadell Tangquist and Roy Lee was reelected treasurer. Duane Walton and Mrs. Tangquist were elected to the board's executive committee.

New members Clyde Christensen and Mrs. Frances Stromberg were welcomed to the first meeting of their three-year terms. Mrs. Tangquist, who was reelected at the annual meeting, is beginning her second term.

Also attending the meeting as the hospital's new chief of staff was Dr. E.O. Thorsgard, who succeeds Dr. Jerome Bray. Other officers of the medical staff recently elected were Dr. George Martin, chief of staff elect; and Dr. Ross Taylor, secretary-treasurer, succeeding Dr. Donald Mestery.

Installation of an unload auger and a 60,000 bushel tank makes it possible to load a hopper car in 20 minutes — a job which normally takes one hour, according to Alfred Bareksten, general manager at Farmers Co-op Grain & Seed. "By loading the 24-car units a substantial reduction in freight rates will be noted," he said. Soo Line railroad company is planning on offering unit rates on sunflowers in the near future, he added.

Proposed Budget Reviewed By City

At a special meeting Tuesday night, the Thief River Falls city council requested quotes from local plumbers for extending water service on Dewey avenue from 11th to 10th Street, and reviewed the proposed budget, approveing a 3.2 per cent increase in the levy, and sending the rest of the budget back to department heads for review, in hopes of reducing a $149,326 deficit.

The decision to request quotes rather than require bids on the water main extension was made to save time, allowing for completion of the project before freeze-up. It was explained that bids are not required if project cost ramains under $10,000. Dave Kildahl of Stewart and Walker engineering firm, estimated the cost at $9,730, with an "absolute maximum of $13,000."

Mayor Carlson noted that the property owners to be assessed had been notified of the hearing, and no objections had been raised, so the quotes were requested to be opened at a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, October 6.

Assistant city clerk Roger Delap reviewed the proposed budget summary for 1982 with the council. Some major points in the summary included a deficit of $149,326, resulting primarily from anticipated shortfalls in state revenue projections and local government aids. The loss of tax revenue from Arctic Enterprises was also mentioned. A note was made that for all full time city employees, every one per cent increase in direct salaries would cost approximately $16,300 in 1982.

Projections, based on monthly sales compared to last year, indicated a cutback on revenues from the liquor dispensary. The proposed revenue figure of $1,237,500 was compared to actual revenues for 1980 of $1,283,285. Delap said the proposed income figure was conservative (on the low side).

On the positive side, Delap noted that a return on their insurance premium "could be in the area of $35,000." This would be incorporated into the budget revenue. He also made note of a hearing, set for 7 p.m. October 13, to gather input on how to spend approximately $76,000 in revenue sharing funds available for 1982.

Due to a requirement that the levy figure be adopted prior to October 10, the maximum figure authorized by law and levy limitations of $892,341 was adopted. This represents an increase of $27,341 or 3.2 per cent over the 1981 tax levy.

Considerable discussion was held on where the cuts were going to come from to reduce the deficit. Noting that power

School Board, Teachers Meet

Offers and counter-offers were rejected by negotiating units for both the Thief River Falls school district and the Thief River Falls Education association at a meeting conducted Tuesday evening at the Lincoln high school library.

Agreement was reached on two minor points, according to Supt. Robert Block. Mileage rate for use of personal cars on school district business was set at 24 cents per mile for the 1981-82 and 1982-83 contract. Maximum allowable hours for extra service as department heads at the AVTI were increased from 36 to 55 hours per year.

The board of education offered an increase from) its previous position of $100 per teacher or about four-tenths of a per cent. The offer was rejected by the TRFEA.

The association countered with a proposal that the TRFEA and board continue to negotiate all language items for 30 days and to submit all items left at the end of those 30 days to binding arbitration. The teachers further proposed that fringe benefits be negotiated for 30 days and at the end of that time split the difference as of the September 29 board and TRFEA proposals. The board rejected the proposal

The teachers presented a list of school districts in Region 8AA and suggested that the first five districts setting contracts be used as a basis for the Thief River Falls contract. They proposed that the five districts' contracts be averaged, applied to the local faculty, and the difference between that average and the existing salary schedule be granted as an increase.

Not all of the five districts listed have settled contracts, and the board rejected the suggestion because it would be impossible to compute cost.

A counter proposal was made by the board that all contract items not resolved after 30 days, including the salary package, be submitted to binding arbitration. That suggestion was rejected.

Board proposal was made that all items be submitted to fact-finding or non-binding arbitration, and that was also rejected.

Board and teacher negotiators are scheduled to meet with a mediator on October 8 at 9 a.m. at the Pennington county courthouse in an attempt to reach contract agreement. Mediation was filed for some time ago but a mediator was not available until now, Supt. Block said.

Thief River Falls Education association has filed a notice of intent to strike with the school district, and a 20-day period during which a legal strike may occur began September 25. If a strike does not occur within the 20-day period, another 10-day notice is required before a strike action may be legally taken.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Lori Leskiw-Paul Frazer Marriage Vows Spoken

Lori Leskiw of this city and Paul Frazer of Goodridge exchanged marriage vows on Saturday, September 12, at 2:30 p.m., at St. Bernard's Catholic church, Thief River Falls.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Schuster of this city and Nick Leskiw of Aurora. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Frazer of Goodridge.

Rev. Dave Super officiated at the double ring ceremony. At the organ was Pam Finney, playing "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," for the processional and "Ode to Joy," for the recessional. Judy Dupree sang, "The Wedding Song," during the lighting of the unity candle made by Jane Poole, and "Father, Eternal, We Pray for Your Blessing," after Holy Communion. She also led the congregational singing. Readers were Betty Kezar and Ruth Mangrum. All are friends of the bride.

For the ceremony, two large floor candelabra with yellow candles, wild babies' breath and silk bows in yellow and rust, graced the chancel. On the piano was a wicker basket filled with silk and dried flowers in colors corresponding with those carried by the bridal party. Marking the pews were yellow and rust silk streamers and bows, with wild babies' breath.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by the Schusters. The Frazers also escorted their son to the altar.

For her wedding, the bride selected a white Fabiana knit A-line gown with pearl embroidered silk Venice lace on the bodice and at the princess neckline. Matching lace trimmed the sleeves and complemented the skirt which extended into a chapel-length train. Her pearl edged scalloped veil was held by a cap of silk Venice lace encrusted with seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses, stephanotis and babies' breath accented with yellow and white silk ribbon streamers.

Laurenda Frazer of Goodridge, a sister of the groom, was maid of honor. Other attendants were Vicky Nomeland, a cousin of the bride, and Mrs. Julie Olson, a friend. Their identicial gowns of yellow soft polyester knit were styled with full pleated skirts and deep cape collars of scalloped lace. Satin tie belts encircled the high-rise waistlines. They carried bouquets of yellow roses, copper blossoms, gold mums and babies' breath with yellow and rust silk ribbon streamers.

Tanya Schob, a cousin of the bride, served as flower girl. She was attired in a gown of yellow eyelet with white lace at the neckline and around the hem. A lace belt encircled her waistline. She carried a rust colored basket, filled with flowers matching those carried by the bridesmaids.

The rings were carried by Jason Schuster, a brother of the bride.

The groom's boutonniere was accented with white stephanotis and the ushers' boutonnieres were composed of yellow carnations.

The mother of the bride was attired in a floor-length gown featuring an apricot pleated skirt and a coordinated floral blouson top with raglan sleeves. Forester Check Gives Seminarian Fund A Boost

At the fall conference of the Red River Valley diocesan association of the National Catholic society of Foresters held recently at Gentilly, a check for $635 was presented to the Most Rev. Victor Balke, bishop of the Crookston diocese for the seminarian fund. A matching amount was given by the National Society, according to National President Mrs. Dolores M. Johnson of Chicago, Ill., who was a special guest at the meeting.

In accepting the gift from the Foresters, Bishop Balke stated that this was the second time a purse of $10,000 had been donated to the fund. He stated at the present time there are 37 seminarians training for the priesthood in this diocese. Five new priests will be completing their training in 1986. He also stated that in addition to funds, prayers are also needed to encourage and sustain the seminarians in their future.

Making the presentation was Aldia Prudhomme, president of St. Cecilia's court, 547, of Gentilly.

National President Johnson stated that this was the 90th anniversary of the society. She gave information regarding the change in publishing the society's magazine and the state convention to be held October 11-13 at Grand Rapids.

The meeting began with a 10:00 a.m., Mass with Bishop Balke as celebrant, together with Msgr. Victor Cardin, pastor of St. Peter's Catholic church of Gentilly. A memorial service was held for members who had died during the past year. As each name was read, a candle was lighted, followed by prayer and a moment of silence.

It was noted that this was the 25th anniversary of the association. The first meeting was held at Crookston. The next fall conference will be held in Thief River Falls with the local officers, Caroline Bedard, president; Barbara Holthusen, secretary; and Theresa Vanyo, treasurer, making plans.

Eleven courts were represented at the meeting. Carlson - Sobotka Vows Spoken At St. Hilaire

Wanda Carlson of Sunnyvale, Calif., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Carlson of St. Hilaire, became the bride of David Sobotka, Mountain View, Calif., son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Sobotka of San Carlos, Calif., on Saturday, August 1, at 2:00 p.m., at Calvary Lutheran church in St. Hilaire.

Rev. James Swanson of Cass Lake, former pastor at Calvary, officiated at the double ring ceremony witnessed by approximately 100 relatives and friends. At the organ was Ruth Mosbeck, a friend of the bride. She played Lohengrin's "Bridal March," as the bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her parents. Musical selections, including "Irish Blessing," was a tape recording of St. John's Lutheran church choir, Sunnyvale, Calif.

Forming the chancel setting were candelabra and two arrangements of assorted silk flowers on the altar.

The bride was attired in a white Crepe de Chine floor-length gown which she had made. It was styled in empire fashion and featured a long-sleeved over-blouse of Chantilly lace. A tatted and beaded tiara, made by the bride's mother, held her veil of double netting, edged with lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of white rosebuds, apricot colored carnations, white daisies and babies' breath.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Nancy Carlson of St. Hilaire. She wore an apricot floor-length, A-line gown with short puffy sleeves. Topping the gown was an overblouse of coordinating apricot floral. She carried a bouquet of white, yellow and deep apricot silk roses with an apricot ribbon bow and streamers.

Gary Sobotka of Santa Clara, Calif., attended his brother as best man. The ushers were Ruth Carlson of St. Hilaire and Barry Carlson of Fargo, N.D., sister and brother of the bride. The men of the wedding party wore spice colored Wellington styled tuxedos with white tucked shirts and apricot carnation boutonnieres.

The mother of the bride wore a turquoise street-length dress with bone accessories and a corsage of white rosebuds and carnations. The groom's mother wore a street-length dress of light lavender with a petite floral print. Her accessories were in white, and her corsage matched the one worn by the bride's mother.

Honor guests were Julianne Lambert of Hallock, maternal grandmother of the bride; and Mrs. Sadie Carlson, Thief River Falls, her paternal grandmother.

A reception at the church followed the ceremony. Later the relatives and friends gathered for a picnic supper at the bride's parental farm home. Katie Carlson, St. Hilaire, a sister of the bride, registered the guests and Teresa Theis, Osseo, a cousin of the bride, served the punch.

Highlighting the serving table was a double-tiered wedding cake on a retangular base. The cake was designed like two intertwined rings topped by a miniature apricot colored heart cake enscribed with the names of the bride and groom. The cake was cut and served by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Johnson, godparents of the bride. Mrs. Dorothy Flaherty of Emily, an aunt of the bride, poured the coffee.

For her going away attire, the bride wore a lavender street-length dress with a tucked bodice and a white lace collar.

The bride is a 1976 graduate of Lincoln high school and a 1980 graduate of Moorhead State university; and the groom is a graduate of Cal Poly technical institute of San Luis Obispo, Calif. Both are employed by the National Semi-Conductor corporation at Sunnyvale, Calif. The couple is at home at Sunnyvale. Photo, Janet Carlson, Kettering, Ohio, a sister of the bride.

City Reviews Proposal For 1982 Budget

costs were "up substantially", Mayor Bob Carlson said he didn't see how a rate increase could be avoided. Hiring of employees and salary negotiations were also discussed. Notice was made that a letter received from union negotiators requested 10 items, "and they all cost money," commented Carlson. Alderman Donald Goodrich said he didn't think they should "balance the budget on the backs of the people who work for us."

Asked about possible cuts in his department, parks and recreation director Mike Mongoven commented that if services were cut it would most likely "hurt the neighborhood program", referring to maintenance of four or five outdoor skating rinks and warming houses.

Alderman Ambrose Wysoski suggested that if cuts had to be made they should "let the department heads do the cutting." The proposed budget was sent back to the department heads for review, with the suggestion that they attempt to reduce expenses and the deficit.

In other business, the council approved appointment by Mayor Carlson of Aldermen Donald Goodrich, Milan Borsheim and J.J. Womack to serve as a committee on the parking assessment district.

The meeting was adjourned until Tuesday, October 6.

Before you rent an apartment, there are some steps you can take to protect your rights as a tenant, according to the central Minnesota legal services community legal education program.

(1) Inspect the actual apartment, not a model apartment;

(2) Make a list of things you find wrong in the apartment. Have the landlord sign the list and keep a signed copy for yourself. It will show that the landlord was aware of these existing defects. With this protection, the landlord is and where he or she may be contacted. The law says that the landlord must inform you who is responsible for managing the premises, and must also post a card in a prominent place showing the landlord's or the landlord's agent's name, address, and telephone number. Unless such a card is posted, the landlord may not sue you for eviction or back rent.

Dry Weather In States Pushes Crop Maturity

Light rainfall in Minnesota last week did little to alleviate dry topsoils, but slowed harvest only slightly, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. The dry weather of the last few weeks has helped push late season crops to maturity.

With harvest expected to pick up soon, moisture content still remains on the high side. Most farmers would like a killing frost soon to further reduce moisture content and also to kill weeds before harvest. More areas of the state report dry topsoil, but this is of little significance at this time of the year when dry weather is needed for harvest.

As of Friday, September 25, topsoil moisture is reported at seven per cent very short, 27 per cent short, 59 per cent adequate and seven per cent surplus.

Development of field corn and soybeans made good progress last week despite the cool weather. Field corn is 60 per cent mature which compares to 86 per cent last year and the five-year average of 79 per cent. Silage has been cut on 57 per cent of the acreage, only one point behind last year and seven points behind the five-year average. Field corn condition remains much the same at two per cent poor, 18 per cent fair, 64 per cent good, and 16 per cent excellent.

Soybeans advanced rapidly last week with 96 per cent of the crop now shedding leaves and 55 per cent mature. This compares to the five-year average of 94 per cent and 72 per cent and last year's 91 per cent and 81 per cent. Combining picked up last week and now totals 12 per cent of the crop which compares to seven per cent last year and 17 per cent for a five-year average. Soybean condition has improved at three per cent poor, 22 per cent fair, 65 per cent good and 10 per cent excellent.

Almost all of the sunflower bracts have turned yellow with 79 per cent brown which remains behind last year. Combining has reached 10 per cent, behind last year's 12 per cent and the five-year average of 21 per cent. Flax harvest now totals 92 per cent swathed and 74 per cent combined. This compares to 89 per cent and 73 per cent for the five-year average and last year's 76 per cent and 55 per cent.

Lifting of sugarbeets has been completed on three per cent of the acreage which is the same as last year, but two points behind the five-year average. Full-scale harvesting is expected to be underway throughout the state by the 10th of October.

Digging of potatoes continues to make rapid progress. Harvest has been completed on 68 per cent of the acreage which is well ahead of last year's 47 per cent and the five-year average of 52 per cent. Harvesting of sweet corn for processing is now nearly complete at 95 per cent, four points behind last year and three points behind the five-year average.

Seeding of winter wheat and rye stands at 83 per cent and 86 per cent, respectively, ahead of average. Plowing of small grain and hay stubble has reached 72 per cent, also ahead of average.

FIRST PLEDGE for Saturday's roadside cleaning marathon was obtained by Lori Mackenroth, right, from Grand Knight Bill Fogarty of the Knights of Columbus, who are supervising the marathon locally. Waiting to have Fogarty sign her pledge sheet is Becky Bjerken. Both girls are students at St. Bernard's school, which along with students from Our Saviour's Christian academy and adult volunteers will gather at St. Bernard's Library at 8 a.m. Saturday to organize before starting the cleaning of about 30 miles of roadside ditches. Money raised through the pledges will be donated for the use of private schools. A lunch will be served for participants after the marathon.

1981 Could Be Biggest Crop Year In History

If the figures are correct — and you begin to wonder about them — we could be in for the greatest crop production year in history.

The department of agriculture's annual acreage report shows planted acreage for principal crops as the largest since World War II, and that prospective harvested acreage the largest in nearly a half century, according to Ed Curran of USDA.

That planted acreage figure works out to 365.5 million acres, up from 356.9 million acres, the largest on records since 1944. The prospective harvested acreage is seen at 355.5 million, the largest since 1932.

Corn plantings for all purposes are estimated at 84.7 million acres, up one per cent from both the March intentions and the 1980 total and the largest since 1949.

Sorghum plantings are estimated at 16.1 million acres, up two per cent from last year. Oat acreage is seen at 13.6 million acres, up from 13.4 million acres last year. Barley is estimated at 9.7 million acres, up from 8.2 million acres last year and the highest since 1978.

That adds up to 107.3 million acres of feed grains, the highest since 1977.

All wheat planted is estimated at 88.8 million acres, the highest ever. Durum wheat seedings are seen at 5,840,000 acres, the highest on record. Other spring wheat plantings are seen at 17.2 million acres, down two per cent from last year.

Cotton planted acreage is estimated at 14.2 million acres, down two per cent from last year. Rye acreage for harvest is seen at only 663,000 down from 664,000 last year. But, all food grain acreage for harvest is estimated at 85.1 million acres, the largest on record.

"That means, unless the wather goes dry, we could have the biggest crop year in history. Which, as most farmers know may not be exactly good news," Curran said.
